With a lovely UC freshie chosen as Queen of Arts, UC should be able to come up with several more lovely UC freshies, any one of which might be chosen Miss Phantom Face of '49 at the Hi-Neighbor Hop at Casa Loma tonight. Miss Phantom Face is an artist's conception of what a typical college girl should look like. Judges will decide which girl attending the dance tonight best fits the ideal, and she will receive numerous valuable gifts. ... The classes of 5T2 of UC, Vic, St. Mike's and Trinity decided to dispense with separate year parties this term and have fun together for a change. ... The Hi-Neighbor Hop is the result. ... Tickets at only $1.75 per couple may be procured at the door. No a-t-l card necessary.

Today is UC's busy day of the week, isn't it? Even though you can't go to both "Fantasy of '49" and the Hi-Neighbor Hop tonight (bet you'd like to!), there's only one thing going on this afternoon so you have no decision to make. At four o'clock in the J.C.R., UC is running off horse races especially for all you Woodbine habitues who are longing nostalgically for the track at this time of year. There'll be dancing and refreshments too. All proceeds of this Derby Day will go to I S S.

The UC debate with Skule which was to have been held today at four in the J.C.R. has been postponed until next week. Watch The Varsity for announcements of time and place.

Bet you've never seen anything quite so smart as the UC official blazer, scarlet for women and navy blue for men, both with the "Parem claris lucem dare" crest on the pocket. They're made to measure and delivered to you in three weeks' time. Price is $27.50. If you don't want a blazer, you'll at least want some official token of your college, such as a sweater, a crest or a pin with your year guard. All these will be sold and orders will be taken for blazers every Thursday in the rotunda from 10 'til 2. For those who won't be in the rotunda during those hours there will be a list for signing in the J.C.R.

So many teams signed up for the Portia Debates this year that Nora Beacock, Literary Director, has arranged a special debating afternoon for this Friday in the Women's Union Theatre from two to five. It will be the second round for first year teams and those who are to participate will be notified. Regular Portia Debates will continue every day in Room 4 or 5 at 1:30 except Mondays. Nora has decided to cancel the Monday debates in order that interested girls might hear the series of noon-hour lectures being given on debating by Dr. D. M. Hayne and Prof. G. Bagnani. ... Willa Carroll, Pat Scott, Cynthia Dean and Ginny Fory have helped the literary director immeasurably in arranging the debates.

SEE you here next week and remember—Pass that buck to I S S.

Varsity Victors 20-14 Shamble Sad SAC Cagers

By An Unbiased Observer

One of the greatest basketball aggregations ever gathered together on one court climaxed a successful season yesterday when the unbeaten, untied and uncouth quintet from The Varsity rolled to an easy 20-14 victory over the win-hungry SAC. Sparked by the deadly shooting of Buckets Kennedy, the Newsmen gambolled about with gay abandon, occasionally pausing to drop a shot or two from centre to please the capacity crowd which had lined up for hours to fight for a spot inside the gym of Hart House.

Despite the fact that Hoops Harrison was forced to sit the game out to placate the SAC, he managed to be of service to the newsmen as score keeper. Jumpin' Joe Potts was kept out of the SAC line-up by a hang-nail injury sustained when he pulled his moustache too violently in a practice.

The game was delayed several minutes when SAC Chairman Phil Ashmore pulled out a stethoscope and tested the wildly beating hearts of the SAC'ers. Even though several SAC'ers tried to speed up their heart rate in order to pull out before the inevitable impending defeat, Ashmore's professional ethics won the day and the SAC'ers were waved back onto the court.

Play started off at a furious pace and not more than four minutes had gone by when Frank Moritsugu casually sank a one hander from near centre to give the Newsmen a lead they never relinquished.

With the half time score 9-2 and the withering SAC'ers dropping like flies a subs-committee was hastily set up to draft substitutes from the by-standers. Culled from those just passing through was one Joe Grittani who managed to hoop 6 points for the SAC before it was noticed he knew what the game was all about. The Newsmen magnanimously accepted the SAC apology, but Red Rocket Jones of the Newsies kneed Joe in the excitement the next time he appeared on the floor.

At the end of the contest the Newsmen gallantly carried the SAC'ers to the nearest Blood Bank where a hurried withdrawal was made. Late last night it was reported that with care, rest and plenty of peace and quiet the SAC'ers should be able to see their friends in the next week or so.

Buffalonians Meet Varsity

Hoop fans at Varsity are in for another treat tonight as the first Sports Nite of the year gets under way at Hart House. Two U of Buffalo cage quintets will share the sportlight with their corresponding Toronto counterparts with the senior blue basketeers out to even things with the senior Bisons who hold a 68-42 decision in a game played down Buffalo.

The senior Buffalonians are fresh from a recent victory over Niagara University who are rated a pretty fair squad in the Amerk intercollegiate loop. The intermediates will tangle with their freshman squad in the semi windup encounter. After the games comes that great spectator sport, round dancing till midnight.

This midweek sporting extravaganza is the first since the night last year when the much travelled University of Ecuador hoopsters hit town to engage the Blues. The tickets are only 50 cents per pop which is a small price for an evening of top .notch .b-ball .and dancing.

Changes In Textbook Setup Are Sought in SAC's Brief Sent to Board of Governors

A brief calling for changes in the present textbook set-up on the campus will be forwarded to the Board of Governors, it was learned yesterday. The brief, drawn up by the local NFCUS committee, was approved at last night's meeting of the Students' Administrative Council.

Brief's Recommendations

Recommendations included in the brief ask for "an alteration in the policy of the U of T Press in refusing to sell its published texts to competitors of the Book Store who are retailing these texts at prices below that of the Book Store." The Book Store's current policy, says the brief, is "deplorable and an unfair business practice" and "reflects badly on the good name of the U of T."

The brief recommends a change in the policy of the Book Store "to one of operation on a cost plus maintenance basis". Only in this way would the Book Store be giving maximum service to the student body, the brief adds.

It also calls for the "immediate abolition of the additional mark-up made by the U of T Press Book Store on American text books purchased directly from American publishing houses." The brief points out "there is no justification for this additional mark-up when there is no sales tax or duty on books imported from United States."

Condensation of Report

The brief is a condensation of the larger report submitted to the NFCUS committee by a group of three students, appointed by that committee to investigate the book problem on a local and national scale on November 16, 1948.

The three students, headed by R. Watson, III Victoria, solicited their information through interviews with local book store proprietors. Their material used to throw light on the problem on a national scale was obtained from Professor J. J. Rae of the Department of Chemistry in the University of Toronto. Professor Rae was one of the members of a committee set up by the National Conference of Canadian Universities in May, 1948, to investigate the high cost of texts throughout the country.

NCCU Committee

The committee formed by the NCCU sent questionnaires to 22 university book stores throughout the Dominion.

The report of the Toronto committee is to form the basis of a further investigation into the book problem by the national committee of NFCUS. The report of the full investigation on a national scale is expected to be made by the national NFCUS committee in March.

Informal Talks Replace Services Trinity Chapel

Sunday morning chapel services normally held at 11 a.m. at Trinity College will be discontinued for the next six weeks. Informal talks in the Buttery led by Provost R. S. K. Seeley will replace the usual services, according to a proclamation issued this week.

The experiment at Trinity comes as the result of official recognition near the end of last term of student apathy in the matter of chapel attendance. Though Sunday churchgoing has not been compulsory in the college for some years, students are encouraged to attend services.

Keynote Informality

Provost Seeley's announcement this week noted that early Communion services would be held in the chapel as usual. "With regard to the Chapel Services," the statement reads, "I have sometimes been asked if those who are going skiing can attend in ski clothes. They are most welcome to do so at either of these services." Traditional chapel garb at Trinity includes the black gown for men students, gown and mortar-board for women.

College officials hope to arrange for coffee and toast to be served in the Buttery before the 11 o'clock discussion. Topics for the first four weeks are: "God—so what?", "A Sense of Sin Cramps One's Style", "I Couldn't Care Less", and "Freedom Means Doing What I Like". These are designed to bring to bear the Christian point of view on axioms "widely accepted by modern men".

During the University Christian Mission, "it was discovered that people seem to want more talks of this nature."

College authorities last term examined the results of questionnaires in which students stated their views on the exising chapel services. Questions asked concerned reasons for attendance or non-attendance, music, sermons, and sermon subjects. Topics for Sunday discussions after the first four weeks may be suggested directly by students themselves.

Thriller, Concert, Movies, Dancing Featured Today

The ISS activities for today are varied and extensive. They include concerts, movies and dances. The admission to each activitiy on the campus today is by ISS card or the prices of admission at the door. All the proceeds of the various activities will go to the ISS fund.

Starting off the day's activities, the OT's are presenting a psychological thriller during the noon hour starting at 1 p.m. At the same time the Vic co-ed common room will be opened to lovers of the popular music for dancing and relaxation.

During the day ISS tags for those students unable to give a dollar will be tagged for whatever they can give. The tags, however, will not let the students into the activities around the campus during the rest of the week.

Today's main attractions will be two concerts: one at the Conservatory of Music, and one in Cartwright Hall. The concert at the Concert Hall in the conservatory will utilize talent from both Meds and Music to produce an all classical concert. Vocalists, pianists, violinists, and a flutist will provide the entertainment which comes before the curtain at 8 p.m.

St. Hilda's College will open Cartwright Hall to produce a mixed concert. There will be classical and popular music by vocalists and pianists, all from Trinity. Curtain time is 8 p.m.

Admission to these concerts is free to the purchasers of the ISS blanket tickets. The concert at he Conservatory will charge 25c admission to those who have not obtained a ticket.

Roam-Around Is Climax Nine Faculties Co-Operate

Climaxing ISS week will be a grand roam around dance to be held following the Varsity-Queen's hockey game. The feature attraction of the Valentine Roam Around will be Booby Gimby and his orchestra in the Drill Hall. The use of Gimby's band has been donated by the Robert Simpson Company.

Nine faculties have co-operated to produce this dance. Two bands are playing for the students: Gimby's orchestra in the Drill Hall and Buddy Hill's orchestra in Burwash Hall. In three other places there will be recorded music. These places are J.C.R. in U.C., where an entire evening of Glenn Miller records will be heard, the Occupational and Physio-Therapy Huts, and Brennan Hall, St. Michael's.

The entire proceeds from this dance will be donated to ISS. The admission price is 50 cents a person and refreshments will be sold with these proceeds going to ISS. Most of the refreshments have been donated by the retailers to the ISS committee. The Imperial Tobacco Company have donated cigarettes to ISS for this dance.

Entertainment has been provided for the intermission. It will include acts from the All-Varsity Revue, the U.C. Follies, and the Vic-at-Home. As well as these shows, feature performers, their identity unknown as yet, from the campus will provide entertainment for the dancers.

Resolution Deplores Edict

The Students' Administrative Council last night unanimously passed the following resolution:

"That the SAC of The U. of T. go on record that it views with alarm the recent Caput regulation forbidding the use of certain university buildings for student meetings between the hours of 9 to 1 and 2 to 4. It feels that this regimentation of extra-curricular activities not only makes student participation difficult, but that it also actively encourages student apathy toward matters which are of vital concern both to the students and to the university as a whole."

A copy of the resolution will be sent to President Smith.

Application Deadline For Auxiliary Flight To be Noon Saturday

Saturday noon is the deadline for receiving applications for the RCAF Auxiliary Flight of Toronto, Flt. Lieut M. A. Everard said yesterday. Applicants are to present themselves to the RCAF Orderly Room, 119 St. George Street, up till 5 p.m. Thursday and Friday and up till noon on Saturday.

Men intending to apply must have one, two or more additional years at the university before graduation. Initial strength of the flight will be 100, and members are to hold the new officer rank of Flight Cadet.

The training program will consist of one to three years winter lecture training plus various schemes of summer training for periods up to 16 weeks.

Lectures will commence for the applicants sometime next week, Flt. Lieut. Everard said. The times are to be announced at a later date. "We are hoping for a good response from the students," he said.

Smith Exchange

Varsity Student Views Smith College Life

By DAVE BUTTERS

"Smith is just a stepping stone for Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Dartmouth,

Or any place that I can find a man."

The above words are taken from the Smith song, written for a campus show at Smith College, Massachusetts. They echo the feeling of the Smith undergraduates with regard to the male situation at this famous girls' college.

Says Smith Is Grand

The general feeling of the Junior Exchange Students is that Smith is a grand place. The professors at Smith do everything they can to help the "foreign" students in both academic and extra-curricular activities. If, by any chance, the students from University of Toronto are taking a course which does not fall in with the studies outlined by the Toronto calendar of studies, the Smith faculty finds a professor and the course; and give the required course to the students. This holds true even when only one student needs the course.

When the latest exchange students arrived at Smith College they were taken in hand by seniors and professors and, as Isabel Tanner, exchange student from Vic, says, "We couldn't have found a nicer reception anywhere." The girls are given a thorough education about the workings of American government. Extra lectures in play writing, drama, dancing, etc., are given to provide recreational activities for the exchange students. In addition to the regular 15 hours a week academic work, the girls audit (sit in on the lectures without having to write exams) any lectures that they are interested in.

Year Divided

The academic year at Smith is divided into two semesters with final exams held at the end of each semester. This, according to Isabel, is beneficial because it lets the students get half of the work done and they don't have to worry about September's work in May. They complete a half year's work and then are able to concentrate their attention on the second half without having to spend the time reviewing work done in the first semester.

Use Honor System

The exams are written on the honor system—that is, every student is on her own; no one is in charge; each student acts as her own counsel in admitting misdemeanors. This system works out very well, and the students are their own bosses.

The atmosphere at Smith College is an international one with the exchange students there and the seniors who have spent one of their junior years abroad. Once a week the whole college meets and discuss everything from the educational problems in Korea to the current situation in Palestine. These discussions add to the international atmosphere of the campus and the overall education of the students.

Smith Is Informal

Smith has many activities for the undergraduates in all fields. There is skiing, swimming, boating, canoeing, tennis, golf, dances, and so on, ad infinitum. "It is an experience in itself living in a small, quiet, clean New England town," writes Isabel. Campus life is very informal with the girls wearing blue-jeans to class. The prevention of dish-pan hands brought about by wearing jeans is appreciated by the boys of Yale, Princeton, Dartmouth and Harvard, it is said.

Social life at Smith is far from dull. House-parties, balls, dances, week-ends at the neighboring boys' schools and trips to New York and Boston fill the girls' free week-ends and spare time.

Canada Speaks French

The surprising factor at Smith, according to Isabel, is that a large proportion of the students and inhabitants of the district think French is the predominant language in Canada. They feel they cannot come to Canada unless they are able to speak French.

With all Smith's advantages, the exchange students find they really appreciate the University of Toronto a lot more than they did previous to their leaving for Smith. These girls find they have learned a great deal of the American way of life but still want to return to Toronto. On their return, however, they will be, as Isabel says, "keener than ever."

Tongue-Twister

More than 300 years ago the ancient Bard of Avon wrote: "Grief hath two tongues; and never woman yet
Could rule them both without ten women's wit."

Lately, it seems, Canadian university officials have been likewise happily endowed. But they are evidently also troubled with the difficulty of making both tongues say the same thing. One tongue asserts that the right of free speech must be guarded zealously, in the true liberal tradition, and that universities must be allowed to seek Truth unhampered by restrictions. The other tongue sometimes tells a different tale.

In Vancouver last week the University of British Columbia cancelled morning lectures to enable students to hear an address by the Right Honourable Anthony Eden. One puzzled student, in a letter to the Ubyssey wondered if such a privilege would have been accorded to the Dean of Canterbury.

In London earlier this week, Stanley Ryerson, provincial LPP secretary, was banned from speaking to an economics class at the University of Western Ontario after he had been invited by the class to explain "certain inconsistencies in Marx's theory of values". The acting dean of arts and science was reported to have said that political speakers were not allowed on the campus during normal school hours. Later, when asked if Ryerson could speak during the noon hour, he said "No, not at any time of the day or any time in the future."

The second remark exposes the first regulation for what it really is — a feeble evasion of the issue.

Students on this campus were recently told by the Caput that no outside speaker or student group could hold meetings in University buildings during lecture hours. Apparently officials at this university are also disturbed at the thought of students missing lectures.

But, to judge from the examples at UBC and Western, it seems clear that while one tongue cries weakly for freedom of speech, the other tongue shouts in stentorian tones that there are a dozen reasons why such freedom can't be granted in certain cases.

Sometimes the possession of two tongues seems to result in tongue-twisters. The above-mentioned dean at Western spoke with both tongues at the same time when he refused to allow Ryerson to speak but added that "there would be no curtailment of students' opinion on the campus."

The art of speaking with both tongues may be quite a feat, but it rates little admiration. And, in the case of university officials, it adds little lustre to the mantle of liberalism which our universities profess to throw about themselves.

Aids To Everyday Living

HANDY HELPS FOR LECTURERS

With the recent Caput ruling banning student meetings on the campus during lecture hours, lecturers have the field pretty well to themselves.

This should increase their sense of duty towards the students and make them desire all the more strongly to inspire the undergraduates to think for themselves on the weighty issues involved in most undergraduate courses.

The following suggestions, if taken to heart by the lecturer, will ensure him a place among the select few here at the university who can make their students sit up and think when they lecture.

1. Mumble indistinctly—this is a good means of promoting interest, especially among the keener students in the back few rows who have difficulty hearing even when the lecturer talks in his normal voice.

2. Do not learn how to adjust the loudspeaker system—if the lecture is delivered over a loudspeaker, the students will be inclined to sit back and be droned to sleep by it. By lacking the ability to adjust the thing, lecturers have an excuse for lecturing in a normal voice which carries to only half the class and keeps the other half on their toes trying to find out what is happening.

3. Lecture in a room too small to hold the whole class—When the word goes around that the classroom won't hold all the class, everyone will make a special effort to be there.

4. Keep the room temperature at about 89-90 degrees—Cold, shivering students cannot think clearly about their studies.

5. Do NOT organize your notes—this is one of the most fallacious beliefs of lecturers. Planned notes only lull the student into a sense of false security. Keep them guessing as to what is coming next. An especially good trick is to tell what you were talking about only when the lecture is all over and it is too late for the students to take intelligent notes. (Do this

James Thurber, in his report entitled Soapland, has done a noble and enduring service to radio. As the reader can guess, Soapland deals with that plague on the ears of humanity known as the soap opera. Despite the concerted attacks of psychologists, educators and other outraged parties the soap opera continues in a lather of great success. In Thurber's report an eminent North American psychiatrist is quoted as saying that the soap opera furnishes the same release for the emotionally distorted that is supplied to those who drool at the prospect of a lynching bee, or derive stimulation from the more morbid details of the salacious scandals in the daily press. If this is true, we shudder to think of the consequences should the soap operas suddenly leave the air.

Possible Ban On Communists At Western

London, Feb. 9—(CUP)—Plans to bar communist speakers from the University of Western Ontario campus are being considered by the university's administration, it was learned here yesterday.

University Vice-President F. Landon denied reports that the university senate had banned communist speakers from the campus, but added that a ban was being contemplated.

Senate Not Authorized

"The senate hasn't the authority to bar anyone from the campus" he said. "Such a ruling would have to be made by the administration."

The announcement came after The Gazette, student newspaper at the university, had reported that "action was taken last Friday by the senate to prevent Stanley Ryerson, L.P.P. provincial secretary, from addressing 4th year economics students."

University President G. E. Hall said a "university statement"-would be issued Thursday.

According to The Gazette, the 4th year economics class had invited Ryerson to address the class to explain "certain inconsistencies in Marx's theory of values."

Political Speakers Not Allowed

Dean Allen, acting dean of arts and science is reported to have told the class that political speakers were not allowed on the campus during normal school hours. When asked if Ryerson could speak during the noon-hour period, Dr. Allen is reported to have said "No, not at any time of the day or any time in the future."

Thousands of university students are among the ten million refugees in India who live in refugee camps such as this. To help alleviate the desperate living conditions of uprooted students, the ISS of Canada will spend $5,500 worth of building materials for a student hostel at the University of Bombay where the situation is said to be acute.

School Night Debut Friday Features Machines, Chorus

With all the excitement practically dead from the Chariot Race the Engineers now come out with their traditional production. Skule Nite (A Rank Production) will make its debut at Hart House this Friday, Feb. 11. It will be presented again the following Friday and two more shows will be run on Thursday, Feb. 17.

Along with a stage show, Skule Nite includes a dance that will take place in every corner of Hart House. Both the Upper and Lower Gyms will contain orchestras to supply the music for the dancers and the East Common Room and the Debates Room will also be converted to dance floors and each room will include a band.

The proceeds from the two shows that will be presented on Thursday, Feb. 11, will be donated to the ISS campaign. The tickets will only be sold to Schoolmen but in the event all tickets are not sold, they will be made available to the rest of the faculties.

Three shows will be presented on each of the Friday nights.

The show itself was drafted out in April, 1948, and was smoothed out early in January. The call for talent met with a great response and the School Night committee had much to choose from.

The show this year will be entirely different from the shows of the past. Such matters as lighting, sound, and unusual mechanical devices which fall directly into the Engineers work, are stressed in the show.

Pat Suddick, chairman of the committee, remarks, "It is a fast moving show and if you are not there on time it will be like walking into a moving picture half way through." He also advises that all students who have tickets should get there early to avoid disappointment.

What cannot be excluded from Skule Nite is a chorus line. Before women were enrolled in SPS in relatively large numbers, the chorus line consisted of the burliest men of the School Rugby team. Now with Engineerettes, under the guidance of Louise Burns, Skule Nite chorus line will be a specialty.

Producer Bill Walker and Director Garth McDowell, when found behind a cup of coffee in a restaurant on Harbord Street, commented that, "We hope that this will be a Skule Nite to remember."

CCF Proposes Student Aid At Final Mock Parliament

Two bills, one on provincial assistance to college students, and the other on alcoholic beverages, will be presented by the CCF Government in this year's final Mock Parliament in UC Junior Common Room today to 4 p.m. The Liberal Club will form the official opposition.

The first bill on University and College fees in Ontario would empower the Lt.-Governor-in-Council to pay student's fees on a percentage basis according to the student's standing in the preceding academic year.

The second bill empowers the Lt. Governor-in-Council to purchase "plants engaged in the production of alcoholic beverages and situate in the province of Ontario" and to use the profits from operation of these plants for educational purposes.

"The bill on provincial assistance for fees is an excellent one but it doesn't go far enough," declared David Stanley, leader of the opposition, yesterday. "As for the second bill, we agree that liquor manufacture as presently conducted tends to increase consumption, but we do not feel that provincialization of control is the proper way of dealing with the problem."

Purpose of the second bill is to counteract direct and indirect persuasion by manufacturers to consume greater quantities of beverages, CCF officials explained.

Queen's to Play Host To Toronto Debaters

Chuck Tompkins, IV St. Mike's, and Marg Kearns, III Loretto, will debate today at Queen's University, upholding the negative side of the resolution "That political opinions of professors are their own concern". The team has been sent by the University of Toronto Debating Union.

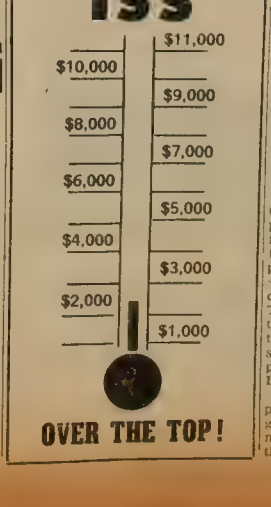
SAC At A Glance

The Students' Administrative Council last night:

Passed a resolution deploring the recent Caput regulation which forbids the use of university buildings for student meetings during lecture hours.

Assumed financial responsibility for damage done to a blackboard in the O. T. building by members of the All-Varsity Revue.

Rejected a suggestion that the SAC be held financially responsible for damage done in the Medical Building as a result of the melee following the Chariot race. A letter from the Superintendent's office had indicated a ill for damages would be sent to the SAC.



Heard that a delegation of two students would accompany E. A. Macdonald and the Warden and Comptroller of Hart House to the University of Wisconsin student union, reputed to be the finest in the United States.

After lengthy discussion, Council voted to assume financial responsibility for any losses incurred by the Inter-cultural Affairs Committee in its program during Brotherhood week.

After heated discussion, turned down a Finance Commissioner recommendation for . $100 grant for an All-Varsity Revue party.

Moved a vote of thanks to the NFCUS committee and The Varsity for their comprehensive investigation of the textbook program.

Heard Student Service Commissioner Jane Hazard announce plans to open a book exchange in the Torontonensis office in the COTC building. It is expected to be opened before the end of the term.

World Developing Common Law Now Says Chief Justice

The Nurenburg war criminal trials show the evolution of the common law of the world toward an end that would make it a crime to start an aggressive war, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Ontario, J. C. McRuer, stated last night at a meeting of the Political Science Club.

Speaking on the judicial branch of government, Justice McRuer said the view that the Nurenburg trials show the evolution of a world common law was deplored in European judicial circles but was widely accepted on this continent

Tracing the course of the development of the judicial branch of the government from ancient times to the present, Justice McRuer contrasted the freedom now enjoyed by the judiciary with the restraint exercised in the times of the Stuarts and the Tudors. "The kings used to demand that their judges be obedient rather than skillful," he said. Now the judges reach their decisions outside the influence of the Crown, he added

Commenting further on the independence of the judiciary in Canada, Justice McRuer said the courts in Canada are entirely free of political influence. "The judge is completely independent of any pressure from political groups," he said. "The judge is accountable only for his conduct. Commons has the power to set aside any decision the judge may make, but it cannot direct his judgment. I assure you that a vigorous public opinion in Canada maintains this policy," he added.

"The science of law transcends the emotional appeal of politics," he continued. "Submission to the straight jacket of political theory is not and will not be tolerated."

Justice McRuer told of a German judge who stated in 1936 that the judicial branch of government owed a higher allegiance to the state than it did to the administration of justice. "That is a doctrine that is alienable to our judicial flavor," he commented.

"Law is incompatible with absolute power," he said. "Laws may be concerned with absolute power but not law. Laws are part of the tyrant's government, but Law, as distinguished from laws, calls for judges in its administration."

Discuss Careers Research Fields At Biology Talk

Member of the Biology Club were given an insight into what the future holds for them in the way of graduate studies, careers, and summer employment at a meeting last night in Cartwright Hall

Prof. Dymond, head of the department of biology, reminded the students that many positions in this field, especially research work, require training beyond a B.A. degree. The object of the university in training students for a Ph.D. degree, he said, is to produce good biologists, not just specialists in a limited field.

Dr. Harold Good, of the botany department, outlined the careers open to botany graduates, according to surveys made of American and Canadian graduates in the last 10 years. The largest number of these positions are in the fields of teaching and governmental research, Dr. Good pointed out. He emphasized the advantage of a higher degree as a qualification for these jobs.

Mr. David Fowle, of the Department of Lands and Forests, spoke on careers in zoology. Among these are jobs in entomology, fisheries and wild life, and also in teaching.

Miss Dorothy Brown, a graduate in botany, told of the prospects for summer employment in her field. Many of these are field work, gathering materials for labs located in each province. An interesting prospect is the expedition which the dominion government is sending to the Arctic this summer. Applications for this expedition are still being received in Ottawa, said Miss Brown.

Rural Life Trains Youth In Citizenship — Dr. Smith

"Citizenship is not merely a bundle of rights; it is also a sheaf of duties," President Sidney Smith told a meeting of the Ontario Crop Improvement Association last night in the King Edward Hotel. He paid tribute to the rural homes of Canada as training grounds for the inculcation of attitudes of sharing and assuming responsibility, attitudes necessary to good citizenship.

"The farm youth learns that there are no short cuts to success. He must deal daily with the realities of life," Dr. Smith said.

Citizenship is best learned by doing, said Dr. Smith. "We do not in Canada succeed—sometimes we do not try—in making our young people feel that they are needed and that they belong to Canada," he continued.

Quoted Figures

Dr. Smith, as chairman of the Canadian Youth Commission, was prepared to quote figures gathered from youth surveys which showed the opinions and advice of young people of Canada were neglected in solving problems ranging from the domestic to the national sphere. The young people of Canada felt this keenly, Dr. Smith said. That they were capable of accepting responsibility, was attested by the part they played in the World War II, he said.

"Throughout history, the rural population has replenished in every generation, the cities. The cities need the keen and fresh intellects, the cool nerves and the resolute wills of farm youth. It is not only the city that needs the strength of the soil; the nation as a whole needs that strength," Dr. Smith concluded.

ISS Disappointed; Contributions Lag

Warren Goldering, local I.S.S. chairman, announced yesterday that $2,300 raised in the relief campaign so far was disappointingly short of expectation. "We fully realize what it means for a student to contribute one dollar," commented Goldering, "however, we feel that the sacrifice is not too great, when we consider the cause for which the money is going. Thousands of students throughout Europe and Asia are dependent upon this money to aid them in their education."

Goldering also pointed out that a round of entertainment was being provided for those who contributed a dollar; the idea being to make it as attractive as possible for the students to contribute a dollar. For those students who are not in the habit of carrying large denominations on their person, there will be a tag day on Friday, when smaller contributions will be accepted. The I.S.S. chairman expressed the hope that more students will get behind the campaign and shove it over the top.

To Tell the Truth

Whether future historians of the Canadian drama will point to last Monday night as a date marking a new era in the theatre or merely as a premature but insignificant irrelevancy is a question which must be bothering those who attended the opening of Morley Callaghan's "To Tell The Truth" in the Royal Alexandra Theatre. If the size of the audience were to be used as a criterion, one might be forced to conclude that Mr. Moore, his New Play Society cast, and those dramatists who would wish to see a permanent professional company established in Toronto, have a long time to wait before they can appeal to Toronto theatre-goers for sustenance.

Except for one or two changes in the cast and some judicious editing, the play was substantially the same as that presented earlier in the year at the Museum theatre. As soon as the curtain went up, however, one overwhelming impression was gained. Here was a stage fit for players of the quality of this excellent group to appear on. The resemblance of the Museum stage to a shoe-box peepshow is all too apparent by comparison with the latitude given to set-designers, actors and director in the Alec.

Mr. Callaghan's weakness as a playwright was still manifest in spite of the great improvement in the first scene of Act I. The second scene could have been thrown out entirely without danger to the unity of the piece. This would be a considerable help in bridging the gap between the introduction of theme and characters and the resolution of the dramatic conflict.

The play's chief handicap is the author's failure to distinguish between the crisis in the theme and the actual climax in the action of the play. If George's sudden change from romantic dreaming to laudable idealism when he gets his big lie off his chest could have come somewhere in the first act, the episodic character of three-quarters of the play could have been avoided and room made for the dramatic conflict between truth and cynicism. Then the physical struggle between George and Taylor would have provided exciting drama with the climax coming right where the author had it, in the final scene.

N.F.C.U.S. REPORTS

The Editor,
The Varsity

As chairman of the local N.F.C.U.S. committee investigating the costs of text books to university students, I would like to correct an erroneous impression given in Wils Harrison's article of February 8. The national survey mentioned was not carried out by our local N. F. C. U S. group, but by a committee appointed at the 1948 National Conference of Canadian Universities. Professor J. J. Rae, of the Department of Chemistry in chairman of that committee. N. F.-C. U. S. owes many thanks to Professor Rae and his committee for their cooperation and in putting their material on this matter at our disposal.

Yours sincerely,

SCORES ENGINEERING TEXT BOOK

The Editor, The Varsity:

I feel that some light should be thrown on the question of Mueller's Introduction ot Electrical Engineering. This book seems to have made quite an impression on your feature writer Wils Harrison, but it had no such affect on me. The text now in use is Ward's Introduction to Electrical Engineering published by Prentice-Hall Inc. of New York. This text is by far superior to Mueller's text in that it adequately covers the course. Those who used the Mueller text last year said that it was of little use to them. Therefore, I feel the change was justified. The only regrettable thing is that the decision to use this text was made after the calendar was printed.

Stan Boyes, I Mech. Eng.

Ed's. Note: Harrison was not debating the relative merits of the Mueller text. He was using it as an illustration of the point, where a text was known to be of no use and yet still listed in the calendar.

Annual Bob Under Fire 'Exclude Women' Is Cry Vic Students Undecided

The annual Vic Bob came in for heated discussion at the Monday night session of the VCU Assembly. Debate centred about the function of the Bob "as symbolic of the end of Freshmen initiation by Sophs," rather than the college show it has become in recent years.

Suggestions made were (1) the Bob should be held on the Vic campus, (2) a freshman Apple Battle to be held on the afternoon of the Bob in Little Vic, (3) no women to be admitted at the Bob show, and (4) keep Bob practises as they are now.

Freshman ties should be replaced by beanies or hats, according to a further suggestion.

Objecting to the "Men Only" suggestion concerning the Bob show, Pat Mills, social directress, declared "the Bob should include women to disprove the argument that with women men are unable to give vent to their spontaneous energy."

Because of the late hour, the assembly adjourned to continue at a further session on Tuesday, Feb. 15.

Montrealers Lead Scoring Rampage

Those Flying Frenchmen, the University of Montreal Carabins, hold down the first four positions to dominate the Senior Intercollegiate scoring race.

Centreman Georges Emblem tallied twice and assisted three times to raise his league-leading total to 19 points. Emblem's teammate, Andre Charest, picked up five assists to remain one point behind him.

Gregoire Giguere and Roger Pinard of the Carabins follow with 15 and 14 points respectively.

Tops for Varsity is Left-Winger Bill Spence, who rapped two goals against Montreal for a 13-point total. Tied with him is Carabin Raymond Flynn who registered his first goal of the season against Queen's last Saturday.

Bob Henry of the Blues was held scoreless Friday night and dropped from third to a seventh-place tie. His 12-point total is equalled by Don Murray, Queen's leading scorer, and Denis Day of the Carabins.

Leading sniper is McGill's Reggie Sinclair with nine goals to his credit. Flynn added two assists over the week-end to lead this division with 12.

Absent Jack Gelineau of the Redmen still leads the goalies. Varsity's Paul Hutzulak leads Jean Guy Rainville of the Carabins by a narrow margin for second place.

Three Varsity Students Featured in Double Bill

The New Play Society, presenting the double-bill of "Oedipus the King" and "The Critic" in the Museum Theatre, Friday, Feb. 11, will feature three students who are well known for their work in the theatre.

"The Critic" will have, as "Mr. Puff", Michael Ney, who has appeared in many performances of the N w Play Society and the Hart House Theatre. Ney recently returned from the professional stage in England and is now on a brief visit home. He was also featured as Mercutio in the Hart House production of "Romeo and Juliet" and had the lead role in the Royal Conservatory opera "Rosalinda".

Also featured in the New Play Society program Friday night will be Kay Hawtrey and John Beckwith both performers in last year's Hart House rendition of "Pride and Prejudice".

COMING EVENTS

ISS & Trinity Arts & Letters

Friday at 4.00 p.m. in the Trinity College Board Room, Miss Ruth Hintzen, University of Amsterdam, and Mr. Ed Cosford will lead a panel discussion on the topic of "European University Life."

CAN'T STOP 'A' NIGHT GANG

By JOHN KENNEDY

"Who's got two for Athletic Night this Saturday?" You have? Then burn them. I'll give you a brief memo on exactly what will transpire. First of all you rush like crazy to get down to Hart House by 6.30 only to have a blizzard blow up to slow you down. Consequently you arrive at about 8 p.m., which is starting time this week anyway, but the place is already full.

Pool Room First

Plunging you way down the pungent corridor with your best girl you are carried along by the enthusiastic throng into the pool room. Of course water is something which you would rather not contemplate, but you're there so there you will have to stay. The pool athletes are the intercollegiate intermediates, composed of Western, Varsity, OAC, and McMaster. Of course you can't see much of the meet but what you can is very exciting. The first laugh of the evening comes when your ever lovin' sweet patootie gets scared by the starter's gun and takes a prat-fall right into the deep end. It didn't show though, because she was all wet already.

To Senior Boxing Finals

Fighting your way into the big gym you are able to get a glimpse of the senior interfaculty boxing finals. If you're lucky and have a really sports conscious dolly she'll probably let you take in the whole card. Such celebrities as Hank (Tiger) Henshall, and light-weight Tony Canzano will be on display. These bouts beat the Deacon's shows from as far as here to the Gardens.

While all this is going on the squirm finals will be under way in the upper gym. So you decide to leave the boxing show and give the wrestlers a break.

Do you calmly and with all your gentlemanly poise stroll from the large gym? Not on your life.

Onward Again

You carefully take your friend's hot little hand and run a tandem back over all the nice people's shiny shoes and struggle onwards and upwards.

Standing on tippy toe (he's a small friend you met on the way upstairs) you watch the thrilling events and give a throw by throw account to your presumably shorter gal. She becomes so ecstatic over all the lovely boys that you decide to withdraw to the games room and beat the living daylights out of her in a ping-pong tussle. But make sure you pick a date that doesn't know the difference between a ping and a pong, or your ego may be thrown for a fall.

The Piece de Resistance

An added attraction for every red blooded young Canadian boy will be the regular pushing contest in the big gym. This is considered by most of the athletic supporters to be the piece de resistance of the evening. It seems that the lights go down and a band (or a reasonably facsimile thereof) starts to play. Then the game commences. Any number can play, and usually do. The effect usually given is that it is sort of free for all affair with the best men generally winning.

Best of All

But the most fun of all comes after the band plays the National Anthem. Oh boy! You turn your girl in the direction of the Great Hall and gently push her into the ensuing maelstrom which is swirling its way to the ladies' cloakroom. Then you, with a zillion other eager young males start wending your weary way down the crowded stairs in search of the gent's powder room.

Dressed warmly, you are prepared to venture out into the cold night, but is your dolly? No indeed! She's lost in the shuffle in the sweltering upper corridor so now begins the treasure hunt with the prize being a companion for the long red rocket ride home. So finally we leave the hallowed halls of Hart House approximately four hours and eighteen minutes after our arrival (par for the course is four hours flat) and line up for tickets for next week.

VARSITY SPORTS

BLUES DROP BUFFALO

4th Quarter Burst Edges U of B 55-46

By HANK WESTCOTT

Smiling Ed Brennan fired three quick baskets with less than four minutes to play to give Varsity a lead that they never relinquished as the Blues drove to a 55-46 triumph over University of Buffalo in Hart House last night.

It was the first victory for Varsity over an American quintet in nine tries and avenged a 68-42 loss to the same club in their last meeting in Buffalo before Christmas.

Blues Take Lead

Trailing by from three to five points through most of the game the Blues brought the house down at Sport Night as they forged into the lead. Two more baskets by Glen Pettinger and one by Johnny McManus salted the game away for the Blues despite the frantic efforts of the Buffalos.

Boys Due For This

"It was a victory of persistence, condition, and some pretty darn good basketball," grinned coach Bob Masterson after the game as he was surrounded by well-wishers. "The boys were just about due for something like this."

That was just what it was at that. Masterson used but eight men in the contest, and none of them seemed fagged at the end. Glen Pettinger played the whole game and emerged as the top scorer in the game with 19 points. His backchecking, along with that of Smiling Ed Brennan held the high scoring Americans at bay all night.

Bisons Sharpshooters

The Buffalos broke into an early lead in the game with a sharpshooting display that had the Blues momentarily on the ropes. Realizing that the visitors' shooting was deadly, the Blues defensive corps went into action and stopped Buffalo from shooting. It was an eminently successful manoeuvre.

Stockman Sparkplug

Bill Stockman saved the flagging Varsity spirit earlier in the game when they were trailing by ten points. Stockman flipped a fast four, and brought the Blues back to life with his peppery playing. He scored six points for his night's work.

Ed Brennan, who actually smiled once near the end as the Blues were leading, picked up 12 points and played most of the game.

Doug Tyndall and Johnny McManus each swooshed eight, and Gray and LaChance one apiece to complete the Varsity scoring.

Line-ups:
Buffalo—Edwin Muto, Frank Nappo 3, Robert Eidridge 3, Benny Constantino, Leonard Serfustini 4, Louis Stevens, Theodore Moore, Lawrence Miller 17, William Needham 4, Jack Chalmers 10, Anthony Corral 2, Llewelyn Gushue, Jack Reid 3, Bucky Collarusso, Paul Brady.
Toronto—Bill Stockman 6, Doug Tyndall 8, Nick Volpe, Jack Gray 1, Bill LaChance 1, Glen Pettinger 19, John McManus 8, Wally Zeaton, Ed Brennan 12.

Blue and White Import Toreador For Puck Dance

The Blue and White Society is continuing with its hockey program this week when Queen's Golden Gaels are the visitors at Varsity Arena. The dance this week will be run by the I. S. S. and the three star awards will be made at the C. O. T. C. Hall, where Bobby Gimby and his orchestra will entertain.

Mr. Joe Zeigler, newly appointed general manager of the Toronto Maple Leafs Baseball Club will be the guest of the Blue and White and will pick the three stars. Mr. Zeigler is somewhat of a hockey fan as well as heading the ball club.

As a result of last week's campaign a marked improvement in the smoking situation was noticed. This week a jazz band is to be present to entertain between periods. At great expense to the Blue and White Society, a toreador and 973 pounds of bull have been imported from sunny Spain to demonstrate their wares before the hockey fans. As an added attraction both the bull and toreador will wear skates.

Blue and White souvenir pennants will again be on sale at the game Friday.

Gals Hockey Vs. McGill Friday

The women's All-Varsity hockey team play their first game on Friday when they ice against the McGill quintet at 3.00 p.m. in Varsity Arena.

The game is open to everybody, no tickets, no money, no ATL, no nothing needed to get in. Because no seats are reserved, enthusiasts should get there early if they hope to snag half decent seats.

This is the one and only game the Blue Coeds will play on Toronto ice for next week they meet Queen's in Kingston. The only other female hockey team is that sported by MacDonald College in Montreal who will tangle with Queen's after Varsity has tangled them up.

The All-Varsity lineup is, naturally, an all-star star-studded affair. The top intramural scorers—Ferne Watson, PHE, Alison Jeffries, Vic, Irene Hain, Meds, and Helen Ferguson, U C,—will be there to exhibit their razzle-dazzle play and show hockey 'as she is played.' Filling the net will be Vic's own Jean Rose who backed up the Red and Gold aggregation who went to Queen's last year.

Don't forget. The show studded with thrills, spills and girls is Friday at three.

Seconds Clash With Waterloo In Return Tilt

The intermediate hockey club play hosts at 7.00 tonight to Waterloo College, in a return exhibition match. Earlier in the season the Blues beat the Waterloos in their own camp by a 9-0 score. In view of this fact the seconds should have little trouble in pulling a repeat victory.

However the game should be a good practice session for the team in preparation for their all-important future home games with OAC and McMaster. The team was very tired from their long bus trip to Hamilton for their first away game and consequently blew the duke. Playing much better hockey in Guelph Monday night the boys fought back from a one goal deficit to beat the toughest team in the group by a 6-5 score.

With goalie Jack Foote getting more confidence and skill every time uot and the defence rocking the attacking forwards without reck for their own constitutions, the team should be able to roll over Waterloo and take the rest of their league games. Game time tonight is at 7 p.m.

Wardop Leads Hockey Scoring

Jerry Wardrop of the high-scoring Trinity A squad scored once in Trinity's 10-2 rout of SPS II to maintain his position atop the intramural hockey heap.

Jay Watt of Knox kept pace with Wardrop by adding a goal as Knox beat Emmanuel 7-1. Watt's nine goals are only exceeded by Wardrop's 11.

Tom Crerar of Trinity A and Clark of Forestry B now have eight goals to their credit, tying Dave Harley of Trinity B for third place. Harley failed to score as his team beat St. Mike's B 6-5, but he starred with four assists.

SCORERS FOLLOW:

Wardrop, Trin A	11
Watt, Knox	9
Leishman, Trin A	8
Harley, Trin B	8
Clark, For B	8
Crerar, Trin A	7
Putnam, Knox	7

Blue Hoopla-ettes Slip by McMaster

Tuesday night the women's intercollegiate basketball team edged out McMaster 20-19. McMaster had a definite edge up to the last three minutes of the game when Varsity sank four shots to win by one point.

Gwen Smith was top scorer with ten points. Six points were copped by Betty Fitzgerald and Rosanna Kelly made four. The whole team played well together and should offer keen competition to the other colleges in the intercollegiate meet in Hart House at the end of this month.

McMaster will play a return game here on Athletic Night, Feb. 19, at 7.15 in Hart House. They will be playing at a disadvantage then because they are used to a much larger floor and find smaller ones difficult to cope with.

Yank Cagers Stop Varsity

By BRUCE MACDONALD

Despite greatly improved form and a scoring spree during the third quarter, the Intermediate basketball Blues were downed 45-44 by the University of Buffalo Freshmen at the Sports Night in Hart House last night.

The Blues really turned on the steam in the second half to come back from behind a 10 point deficit at half time. By the end of the third quarter, the score was 33-35 in the Blues favor. Tony Adams gained the lion's share of Varsity's points with 19.

As play rolled into the final stanza, Buffalo began to fight back, and it developed into 10 minutes of thrilling basketball. With only two minutes of play remaining, the score was tied 42-42. A basket for Varsity, and two successful free throws for Buffalo evened things up once again.

Ralph Harbeck of Buffalo sank the deciding point with less than thirty seconds remaining in the game. The Intermediates had two shots in the dying seconds of play which could have salted things away, but the fates seemed to be with the Buffalo Freshmen.

Lineups

Buffalo: Johnt 7, Gicewicz 10, Johnstone 2, Scoffidi, Hastas, Pryor, Legumsky 7, Cromwell 4, Harbeck 6, Kuhn 8, Petroski 1.

Varsity: Furlong, Wigle 3, Andrews 4, Cole, Adams 19, Luck, MacKenzie 1, Stevenson 2, Maher 13, Henderson 2.

Geary, Petkoff, Toy, All Winners In Fights

The senior interfaculty boxing tourney got under way last night at Hart House with three bouts being contested. Two of the winners advance right into the finals at Athletic Night Saturday while the other victor has a semi-final tomorrow. Geary, Petkoff, and Toy all won their bouts.

The first fight on the card was at the 140 pound level, M. E. Wright of Trinity meeting D. V. Geary of SPS. It was a rather slow bout with Geary finally being awarded the decision largely due to his inspired showing in the third round when he caught up with Wright and drew blood with a solid left hook to the nose of Wright. Geary appeared to have better conditioning in the last round and landed several looping rights and lefts that hurt Wright.

Petkoff Beats Webb

The Pete Webb—Pete Petkoff joust started very slowly as both men were content to just feel each other out. Webb was far taller than his rival from Ajax but Petkoff continually threw rights and followed with a rush inside Webb's long arms. Petkoff cinched the decision in the fourth and last round with more bull-like rushes and savage round-house rights that occasionally landed. Webb showed that he is well able to take punches as he tried desperately to gain points in the last round.

Toy edges Wells

Another 155 pound fixture was the fight between S. Toy of SPS and H. D. Wells of U. C. It was Toy all the way as he stuck his long left into Wells' face practically at will. Red Wells showed best in the last round as he began to get inside Toy's guard and landed quite a few hard rights to the midsection of his taller opponent.

To-morrow at the same time 5 p.m. and place Toy will meet Petkoff along with four other thrilling bouts.

One interesting tussle should be the one between Walter Bolton (Ajax) and J. B. McIlraith (Meds). Last time Walter showed here was in the novice tourney. He won his first bout with such savage abandon that the officials decided it would be his last as far as novice bouts were concerned.

Wrestling will also come in for a play to-morrow as the senior interfaculty competition starts. Its finals will also be run off at Athletic Night.

UWO Red Ban Called Insult By Students

London, Feb. 10—(CUP) — Student indignation is running high on the campus of the University of Western Ontario over a senate ruling which bars communist speakers. Students consider it an "insult to our intelligence."

The action was taken to prevent Stanley Ryerson, secretary of the Labor Progressive Party, from addressing fourth year economic students.

Gazette Defends Liberty

In an editorial, The Gazette, student newspaper, declared: "As students seeking the truth, we are confounded now that both sides of the question are to be denied us. The University's motto, 'Veritas et Utilitas,' is nothing more than mockery if the Senate's decision is to stand as law."

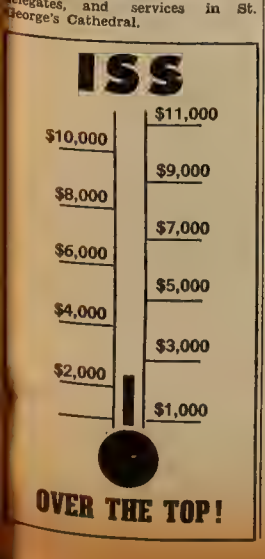
Referring to the removal of CCF club posters from the halls as indicating the existence of a "politically immature personality," the Gazette asked, "Would it be impudent to suggest that perhaps the Senate is tarred with the same brush, the hairs of which come from the monkey who can see no evil?"

UWO Senate Censured

The Student Council at Western sent a letter Wednesday to the President, G. E .Hall, censuring the alleged action of the Senate barring a known Communist, Stanley Ryerson, from speaking to students at an Economics class.

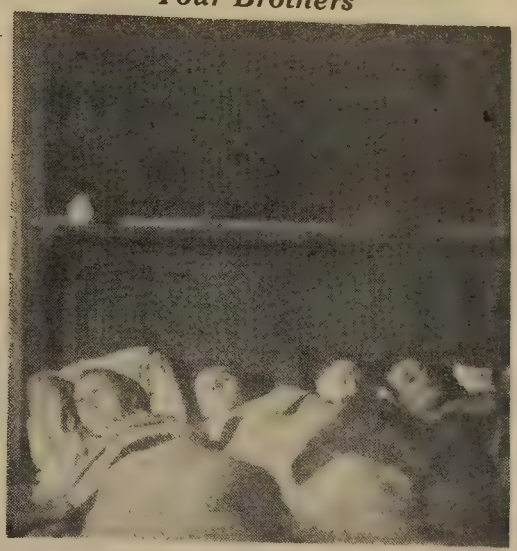
The letter asks the Senate to "reconsider its decision and that a special meeting be called early next week at which the University Student Council be represented." So far President Hall has refused to comment and has not yet issued any statement.

LPP Banned At McGill



Meanwhile at McGill the campus LPP club has been denied the use of McGill Union building for a period of five months. The ban came as a result of the LPP club in selling Tribunes in the Union despite rigid Union rules and a warning published in the McGill Daily.

The Students' Executive Council have temporarily suspended the constitution of the LPP club pending an investigation of their alleged misdemeanor.



Canterbury Clubs Hold Kingston Conference

Ten or more Toronto students are scheduled to leave today to attend the Kingston conference of the Canterbury Clubs of various Canadian universities. During the weekend session, the guest speaker will be Hon. Russell T. Kelley, Minister of Health for Ontario.

Activities from Friday to Sunday night will include Communion services, discussions led by Toronto, McMaster, Western and O.A.C. delegates, and services in St. George's Cathedral.

Dr. Kaplan Lectures Hillel On Judaism, A Civilization

The third lecture of the Hillel major lecture series for this year was given Wednesday night at the museum theatre by Professor Mordecai Kaplan. A capacity audience heard Dr. Kaplan present his thesis, "Judaism as a Dynamic Civilization."

"Judaism is much more than a Jewish religion," he said, "it denotes the life of a people rooted in a land—a literature, language, mores, folkways". Judaism is a dynamic civilization, an old civilization that has evolved through several distinct stages, and will continue to evolve to keep pace with changing circumstances. He said that all phases of life are given purpose through a religion. "Without religion they have no unity or historic purpose".

Evolution of Judaism

To illustrate the dynamic significance of Judaism, Dr. Kaplan described four distinct periods in this evolution.

From 3,200 to 2,500 years ago, Judaism expressed itself in a confederated kingdom—in what he called the monarchical period. The culture centred around the priest and the prophet. It was in this period that the concept of God was defined.

The Ecclesiastical period came next, from 2,500 to 1,900 years ago. The main authority was the high priest. The culture centred around the pentateuch, the priest, and the scribe. It was in this period that monotheism in its fullest sense was set forth. The conception of resurrection and belief in the other world was taken over from the Persians.

The next period was from 1,900 to 175 years ago. The Hebrews were an exiled nation and the main authority was the rabbi. God was looked on as a God who worked as a God against nature — a worker of miracles, against the laws of nature.

Dr. Kaplan represented the next period, from 175 years ago on, as the democratic era. The authorities are two—Israel for the Israelis, and the status in the diaspora for non-Israeli Jews. Speaking first of Israel, Dr. Kaplan said that that culture has a democratic, written, code of law based on the well-being of all the citizens of the state—a synthesis of the best points in other constitutions. Unlike the past era, the democratic era defines God as a God that works with and through nature.

S.A.C. Poster Contest Open To All Faculties For Cash Prizes

Entries for the Poster Contest sponsored by the Intercultural Affairs Committee in connection with National Brotherhood Week must be submitted to one of the SAC offices by Feb. 20, Miss Audrey Feasel, Poster Committee member said yesterday.

Students of all faculties are eligible to compete for cash prizes of twenty-five, fifteen and ten dollars, as well as artists' supplies which are being offered. The posters submitted are to depict some phase of brotherhood spirit.

Judges of the contest are Professors Comfort of Art and Archaeology, McCallum of Philosophy and Tatham of the Geography department.

The Intercultural Affairs Committee of the SAC, in an effort to break down the tendency toward university isolation from national affairs, has prepared a program for the observance of Brotherhood Week. All campus organizations have been approached and have pledged support to the program.

Big Tag Day To Mark ISS Campaign Finale

"Today will be the big tag day for the campaign," Warren Goldring, local I.S.S. chairman said last night. "A full scale tag day is being carried out across the campus, and every student will have an opportunity to contribute whatever amount he wants. The campaign has not been too successful so far, but we hope this tag day will boost it considerably."

He pointed out that $2,500 has been raised to date, and with the amount we hope to raise from outside sources, it has been estimated that a contribution of 23¼ cents from each and every student would push the campaign well to the top.

Action Needed Today

Today is the ISS general tag day. Any amount you can give is of assistance. Ten thousand dollars is the amount necessary to fulfill our responsibilities to thousands of needy students in other countries. Positive action by each and every U. of T. student to the amount of 23¼ cents will be sufficient to push this campaign to the top. Dig deep and contribute what you can.

Defeat CCF Bill To Give Gov't Aid ToCollegeStudents

Debate on points of order took up at least half of yesterday's Mock Parliament meeting and eventually led to an unexpected adjournment of the House, after the CCF government's bill asking for government aid to university students was defeated 45 to 30 by the Liberal opposition.

Planned Two Bills

The C.C.F. planned to have debate on two bills. One would have had the Province of Ontario establish a system of subsidies for university students' fees. The second bill was aimed to put the manufacture of alcoholic beverages under the ownership of the provincial government.

Jack Hoolihan, II UC, introduced a private motion asking for a committee of representatives of each of the four political clubs chaired by the Speaker of the House "to either reform or abolish the Mock Parliament." The motion passed unanimously.

As soon as a first reading of the bill on education was attempted controversy over procedure began. Dave Stanley, leader of the Liberal opposition opposed the bill as out of order. The speaker ruled opposition could only be allowed on the second reading.

Wants French Printing

Bill Dawson, I Trinity, claimed that the whole government motion was out of order because it had not been printed in both French and English.

Gord Milling, Leader of the House, introduced the bill for the government. The bill was only a beginning, he said, and thus inadequate, but the C.C.F. would introduce further legislation to further aid university students.

Dave Stanley replied for the Liberals, saying that his party disagreed with the government only because its bill was not sufficient. He introduced an amendment to abolish all tuition fees with the aid of provincial grants and further aid students.

Opposes Amendment

Prime Minister Harvey Hay opposed the amendment on a point of order. He said parliamentary procedure does not allow the opposition to introduce bills that will increase government expenditures.

Stanley replied, "Since the House hasn't a red cent to spend, the government's complaint is irrelevant."

Eventually the Liberals decided to withdraw their amendment" and unanimously oppose the un-amended bill.

The vote was soon called and the government defeated. The Speaker called for a second reading of the bill on alcoholic beverages, but the Liberals said this was impossible. The government had been defeated and therefore must resign. Hay moved that the meeting be adjourned so that he and his government might resign. His motion was carried.

Textbook Brief Demands Change In Press Policy

Commenting on the campus textbook situation SAC President Gordon Gwynne-Timothy stated that "there seemed to be no question that the present policy was unfair to the students. We hope that the Board of Governors will rectify the wrongs brought out by the brief being forwarded to them", he said.

The brief calls for a change in the policy of the University Book Store "to one of operation on a cost plus maintenance basis" and "abolition of the mark-up on American text books purchased directly from American publishing houses".

Continuing Gwynne-Timothy said that the NFCUS committee had given a lot of time to the brief and that he believed the material contained therein should prove a valuable guide to the Board of Governors in determining the U of T's future policy with regard to textbooks.

NFCUS chairman, George Wilkes, said: "I am very glad that it went through as quickly as it did, and unchanged by the SAC. It's a problem that has needed attention. It may be a step toward alleviation of strain on students. It has been suggested that a committee be prepared to go forward to President Smith and give an explanation."

"I appreciate all The Varsity has done and especially Wils Harrison's work", said Wilkes.

Honored

William H. Clarke, honorary secretary of the Alumni Association, is one of the three new members appointed to the University Board of Governors this week. President of Clarke Irwin & Co., publishers of educational books, Mr. Clarke takes a keen interest in theatre, music and art. While at the university he studied political science and economics.

MYSTERY SOLVED

The identity of the mystery singer practising until the wee hours of the morning and disturbing the rest of the Whitney Hall girls has finally been discovered. The female vocalist is Dean Ferguson who has been practising to sing the Varsity Song at the Drill Hall as a feature of the Valentine Roam Around tonight.

Valentine Roam Around To Star Dean Ferguson As Gimby's Top Soloist

In what promises to be the highlight of the Valentine Dance in the Drill Hall, tonight, Miss Marion Ferguson, Dean of University College Woman, will sing the "Blue and White". Dancing at the Drill Hall will be to the music of Bobby Gimby's orchestra. Other music will be heard at the Therapy Huts, Brennan Hall, Trinity Buttery, and the J.C.R. In the J.C.R. will be a solid evening of Glenn Miller recordings.

Following the hockey tilt between Varsity and Queen's, the three-stars of the game will be picked by Joe Zeigler, General Manager of the Toronto Maple Leafs Ball Club, at the Drill Hall.

Booths will be erected in the various places. Wycliffe will have their booth in the Therapy Huts. Optometry will give tests of the visual field in the Drill Hall. Proceeds will be donated to the ISS campaign.

Last Chance

Today is the last day of the ISS campaign.

For the past week hundreds of people have been hard at work in an effort to push the ISS campaign over the top. The objective is $10,000. So far, you have contributed $2,500.

If every one of you contributed 62 cents, that $10,000 objective would be reached. If every one of you contributed the price of one movie, there would be no necessity of making this appeal. But so far, you haven't.

So far you have contributed an average of 16 cents each.

The money is not needed for charity. It is needed for International Student Service, a service meant to strengthen the bonds between students around the world. Your 62 cents will help to provide a student hostel in India, textbooks for Greek students, shoes for university students in Hungary, and scholarships for refugee students in France. It means that the emergency work of world student relief can be carried out.

Most of your 62 cents will be used to bring gifted European students to Canada for one year of study. Your stake in the reconstruction of Europe can be bought for 62 cents. For 62 cents you can do your share to promote international understanding. And you know that any hope of international understanding is fast becoming a mockery unless you do something about it. This is your chance and the price is cheap. Only 62 cents.

Most of you, if you stop to think about it, will agree that the cause is a fine one. Most of you will, if prodded, admit there is no reason why you shouldn't contribute. But most of you seem disinclined to make the extra effort required to dig into your pockets and pull out 62 cents.

During the year many of you have been called apathetic. You've been told that your interest in student affairs has left much to be desired. Today you have a last chance to prove otherwise. Today you can show that you are interested in student affairs and students—not only here but around the globe. You can do it by putting the ISS campaign over the top. And it can be done for 62 cents each.

The ISS people will have hundreds of girls out tagging today. If you see one you will find it very easy to slip by her, pretending you haven't noticed. But you'll only be fooling yourselves.

That 16 cents you've contributed so far looks pretty flimsy. It won't go very far in aiding thousands of students like yourselves who need help and need it badly.

For 62 cents it can be done. Try it and see.

St. Hilda's Gang Mob Skulemen

Three school of practical science students told campus police last night they were beat up and robbed of their slide rules by four members of the dreaded St. Hilda's Gang.

This is the fourth time in a week the Gang—a group of rowdy, black-gowned teen-aged girls—have brutally assaulted innocent passers-by on the campus.

"It was awful," Peter Plumber, IV Mining, told The Varsity.

"They were wearing long watch chains attached to their gowns. They shoved us behind a tree on the back campus and whipped us with the watch chains."

"We was just having a little fun," Pamela, self-appointed leader of gang, said.

Wholesome Types

"We ain't got no other recreation," she lamented, sneeringly. "Why doncha build us a dance hall or something. They won't let us in all the other dance halls and they laugh at the way we talk.

"What else is we girls going to do for entertainment?"

Pamela related how many of the girls had been blacklisted from local dance halls for doing their own dance, the Lusty Lindy. The girls have organized a boy's auxiliary—the "Lusty Lindy Lads"—with whom they do this dance until they are inevitably ejected from the dance hall.

Pamela said there was no truth in frequent reports that the girls were underprivileged and came from some of the city's poorer homes.

"Leave us not have any of this song and dance, pally," she told a reporter.

No Frivolous Floogies

"Some of us girls is from the elite. We have six graduates of Doulton College in our gang."

She declined to comment on the type of member in the Lusty Lindy Lads.

"Ah—they're just one night stands," she said. "They just come along for the laughs. They like to see us beat up schoolmen."

She related the boys stood around and shouted encouragement when the girls beat up pedestrians. One of them, she said, yelled "give 'em the slippers, sis" as one of the girls kicked a helpless prostrate Skuleman.

The phrase "give 'em the slippers", she said, referred to the practice of kicking a victim with the heavy mocassins the girls habitually wear.

They also attack other girls who imitate the gang's costume, which comprises a black academic gown, a long watch-chain, a middy, a dickie and lavender lingerie of Chantilly lace.

The expense of these costumes alone proves the contention that these girls are not from underprivileged homes.

Spring Dance Of All-Varsity Being Planned

Plans for an All-Varsity Spring Dance to be held March 4 are now being made by the House Committee of Hart House, it was learned yesterday. This is the first time an All-Varsity Dance has been held in the spring.

The House Committee's decision to hold a second All-Varsity Dance was made because tickets to the fall dance were always in such demand: and they felt a dance of this type would round out the year. The fall dance always has been the first dance of the university year and they felt a spring dance would give a finishing touch to social activities before the examinations commenced.

The eleven hundred tickets, which go on sale Feb. 21, will be allotted to each faculty on a per capita basis. The committee felt this was better system for insuring that each faculty would have an opportunity of securing the number of tickets desired.

Complaints made by students from faculties, other than Arts, were a big factor in the committee's decision to sell the tickets on a per capita basis. The complaints of the students were made after many of them had failed to procure tickets to the All-Vafsity Dance last fall. The students said they were unable to buy tickets because the time stipulated for ticket sales conflicted with their full lecture schedule.

All Allotted Tickets

The allotment, which will be made on the per capita male registration in each faculty, and times for ticket sales will be as follows: Wycliffe, 11 a.m., 5 tickets; St. Mike's, 11 a.m., 63; Victoria, 12:00, 143; UC, 12:00, 172; Trinity, 12:00, 40; Pharmacy, 12:00, 33; OCE, 12:00, 30; Dentistry, 1:00 p.m., 60; Forestry, 1:00 p.m., 34; Faculty and School of Music, 1:00 p.m., 8; Skule, 5:15 p.m., 255; Architecture, 5:15 p.m., 22; Medicine, 5:15 p.m., 97; Institutional Management, 5:15 p.m., 13.

The remainingg 125 tickets will be split between Ajax and the School of Graduate Studies and graduate members of Hart House. Ajax will be allotted 75 tickets from the remainder. The Ajax allotment was not made on a per capita basis. The committee felt the Ajax students would get an undue proportion if this was carried out here.

Cabaret, Aquacade Featured

Other features of the evening will be a French Cabaret in the lunch room and an Aquacade in the Hart House pool. The cabaret show will be under the directorship of Norm Jewison, III Victoria. The show will run three times during the evening and will be twenty minutes in length. This is the first time a show of this kind has been staged at an undergraduate dance in Hart House.

Russian Enmity Dims World View States Plumptre

"Our economic position is painful and precarious," said A. F. W. Plumptre, of the Department of External Affairs at Trinity College Literary Institute's annual dinner last night. "At the end of the war the world was optimistic in outlook but by 1947 this had passed with the obvious alienation of Russia and the famines and downheartedness of Europe," he said.

"Canada, which is now almost totally dependent on American trade is in a painful position due to the loss of British markets and in a precarious position due to the instability of the American markets," said Mr. Plumptre.

"Our obvious market is Britain but it is impoverished. We can help this recovery by buying British and, more important, by helping establish security against eastern pressure by formation of the Atlantic Security Pact. So the problem becomes in a sense, political and Canada must bear her share in it," he concluded.

Woman's Defendo Tactics Surprise Male Onlookers

If anybody thinks that the manly art of self-defence is a man's art, he would have changed his mind in a hurry after a glance at the goings on (and over) in Hart House yesterday.

Here, as in most "sports", it might be said that women have muscled in.

One might be surprised to hear that our latest Miss Toronto—Diddy Ferrimen—was appearing in shorts (plus a few other items) in the Hart House gymnasium.

However, no one was more surprised than the individual who accepted the manly maids invitation. He soon found himself with a mat under his back and his face flushed.

To the ordinary reader Defendo might sound like the trade name for a cleanser, but the trained eye will soon recognize it as a term applied to self-defence.

Defendo Training

Miss Ferriman was appearing with a group of individuals who were putting on an exhibition for the sake of many would-be defendoists. From the look of things it is the male undergraduates who will need the training rather than the weaker sex.

Not Mixed Couples

Although the Defendo champions do not recommend it as a sport for mixed couples, it may be useful for times when one expects to be held up or stabbed in the back. Since one can never tell when one is going to get in a fight, it may be a good thing to know how to throw your opponent over your back and onto his.

Two Year Scholarship Assists Hygienic Study

The Rockefeller Foundation has provided the School of Hygiene with $8,500 yearly for two years, Dr. Sidney Smith announced yesterday. This fund will be used to extend teaching in medical care administration and to support studies relating to the provision of more adequate medical, dental, nursing and hospital care.

UN Tool For War States Trotskyist At Peace Council

"The people of the world should put no trust in the United Nations as it is a tool of those who want war," Barry Goody, I UC, said at an open meeting of the Students Peace Council yesterday. Goody, a self-styled Trotskyist, said the UN was a front for world imperialism and, to illustrate this, pointed out that the UN did not solve the Indonesian question but had stepped out to let the "Dutch imperialists" settle it.

Many Disagree

Many speakers rose to disagree with Goody. Barbara Bambridge, I UC, said the UN could also be used for propaganda on peace and was backed up by George Denbeigh, IV UC. Earlier in the meeting Miss Bambridge had pointed out that the United Nations were successful in getting Russia to withdraw her troops from Iran in 1946 and in making Britain and France withdraw their armies in Lebanon.

Steve Endicott, IV Vic, disagreed with another statement of Goody's in which he said that Canada's policy was decided wholly by a vote of the cabinet. He showed that there was disagreement within the cabinet by reading from the same Toronto newspaper statements made by L. B. Pearson, Minister of External Affairs, and L. Chevrier, Minister of Transport, at the end of January.

"Substitute World Socialism"

Joan Eddis, II UC, Denbeigh and others asked Goody what he put in place of the UN. His fellow Trotskyist, Alan Goldstein, I UC, answered that before the government plunged Canada into "another slaughter", they should be forced to hold a referendum to see if the people of Canada want war. "Only world Socialism can prevent a war," he added.

The statements arose out of the Peace Council's discussion of two of the resolutions passed by the Toronto Peace Conference in December. These resolutions were, "We suggest that Canada's policy be independent of all power blocs, one of unswerving adherence to the principles of the United Nations Charter and to the continued existence of the UN . . . The United Nations can and must be the instrument for threshing out all international disputes and for giving aid to Europe in a manner which does not threaten national independence," and "We suggest that . . . our government oppose the present increasing tendency to rely on regional pacts outside of the framework of the UN . . ."

Council Not Recognized

Before the discussion started, Bruce Brock, II UC, chairman, told the Council that although

Dr. M. Coady's Visit To Co-ops Includes Speech

Dr. M. M. Coady, Director of the Extension Department of St. Francis Xavier University, will speak at Tomkins House of the Campus Co-operative Residence on the Philosophy of Co-operation on Friday night.

This will be the first visit of Dr. Coady to the Campus Co-op for ten years. George King, a Co-op official, said that his visit is one of the outstanding events in the history of the Co-op. He will speak at 6:45 p.m. on Friday at Tomkins House, 18 Willcocks Street. Reservations are available at RA 2520.

Co-operative Pioneer

Dr. Coady is a pioneer of the Co-operative movement in Canada. He received his education in the Maritimes, Rome and Washington, D.C., and in 1928 went to Laval as Director of the Extension Department.

Dr. Coady has been elected President of the Association for Adult Education in Canada. He is coming to Toronto for his inauguration. There has been an increased interest in adult education and the philosophy of education has changed said Dr. Coady. An educational system should not be exclusively for those who can afford an education, nor for those who wish to enter one of the professions. The miners, farmers, factory workers and housewives should be given as much education as their curiosity demands.

There has been a development in Toronto of co-operative activity lately. St. Mike's has formed a successful co-operative and a course is offered on co-ops in fourth year Economics.

Vic Assembly
Follows In Grecian Style

By NAN McKENZIE

The ancient, white-robed Greeks seated in the assembly hall all had a voice in the government of their city. They spoke for their interests in a system known as direct representation.

The population of today's governmental institutions is too large for adoption of this method. The theory of representation is still recognized as having many merits and numerous institutions have modified the method to their own needs.

Among the institutions that have felt the necessity for change in their democratic governments due to greatly increased numbers are co-llege and university student governments which attempt individually to cope with the situation. In these centres of youthful initiative and spark-plug ideas, there should be a fertile field for governmental innovations.

Completes First Year

With the eyes of many universities on the Victoria College Assembly system, now completing its first year of operation, Victoria students are awaking with a special and prideful interest to the merits of this governmental experiment.

Too large to get much response or interest in "open meetings", of the college student sessions, Vic has solved its problem of securing student interest in college activities and obtaining good representative opinion on current controversial events. The assembly is composed of 74 members from the VCU executive, women's and men's athletic and social directorate, members at large from the four years, thec ollege magazine Acta Victoriana, the college societies, NFCUS representatives and common room chairman.

At this monthly meeting the minutes of each organization is reviewed and discussed by all members and issues concerning the college are debated by this cross-section of student opinion.

Penalize Absentees

Representation as such is good if you can maintain it and by token of a small but important clause in its constitution known as the Penalty Clause, the assembly is assured of a good, almost 100% turnout. A member of the assembly who is absent from the assembly for any reason but sickness more than twice, not only relinquishes his position in the assembly, but also the position, (for example, presidency of a college club) by which he was eligible for assembly membership.

Of all the colleges and faculties on the campus, Vic gave, perhaps, says VCU President Keith Davey, the most completely representative student opinion on NFCUS affiliation with IUS. The question introduced by NFCUS was immediately seized and debated upon by the whole assembly of 74 members from the athletic, social, dramatic, musical, debating, literary, executive and other interest organizations. Truly this was a cross-section of Victoria College student opinion.

Clear Aims

The recent attack on the college magazine made by a first year student who wanted clarification of the aims and composition of this organ, stirred up interest in the Acta by controversy. It is just such interest which combats student apathy concerning college affairs.

One of the fruits of the assembly's efforts has been a new college revue and has brought back the original atmosphere to the fall production of "The Bob". Neither of these could have been accomplished without the guidance and backing of a genuine cross-section of the student body.

The assembly has approximately eight sub-committees on finance, publicity, elections, common rooms, etc. W en there is need, further committees are set up to cope with such issues as the revision of "The Bob" and arranging for awards.

Provision for open meetings as a check on the assembly has been made but no events necessitating such a recourse have yet occurred.

Expect Changes

Changes in the assembly constitutions were expected by its progenitors, Murray Thomson (recent VCU president), John Teeter, Jan Meisel, Keith Davey and others. This year there has been one change which gave the chairmanship to a graduate student rather than to the VCU president.

Parliamentary procedure and debates being a large part of assembly operation, the students of Victoria see in their new governmental system as a good democratic training. The democratic

Schiller Ideal In Philosophy Is Discussed

Frederick Schiller was a humanist who believed in the essential nobility of man, stated Dr. G. W. Field in a lecture given Wednesday in Victoria College Alumnae Hall.

"The early Schiller seemed revolutionary in his excoriating attacks on political and social abuses," the speaker said, "but in his later years Schiller reached the conclusion that man must improve himself from within before political and social improvement could be brought about."

German idealism was to be seen as "an aggregate of ever-changing ideas" and it is difficult to assess the extent to which it is responsible for Hitler and the Nazi movement.

Schiller's influence on middle class bourgeois thought was paramount. The tragedy of the Germany of recent times was the lack of harmony between the political, cultural and technical elites. The double standard of dynamic activism—the constant restless striving which paves the way for Hitlers, and passivism were important in Schiller's philosophy.

Book Review

Undergrad And Review

Of the last two issues of these two magazines the Review is better balanced, although there are no essays or book reviews included. Ronald Bryden's "Death at Mrs. Potter's" which has undertones of Virginia Woolf, is one of the best shorts published in the Review for some time. The construction is excellent, the psychology authentic, and the language has an appealing poetic strain. Michael MacKlem's "Joseph, Penny and God" is another fine piece — the symbolism is unusual and extremely well worked out. The imagery throughout is good . . ."A face which expresses reactions to a miscrocosmic world, bounded by a cocktail" And in opposition to this world we see another of work, birth and death, a nice contrast between two sets of values, between stagnation and growth.

Most of the poetry is sadly lacking in originality — overtones of Shelley and Byron are everywhere. Sandy Best's "Reflection" however, captures the illusive mood the author sought to portray. "Moment in a Music Room" by A. M. Thomson, despite the prosaic quality of the first two verses, presents its theme in effective symbolic terms.

The arrangement of material in the Undergrad is anything but satisfactory, and, since almost one-third of the articles are of topical interest, I shall not attempt to deal with them. The one essay, Derry Novak's "Does Socialism Lead to Communism?" is an extremely penetrating analysis of democratic socialism. Despite the fact that the Undergrad has always contained quite a selection of shorts, only one appears in this issue: "Leaf Mould" by Audrey Feasel is a very sensitively-drawn portrait of a child's world with everything kept in correct proportion. The Robin Godfrey prize play by Grant Huffman is of course the high point of the issue. "Hello and Goodbye" is a one-acter centering around the most familiar of marital conflicts. Each of the four characters comes through as a living person and moves convincingly within the limitations of the play-form. Of the two poems in the issue, Richard Tait's conveys the mood most effectively, although some of the images are extremely banal. 'Imitations of Immortality", a new department for the Undergrad provides an opportunity for budding translators. Keith Thomas' selection from Faust is a particularly fine piece. Miss Feasel's ode is marred only by her attempt to bring Horace up-to-date.

All in all, the Review, which is more limited, is better balanced. The Undergrad, however, has fallen far short of the standards it maintained last year. For without organization and a preconceived idea of its scope, any publication will be merely a conglomeration of material. The ideal would seem to be a magazine containing the best serious writing done by the students of the college, a magazine which would reflect more than the fads and fancies of a semester. The Review at least seems to be on the right track.

A TRUE TALE

This is the story of the three-year life of an essay. When it was written back in 1947 it was a pretty fair essay, at least it merited a "B" grade from the professor who marked it. The essay didn't fare so well in 1948 it only rated a "C55. This year it finally came into its own. Not only did the marker give it an "A", but with tongue in cheek; he added a cryptic "good source material" below the grading.

ART — MUSIC — DRAMA

Fantasy Of '49

When a musical organization decides to stage an operetta the usual choice is made from those masters, Gilbert and Sullivan, Sigmund Romberg, or Franz Lehar. Therefore, the University College Musical Club must be congratulated for choosing Kurt Weill's new operetta "Down in the Valley" for the major part of "Fantasy of '49". Because of this choice "Fantasy of '49" was superior to the usual musical production. The vocal work was no better than in most shows, but when an organization will deviate from the conventional to produce a contemporary and modern operetta, it shows musical judgment plus a good deal of courage.

However, "Down in the Valley" does not seem to be an inherently good operetta. Firstly, it can be interpreted as a satire or a tragedy, and as performed on Tuesday night it appeared to be a tragedy. Another consideration is its sub-title, a folk-opera. The action takes place in the Rural South of the United States and folk-songs are a basis for the libretto. This presents a problem to the composer. Any creative work which can be properly called art has, as its inspiration, some part of the folk-culture of a particular region, and folk-songs are the particular basis for music. But in creating this work of art a transformation takes place, which creates something new and entirely different from the original folk-song both in subject and, as applicable here, in form. To my mind, Mr. Weill has not created a new form from the original folk-song, but only altered it to suit his sophisticated musical tragedy. The songs should have been either changed to operatic form or left in their original state for they are nothing but arrangements as written now.

The performers suffered from the imperfect conception of the score. They tended towards melodrama at all times, and the duet "The Lonesome Dove" between Jennie Parsons (Deltra Eamon) and Brack Weaver (Bill Copeland) looked and sounded like some of the worst moments of "Il Trovatore". However, Miss Eamon has an excellent clear voice and fulfilled her part very capably, while Mr. Copeland gave a definite if sometimes overwrought performance.

Preceding the operetta were choral selections from "Brigadoon" and a group of Victor Herbert songs.

Casavant Musicale

The unconventional programme selected by Mr. Silvester seemed designed to illustrate the wide capabilities of the organ especially in tone color and to demonstrate that it cannot only cope with the deliberate logical magnificence of Bach but also with the ephemeral musings of the Impressionist tradition, e.g., Karg-Elert. Again, in choosing an organ version of Handel's concerto for organ and orchestra deliberately registered after the original composition, Mr. S. seemed to wish to drive home the neglected appreciation of the versatility of the instrument. His playing was clear and brilliant and done entirely from memory, which left him abundant opportunities to 'orchestrate' richly and tastefully. Franck's "Finale in B flat" was a staggering display of pedal gymnastics.

Guests on the Society's programme, the Hart House Glee Club under Dr. Charles Peaker, revealed an enthusiasm that was infectious. Their opening work, Palestrina's Adoramus Te was as rich, warm and unified as if it were being played on the organ which had just been silenced.

Following this dignified beginning enthusiasm began with "Sumer is icumen" and two Sea Shanties. If one were to be prudishly meticulous one could complain that the high spirits sometimes evaded the discipline of the conductor. Doubtlessly the most rewarding chorus of the evening both as to words and music was Vaughn Williams' "Fain would I change that note". Too rarely do we hear the abundant choral works of this English master. Dr. Peaker made this chorus flow from the voices of the Glee Club in their most finely executed item. The high spirits, temporarily suppressed, burst forth again in "The Swazi Warrior" and that satirical Yorkshire folksong "Ilka Moor".

parently the Parlow String Quartet, Kathleen Parlow, violin; Samuel Hershenhoren, violin; Stanley Solomon, viola, and Cornelius Ysselstyn, 'cello, are four virtuosi whose sincere musicianship is too far drawn from the mere flash of the spectacular to attract the average Toronto concert-goer. However, in Miss Parlow, we have in our midst one of the all-time great musicians of the world, and all who attended Wednesday were imbued with a thorough-going tonal satisfaction which none but Miss Parlow's musicianship and personality can give in wholeness of proportionate appreciation to such a group.

The two works performed were the Quartet in C minor by Clermont Pepin and the Quartet in D major by Cesar Franck.

From the near back of the Hall the 23-year-old Quebec born Clermont Pepin received the enthusiastic applause of all in attendance. His quartet is a spirited work with an austere ruggedness typical of composers living in northern countries, many see in it the strengthening addition to the foundation of purely Canadian music.

Cesar Franck's Quartet in D major did not seem as long and diffuse as usual. With Miss Parlow at the helm, the masterful part-writing had a smoothness and fullness that caused the appreciative audience to recall the musicians by several rounds of hearty applause.

ANTI-RED

The Editor, The Varsity:

In your editorial "This Inevitability" Rubbish" reprinted from an article in the Queen's Journal which appeared in The Varsity No. 75 on Monday, January 31, 1949, I find much clever and sophisticated propaganda for Communist Russia.

I quote: "Insofar as our conflict with Russia is ideological, each year of peace synthesizes, to some extent, our opposite views". Was, may I ask, our ideological conflict with Communist Russia since 1917, the year of the bloody communist revolution there, ever synthesizing our opposite views by each year of peace? The answer must be NO.

I quote: "There are other ways too, of lessening the probability of war if we believe that the peace will continue. We may discover that Russia is inhabited, after all, by men and women who in many ways resemble ourselves . . . By making every possible effort to contact these people, to export our ideas to them and to understand theirs, we will pave the way towards future concord . . . This is a positive action." How can we, may I ask, contact these people over there, with the iron curtain still in place, over the will of the almighty Kremlin Directorate This, I submit, would represent no action at all. The peoples of the Communist Dominated World do not, let it be clear for once for all, pray God for such a naive attitude of the freely breathing peoples of the World towards their hopeless plight.

I quote: "Let us wise up to what is going on. Let us see clearly that these people (the author of the article means the North American authorities) who clamor for artillery and jet fighters are ready to sacrifice our traditions . . . " Here, I am sorry, I have to be blunt. "These people" are NOT ready to sacrifice our traditions. They ARE, in fact, active and watchful guardians of our traditions, of freedom as we know it. And the statement, I quote, that "We are fast becoming today's Nazis, the North American Herren-folk", looks to me very much like the old communist "twist" that he who does not want "to understand" Communist Russia is just another fascist or Nazi.

The sad fact is that totalitarian Communist Russia is heading with ruthless consequence for World domination by all means available to them at a given time. And to try to influence the people of the Free World that this is not true—is, I believe, either pure madness or . . . I would rather not write the bad word.

A Victim of Communist Russia.
(Name Withheld By Request)

P.S. Should you agree to publish this letter, I would prefer not to have my name printed. I have still two sisters behind the iron curtain. Myself, I am a veteran of the Canadian Army studying here under the D.V.A. rehabilitation scheme.

Now that Robert Mitchum, the bobby-soxers idol, has been sentenced to sixty days on a narcotics charge we half expect to see a national protest on his behalf. Certainly good old Mitch couldn't have been guilty. After all, they only caught him with a reefer in his mouth. His defence lawyer made an unusual plea during the trial. He asked that his client be treated as any other normal human being. The judge replied that he would do his best to regard the defendant in that light and with admirable impartiality proceeded to do just that. Our Hollywood correspondent wires that Mitchum and the entire Hollywood community are stunned. They're going to fire the guy who wrote the script—no happy ending.

Interfac Boxers Hold Five Bouts

The Senior Interfaculty boxing tournament continued last night with five stirring bouts being decided. The curtain raiser ended in a TKO for Priestman (PHE) over Parke (UC). Priestman will meet J. Brown (UC), Saturday night in the finals at Athletic Night. It was Priestman all the way as he landed several straight lefts in the first two rounds and earned a knockdown in the fourth. He stopped Parke in the fourth with a hard right to the bread-basket followed up with head blows that brought the end of the fight.

McIlraith (Meds) decisioned Walter (Tiger) Bolton (Ajax) in the 165 pound class. It took the Medsman three rounds to wise up to Bolton's unorthodox right hand lead, but then he kept jabbing his long left into his shorter rival's face and thus piled up points. Bolton has lots of natural ability but it appeared last night as if he were over-matched in there with the ring-wise McIlraith.

Dewey Butters (Vic) weighing 133, started well against Coggins (Vic) with good left hooks, but he took too much punishment in delivering them. He tired rapidly in the second session and was bleeding freely from the nose. The fight was stopped in the second when Butters was practically out on his feet. Coggins didn't have the energy to finish him off.

At the 155 pound level Toy (SPS) was given a very close decision over Petkoff (Ajax). Toy had superior reach on his side but Petkoff continually bored in with wild roundhouse rights and lefts. Toy took quite a pounding before gaining the said close decision.

The final was the heavyweight go between Don Hogarth (Ajax) and Clem Scott (PHE). Scott was landing more punches in the early rounds but taking lots of hard rights in return. Scott was the aggressor all the fight and probably won on that merit.

In the wrestling semi-final Shaver beat Gregory (one fall) at the 155 pound class, while Dick of UC won when Waldon defaulted. Smith (Ajax) beat Babarik (UC) with one fall in the second.

Both tournaments continue Saturday so don't miss the thrilling finals.

Blue Seconds Top Waterloo With Ease

The Intermediate hockey team played their favored opponents, Waterloo College last night and eked out a 12-2 win. Nearly everyone on the Varsity squad hit the score sheet with Dinty Moore and Artie Bell being the highest point-getters with four each coming from one goal and three assists.

Captain Griff Pearson and Lennie Turner sank two goals each while Morrison and Rocky Howson both got one goal and two assists. The game was a comic epic from start to finish with Varsity players practically wearing the ice out on the way to the penalty box.

Line-ups:
Varsity Intermediates: Goal, Foote; defence, Waldron, Morrison; centre, Pearson; wings, Howson, Moore; alts., Dies, Turner, Paterson, Kane, Pingland, Campbell, Allen, Bell.
Waterloo: Goal, Seltzer; defence, Janke, Innes; centre, Giller; wings, Ritter, Putnam; alts., Santo, Haney, Schade, Howald, Howden, Luciw, Hinschberger, Dooley.

WINLESS GAELS TO TRY BLUES

LaRose To Play Right Wing As Varsity At Full Strength

The Varsity Blues play hosts to Queen's Tricolor tonight at Varsity Arena as the Gaels make their final appearance of the season here, still looking for their first victory.

Although their chances of successfully defending the Queen's Cup were rocked severely when they blew last Friday's encounter with University of Montreal Carabins, the Blues still can finish in first place. "We'll be in there fighting . . . and hoping," said Ace Bailey, coach of the Blues last night. "Montreal have only three games left to play, two against McGill and one against us. We have two more games left than Montreal so there is still a mathematical chance we can finish on top."

At present the Blues are tied for second with McGill Redmen. Each has eight points and are eight points back of the leading Carabins.

Varsity needs a win against Queen's to keep their hopes alive. A loss would mean that Montreal would just have to win one more of their remaining three games to squelch the Blues' hopes until next year.

So far the Gaels have not won a game this year, having nine losses in a row. Netminding has been their main weakness as 59 goals have been rung up against the hapless Tricolor in their nine games.

After Friday's game the Blues play three games on the road. Next week the Blues journey to Montreal and the McGill Winter Carnival. They meet the Redmen in a battle for second place Friday and then hop over to Verdun for a Saturday engagement with U. of Montreal. The following Wednesday Ace Bailey's crew wind up their jaunt in Kingston with a game against Queen's before closing the season against McGill.

The Blues are at full strength for tonight's tussle. Bob LaRose will see action for the first time in several games after being out with a dinky knee. But instead of his usual rearguard position LaRose will move into the right wing spot along with Rich Howson and Johnny Fox.

Wilf Digby had not returned from a trip up north for the practise last night but is expected to make it by game time tonight.

The N.F.C.U.S. obtained the lowest royalty rates for students producing plays controlled by Samuel French and Sons.

VARSITY SPORTS

Blue Hockeyettes To Meet McGill

Your one and only chance to see the All-Varsity women's hockey team in action is this afternoon at three in the arena when they rub shoulders with McGill. Oops—correction. You can see them play again if you go to Queen's next weekend, but this is the only game they'll play on Toronto ice.

Conditions of admission are nil—no money, no ticket, no ATL. Among those playing are Ferne Watson, PHE; Alison Jeffries, Vic; Irene Hain, Meds; Helen Ferguson, UC.

VOLLEYBALL

UC I and Vic I tied last night's game 35-35. At half-time UC was leading 22-14. Vic took the lead early in the last half, but UC rallied to tie the score.

Blue-White Have Zeigler, Band, Pennants For Game

The Blue and White Society will make its second attempt at brightening the senior hockey picture tonight when Queen's Gaels are visitors to Varsity Arena.

The special guest of the B. & W. will be the general manager of the Toronto Maple Leaf Baseball Club, Mr. Joe Zeigler. Zeigler will pick the three stars of the game and present the tiny silver skates to the players selected at the post game dance in the C.O.T.C. Hall.

The souvenir pennants which sold well last week will again be available at ten cents each. It is hoped to have fifteen girls from the Blue and White Society on hand to sell them to Toronto fans.

Alec Campbell, unable to be present at this week's game because of previous ski commitments, has been replaced by a small bull fight skit to provide between period entertainment. If Ferdinand's costume holds together long enough, bull fight addicts in these parts are in for a real thrill.

The Blue and White has secured the services of one of the campus' hottest jazz aggregations to provide the musical background for the hockey. One of the best things about the band is that it has promised to be there, which seems to be a departure from tradition hereabouts.

Cheerleaders will again be present to urge verbal support for the Varsity Blues. The ushers made a successful attempt last week to prohibit smoking in the stands and as a result the crowd could see the ice in the last period, (something that was next to impossible at the McGill game).

Last week about 3,500 fans turned out to the game and while the team lost, the spectators were treated to some thrilling hockey. All that is required for admission is an admit to lecture card. And remember the ISS Valentine Roam Around after the game.

Senior Blue Basketeers Travel Encounter Queen's, McGill Squads

Currently sporting their longest winning streak of the year, the Varsity Blues hoopsters entrain for Queen's and McGill this afternoon in an effort to extend their victory string.

Tonight in Kingston, the Blues take on Queen's Gaels. Tomorrow in Currie Memorial Gym in Montreal, the Blues finish off their week-end road trip with a game against the McGill Redmen.

The present Intercollegiate standings show the Blues to be in second place with a one win-one loss record. McGill has won one, lost three, and Queen's have dropped two and won none.

Just last Saturday here in Hart House gym, the Blues came up with one of their best performances of the year (at least in the first half) to polish off McGill 66-52. Wednesday they defeated a highly-rated U. of Buffalo squad 56-45. McGill's other losses were inflicted by the Western Mustangs.

And therein lies a word or two of interest. The 17 points McGill registered in their last game was the lowest score made in Senior Intercollegiate basketball within the last few years, and probably in league records.

A quick glance at the records shows that the Mustangs are regular record-scorers. On March 7, 1947, the Mustangs trampled the same Redmen 90-29 in London. A month earlier that year, Western pasted Queen's 77-25, also in London.

Then on Jan. 23, 1948, the Mustangs repeated over Queen's, 77-24. Then last week they beat McGill 68-17. All those lop-sided Western wins were run up on their home floor in the London Arena.

Going back to last year, we find that after the Blues had beaten McGill here, the Redmen reversed the count in Montreal, pulling the game out of the bag with a desperate last-period offense.

As for Queen's, the Blues rang up two victories last year. The win in Toronto was rather easy, but in Kingston the Blues were forced to go out to win by a narrow four-point margin.

Which all goes to show that the Blues are in for a real struggle this week-end. Teams that are beaten easily on the road often are anything but soft on their own floor, and McGill and Queen's are no exceptions. Moreover the Blues will need two wins to stay close to Western in the league standings.

Eight Skiers To Dartmouth

Eight Varsity skiers are polishing up their skis for one of the most important meets of the year. Friday and Saturday they'll be in Dartmouth against some of the top American college skiers, including some who performed for the U.S.A. in the Olympics. The Blue team includes Archie Jones, Alex Campbell, Jake Howard, and George Kent in the downhill and slalom, and John Holmboe, Jules LaPrairie, Dave Rose, and Russ Stevenson in the cross-country and jumping.

Eleven teams are entered in the meet including Dartmouth, McGill, Middlebury, New Hampshire, St. Lawrence, Varsity and five other eastern college teams. The meet is regarded as a preview of the Intercollegiate Ski Union meet held at Middlebury, February 25 and 26.

Last year Toronto placed fifth in the ISU behind Middlebury, Dartmouth, St. Lawrence, and New Hampshire. Out of the 10 teams entered, the last two are returned to intermediate competition each year.

BB BABIES BELT BELTERS

Barry Lowes' Junior basketeers yesterday grabbed undisputed possession of second place in their league by walloping York Belting 45-28. At the same time they drew YMHA, league cellar-dwellers, for the semi-final round.

The Belters were definitely the weaker team in everything except close defensive play.

Varsity snagged an early six-point lead on long shots by Ken Brown, and kept the lead throughout the game. Play was very even in the first half, with the Juniors leading at half time by one point. They should have led by much more, but their defensive work was sloppy.

In the third quarter Varsity turned on the heat and scored 25 points while holding their opponents to nine. Barry must have given them some potent coaching, for their defence tightened up beautifully.

Johnny Braithewaite and Frank Denton played well, changing their styles to play an offensive game. Both ended up with 10 points apiece. Wilf Laine and Bob Lutner carried most of the load for the Yorkers, but their fine efforts were nullified by Varsity's hard second-half defence.

The game was marked by an abundance of fouls, mostly against the home team; but fortunately the Belters' shooting eyes were not very sharp. Unlike other games, Varsity was out-jumped at both baskets, and their passes did not click to any great extent. To offset these weaknesses, York Belting very co-operatively refused to take advantage of their opportunities and kept missing close-in shots. The Belting offence was disorganized most of the time by good checking by Burns Burnstein and "Smoky" Braithewaite. However, it was a good game to watch from a Varsity supporter's standpoint.

Line-ups:

Varsity — Dancy 6, Braithewaite 10, Hamilton, Carruthers 2, Burnstein 7, Ken Brown 8, Ron Carr, Freeman, Denton 10, Gloverfi Al Brown, Bonsall 2.

York Belting — Karabin 6, Link 2, Wilkes 2, Osborne 3, Laine 7, Kutner 8, Blanchard, Gottlieb, Sherman, Papsin.

HOCKEY BLUES DOWN GAELS 6-4

Crime Wave Hits Varsity — Hold-Up Foiled

Law Student Bests Bandit In Tussle Fri.

For the third successive Friday, fights, brawls, and attacks on police and private citizens kept Toronto police busy last week-end until the early hours of the morning. A young woman beat off her attacker by stabbing him with a hat pin. A cab driver managed to take a sharp hunting knife from a youth who attacked him.

Police blamed drink for many of the incidents.

The University of Toronto came in for its share of the crime wave when rumors that the School of Law's annual Moot Court was in the offing resulted in an attempted hold-up and robbery on Friday night in front of Knox College.

Victim Attacked With Fiance

Victim of the assault was Thomas A. Beckett, IV Law, who was attacked about 5.30 p.m. Friday, while walking past Knox College with his fiance, Miss E. J. Baden-Powell, B.A.

Beckett said he and his companion were approached by a masked man who emerged from the shadows of the college. The man pulled a gun and demanded "Your money or your life," Beckett declared.

Miss Baden-Powell screamed, and incensed by what he thought was an attack on his fiance, Beckett lunged at the gun-man, who has since been identified as Ronald Y. Campbell, III Law.

Scuffle Followed

The two men grappled, and, in the scuffle, Beckett was thrown to the ground. Miss Baden-Powell's screams attracted a policeman who took Campbell into custody.

When apprehended Campbell declared the whole incident had been staged as a psychological experiment. He said it was a test to ascertain the powers of observation of a spectator to a crime.

Friends of Beckett said last night the crime has much deeper implications. Refusing to allow their names to be used, they said it is well known that Campbell is deeply in debt. Campbell and Beckett

Violence broke out again last week-end in Toronto and Varsity had its share. A robbery attempt in front of Knox College was foiled when the screams of Miss Baden-Powell attracted a passing policeman. Hold Open House At UBC Lab Magic, Art—Featured

Vancouver, Feb. 10 — (CUP) — The University of British Columbia has completed plans for the largest Open House Day in its history. The university will open its doors to the public on March 5.

Plans entail the organization of 600 student guides, assembly of hundreds of displays, the arrangement of research projects, models of individual processes, and exhibits of museum pieces and books.

First Period Rush Allows Blue Squad Four-Goal Margin

By HOLDEN

That venerable baseball manager, Connie Mack, once said it was a good idea to concentrate on knocking the stuffings out of the weaker teams in the league because the good ones will beat you often enough no matter how hard you try. Ace Bailey and the Varsity took his advice Friday night as they handed hapless Queen's its tenth loss in a row with an 8-4 shellacking at Varsity Arena. By so doing, the Blues retained their slim chance of finishing on top of the Intercollegiate race and moved, temporarily at least, into second place in the loop.

There apparently was some hesitation as to whether Philadelphia Mack's advice should be followed. It wasn't until well into the third period that the Blues made it evident that they weren't generously going to let the Gaels take home their first win of the season.

Varsity ran up a 4-0 margin in the first period and then coasted while the Tricolor counted the next three goals of the game. After Queen's fired home two quickies in the early moments of the third period the Blues had decided old Mr. Mack wasn't so wrong after all and went back to their knitting. Varsity added four goals to its total in the third before the losers completed the scoring with their fourth marker.

Pete Ferguson deked Queen's goalie Norm Urie for the first goal of the game after receiving a pass-out from Harry Boyd. A few minutes later Rich Howson sank his first of two goals and came right back to get his second after Bill Spence batted in Turcott's pass on the fly.

Hutzulak didn't have much chance on the first Tricolor goal as he was having trouble untangling himself from an over-eager attacker when Ron Kemp fired his shot goalward, for the only counter of the middle frame. Queen's came out strongly in the third as Moon Flanigan and Ken Potts parked pucks behind Hutz. Big Cec Turcott then scored the best goal of the night on a solo end-to-end rush, skipping through the defense and flipping the puck over Urie's falling form. Bob Henry notched the next Blue score on a long shot and then Ernie Frey got part of his stick free from his check long enough to bat in Bud Hayes' pass. Harry Boyd finished the goal-getting for Varsity on a pass from Frey while Chuck Hews scooped a screened shot by Hutzulak for the final goal of the night.

Turcott, Boyd and Howson were the pick of the Varsity attackers while Bud Hayes stood out on defense. Paul Hutzulak was his usual self in goal. Norm Urie in the nets for Queen's did well to keep the score down without much help from anyone but Flanigan. Don Murray and Ron Kemp went one way well up front.

Wilf Digby, Blue rearguard patrolman, did not return to the city in time for the game and was replaced by Hayes. Bob LaRose was moved up to right wing on the line with Howson and John Fox. Unfortunately, he wasn't able to score a goal to celebrate his last game as a bachelor. He was married Saturday.

Military Training Is Necessary Says Vic Student

The pros and cons whether Canada should have compulsory military service will be debated at the final session of the Victoria College Debating Parliament to be held in the Co-Educational Common Room in Victoria College tonight. The debate will start at 8.00 p.m.

Necessary Says Thompson

Gordon W. Thompson, III Victoria, leader of the government forces in tonight's final debate, was quite emphatic in his belief that Canada should have compulsory military service. "Canada should have compulsory universal military training," he said. "Surely a lesson can be learned from history and preparation be made to strengthen our defences to such an extent that an aggressor nation will be discouraged from making any open attack upon the freedom which the democratic peoples now have," Thompson declared.

Inconveniences Canadians

Opposition to the question comes from Rolly Parker, III Victoria, and Harry Green, III Victoria. Parker pointed out that "the atomic bomb, the North Atlantic Pact, our military agreements with the United States and the increased budget of the Department of Defence, all combine to make universal military training more than unnecessary inconveniences to Canadians, both as taxpayers and as individuals."

Thompson is being supported by J. "Mac" Allan in defense of the resolution.

Secretary

Ploughing, Building Hen-Houses

By HERB WOOD

Farmers is farmers, no? They all have that "prairie squint" and "furrow limp" don't they? And they only talk of crops and freshen'ng cattle and grandchildren. So what more is there to know?

Much more, much more, my dear fellow. Now, within chewing tobacco range (Heaven forbid), of the main circulating desk of University Library is a girl who can talk with as much felicity on cut-worms and house building as any son-of-the-soil in these here parts.

We don't expect you to recognize her as a farmer, but more as the pretty and business-like secretary to Mr. W. S. Wallace, head of the University Library. Although the bridge of freckles across her nose, and her left thumbnail, permanently black as she says, might give you a clue.

Miss Julia Jarvis, or "Dodo" as she is known to some people, is called an amazing woman by everyone who knows her. Casually, she talks of ploughing, building henhouses, mixing cement, and raising pig and sheep. In the next breath she is talking of the next play to be put on by the Central Ontario Region of the Dominion Drama Festival, of which she has been secretary for many years.

But you have to hear from another person of her editorship in the select Champlain Society to get the full picture. This society is a private group of 500 elected world-wide members interested in publishing rare and inaccessible material relating to the history of Canada. The publications are not sold but presented to members. Miss Jarvis has been secretary-treasurer of the society for twenty-five years and has just recently been made editor and executive secretary-treasurer.

About two years ago, her brother, veteran of the First World War, had to leave the farm to renew friendships with the doctors at Sunnybrook Hospital. Julia took over the work of the farm just to show that a girl can do as much as a man any day.

With the help of two tractors, one for ploughing and t'other for scuffling between the rows of corn and such like, Julia keeps pace with all her neighbors.

Believe it or not, Miss Jarvis claims that farming is her life work and the library only a side-line. Unlike such a character as Billy Rose who lost money in his gentleman-farmer venture, the Jarvis farm is a "going concern" besides keeping the family larder brimming. Don't be caught looking surprised though, "as it doesn't take brains — just brute strength and ignorance," says Miss Jarvis.

A glance at the hen-coop might give you the idea that the chickens were selected more for beauty than utility. The roosters are pure white, and the hens pure black. "Wouldn't you just know it . . ." Miss Jarvis said. If you're interested, these chickens are the result of crossing the coquettish light Sussex with the plain-Jane Plymouth Rock. The result is a conservative "biddy". And the yield in eggs, girls, is one grade. A special egg, per day, per hen.

As you know, in the summer time all the farmers wear straw hats (or a cow's breakfast) and Julia is no exception. However, unlike the usual farmer, she wears shorts and doesn't chew tobacco or straws. But no matter what work there is to be done on a farm, on a hot summer's day there is nothing like going swimming. So it wasn't long before the little creek that flows through the Jarvis farm was dammed up and a swimming hole made. "I don't wait 'til the end of the day to go for a dip," she said, "I'm in practically 14 times a day."

Last year, her next-farm-neighbor gave her a "cute little Jersey calf." He was promptly called Elmer, and developed quite an attachment to the family, following them everywhere. We didn't have the heart to inquire what happened to Elmer in the fall.

The usual "Rover" is banned from the farm for a good and simple reason. The time hasn't arrived yet when a dog and lamb can lie down together without the one planning where his next meal is coming from.

But she does have a cat and budgie. That bird is talented, if only limited to two sentences: "Where is that damn cat?" and "Dodo is a farmer." Sometimes he gets the two mixed up and says, "Dodo is a damn cat."

With all this space and source of food, it was natural for Miss Jarvis to invite four war guests and their nanny to spend four years with her during the war. There were Evelyn, one year old, John, four, Helen, seven, and Ann, ten. The kids raised the roof . . . that is, the roof of the Jarvis house was raised in order to accommodate them all. Ann, now 19, and just completing first year Meds., at Manchester, has been saving for four years in order to make the trip to Canada this summer to visit Miss Jarvis.

Um . . . I wonder if we could wangle a trip to the Jarvis Farm? Just to see those chickens, mind you.

Responsibility

It is becoming increasingly evident that student groups across Canada are facing more and more difficulty in getting permission to hear "outside" speakers. Last week's incident at Western, when university officials banned an LPP speaker, is the latest example.

But tied in with the problem of choosing "desirable" speakers is the problem of how much responsibility students may exercise in that choice. Earlier in the year we pointed out that student groups here have virtually no authority in that regard. Visiting campus speakers may be banned by University or college officials on almost any pretext without any prior consultation with a student group. Fortunately, other student groups in this country seem to merit more consideration.

The Council of Students at Dalhousie University recently ratified a plan which made provision in advance "for joint student-university administration participation in ruling on the admittance of visiting speakers to the campus when their desirability might be doubtful."

Under the plan, speakers, whose desirability might be doubtful, would be screened by the committee. Such a move, while making provision for joint student-faculty consultation on such matters, is not quite as democratic as it's cracked up to be.

Commenting on the proposed plan last week, the Dalhousie Gazette editorialized: "As has been said before, university students have a fundamental right to hear prominent speakers of all political beliefs. No committee, or group, or individual should have the right to decide what information should be available to students, or what speakers they should hear. If students are not capable of judging, by themselves, what is black and what is white, and for that matter, what is 'red', then the universities are failing in their duty. The 'desirability' of a speaker expounding his views to students should not be the big question in these matters. The question should be one of deciding who are 'prominent speakers'—and one of excluding penny-ante gabblers of words who have little of importance to pass on to any group. Universities, by their very being, should not only admit students to access to knowledge, but should expose them to as much knowledge, and as many ideas, as are available."

Dalhousie's plan may not be the most desirable, but it, at least, does make provision for some degree of student control. And, what is equally important, it gives students a chance to discuss the problem with faculty members.

Here at Toronto, the development of student responsibility has not even come that far.

HOW TO GET OUT OF STUDYING

Are you constantly haunted by a conscience nagging you to "get down to work before it's too late"? Are your days full of torment because you cannot rid yourself of these voices in any other way than actually getting down to work?

Peace of mind rarely comes to the student who is bothered by such inner naggings. Below are some suggestions which will prove useful weapons in the struggle to avoid studying. Their secret of success lies in the fact that they take your mind off studying altogether, if only for a short time.

To the critic who says that these suggestions are mere EXCUSES, or forms of escapism, let us reply that this view is a personal opinion of his own which cannot be carried over automatically to the rest of us. To him they may be excuses, in which case he should stop reading immediately and get down to work, but to others they may afford valid reasons for not starting to study (just yet, anyway).

The suggestions, not necessarily in order of merit, are as follows—

1. Light a Cigarette—Several minutes are taken up with lighting it, finding an ashtray, settling in a chair, etc. A clever trick is to settle in the chair BEFORE looking for the ashtray.
2. Press your pants (or rinse out a few things, as the case may be)—This is especially worthwhile if your pants happen to need pressing (or your things need rinsing out). It may be classified then as a useful job thus avoiding the accusation that you are just wasting time.
3. Shine your shoes—(Cf. No. 2)—Most applicable if one happens to own large numbers of shoes.
4. Read Current Literature—Try to keep to the educational stuff, i.e. seek out articles which will bene-

Student Hurt As Explosion Blasts House

An explosion in the Kappa Rho Tau fraternity house Friday night injured Mark King, chiropractic student, and very nearly resulted in blowing up the building and 16 other students.

At 7.30 p.m., Graham Cameron, III Forestry, pressed the light switch in the front hall of the frat house and immediately an explosion blasted him through the stained-glass front door. Evidently gas fumes had been accumulating in the walls and the spark from the light switch ignited them. A small fire started but was soon extinguished.

Firemen said the gas must have been accumulating for some time and that if it had continued to accumulate for another three hours the entire house would have been demolished. As it was, six rooms were stripped of plaster and windows. A piece of falling plaster struck King in the eye and he is now in the University Infirmary.

Earlier in the day members had noticed gas smells, and were about to turn off the main valve when the light switch was pressed by Cameron. The landlord had tried to repair the leak in the pipe himself but was unsuccessful. He commented, "I guess I should have got a gas company or plumber to do the job, but none could come." He said the repairs would have cost him $35 if done by the gas company, but the damage done by the explosion will run to around $1,000. The damage is covered by insurance.

Although the rubble has not been completely cleared away the members are still eating their meals in the house. The dust from fallen plaster shrouds everything and one student commented that he was "afraid of getting silicosis."

A bridge game was going on at the time of the explosion. Harold Fulton, III Arts, one of the players said "It broke up the game but fortunately none of us were hit by falling plaster. We're still trying to clean the dust from the cards."

Dr. H.A. Cates Appointed New Director For P.H.E.

Retirement of Dr. E. Stanley Ryerson as director of the School of Physical and Health Education, and appointment of Dr. H. A. Cates as his successor was announced today by President Sidney Smith.

Now professor of anatomy, Dr. Cates will continue some of his lectures in that department.

Dr. Ryerson was for many years assistant dean and secretary of the Faculty of Medicine and assistant professor of surgery. Born in Toronto, he was educated at Upper Canada College and Trinity Medical School, graduating with the degrees of M.D. and C.M. from Trinity in 1900.

He has served as chairman of the committee on Medical Education of the Canadian Medical Association and also as chairman of the committee on educational policies of the Association of American Medical Colleges. During World War I he was stationed at Salonika as Major in No. 4 Canadian General Hospital (University of Toronto) and later was appointed assistant director of Medical Services of Military District No. 2. Dean Ryerson has written widely on medical education and nursing education, as well as on the process of diagnosis and on surgery.

Born in London and educated in England, Dr. Cates came to Canada in 1908 and joined the University of Toronto seven years later. He enlisted as a private in the C.A.M.C. in World War I, served in France and Salonika, and came home a captain.

His articles on anatomy have appeared in various scientific journals. Dr. Cates will assume his new duties following Dr. Ryerson's retirement in June.

The N.F.C.U.S. obtained a 33 per cent reduction on sports equipment which universities buy from Spalding and Co.

Varsity Debaters Winners In Inter-Collegiate Trials

A Varsity debating team won a decision at the Queen's-Varsity debate held at Queen's last week. Chuck Tompkins, IV St. Mike's, and Marj. Kearns, II St. Mike's, upheld the negative of "Resolved that political opinions of Professorls are their own business." The Varsity team asserted that a professor with decided political opinions would influence his students to some degree at least.

Chuck Tompkins, first speaker for the negative, developed the argument that in such a case it was up to the state to do something about it. A theory that was contrary to the ideals of the state, if spread in this manner might become dangerous. Marj Kearns, as second speaker, felt that the university should make some provision for this problem.

The opposing Queen's team argued that in denying professors their right to their own political opinions we were opposing John Stuart Mill's conception of liberty. Garnet MacDermott, first speaker for Queen's, quoted Toronto as "a hotbed of Communism". Chuck immediately refuted this argument by reference to the denial published last week in The Varsity.

Celine Sampson, the other member of the Queen's team, claimed a student was mature enough to be able to form his own political opinions. The Varsity team felt that a student was very much under the influence of his professors.

M.P.P. Urges Women Stay In Political Field

Miss Agnes Macphail, M.P.P., spoke informally to the women of St. Hilda's College last week. Miss Macphail stressed her own belief in the potential ability of women in the legislative field.

Questions directed to the speaker brought forth discussion on the uses to which married women with children could put a university education. Miss Macphail said she felt all university graduates owed some contribution to the state which pays for at least part of their training. The mother of young children, she said, should keep her political and intellectual interests alive so that she could serve the community or the central government in her later years.

Co-ops Point Way To Social Advance Says Prof. Coady

"The co-operative movement will condition people for political, scial and education action", stated the Rev. Dr. M. M. Coady to a ground of students Friday night.

Director of University Extension at St. Francis Xavier University and president of the Canadian Association for Adult Education, Dr. Coady was speaking at Tomkins House under the auspices of the Campus Co-operative Inc.

"An educator cannot teach economic co-operation," he said. "I am satisfied that the Canadian people will, if they study the situation, conclude that economic co-operation is part of social progress and of democracy. We must have a philosophy that the common people will understand. Social progress is the gradual realization of man's possibilities."

Began With Rochdale Plan

"We have to find a technique by which the common people can go into business while they work at their jobs. That technique is co-operation, which was started by the Rochdale pioneers 100 years ago and has spread all over the world. We have exemplified co-operation in every phase of activity", he continued.

Dr. Coady went on to say that democracy would be killed if we continued to identify it with "the ability to emerge from so-called lowly callings and make a hundred million dollars."

"Seven-eighths of the human race up to this day have been victims of feudalism, and we are going back to it all the time", he claimed.

"In order to build democracy you have to practise it." He went on to describe how the co-operatives were developed in the Maritimes from the investigation by the Department of Extension at St. Francis Xavier into the problem of the declining fishing villages.

Maritime Co-ops Successful

Through study groups, credit unions were organized; soon fishermen and farmers were entering into co-operative processing and marketing enterprises. The field of consumer co-operatives appealed to the coal miners, and now there are 210 stores federated into a Maritime Co-operative Wholesale. In the field of services co-ops have had spectacular successes with hospitalization and housing schemes. The aim now is to get into fields of production.

Dr. Coady believes that by working in zones, the Maritime experience can be duplicated all over Canada. "Co-operation is a kind of participated immortality . . . it is also an idea that unifies everything. It meets the needs of Canada."

Hon. L. B. Pearson Will Be Visitor To H. H. Debate

The Hon. Lester B. Pearson, M.P., Secretary of State for External Affairs, will be present as Honorary Visitor at the Hart House debate Wednesday evening.

The resolution for debate will be: "Resolved that in the opinion of this House, Canada, in the conduct of its external relations, has become a satellite state."

The motion will be moved by Mr. S. L. Endicott, IV Vic, and opposed by Mr. A. G. Douglas, IV SPS. Mr. D. J. Quigley, III SMC, will speak third and Mr. J. A. Geller, I UC, will speak fourth. Mr. G. Atlin, UC, and Mr. M. D. Brody, UC, will be tellers for the Ayes; Mr. M. K. Hicks, Trinity, and Mr. V. L. Richards, SPS, will be tellers for the Noes. Mr. W. M. Fram, I UC, will be Clerk of the House.

Mr. Pearson has served on the UN for Canada since 1945. He has been First Secretary of the Department of External Affairs, Assistant Under-Secretary and as Secretary of the Department between 1944 and 1946 he was ambassador to the U.S.

Transport Dept. Needs U of T Grads To Fill Meteorological Posts

The Meteorological Division of the Air Services Branch of the Department of Transport urgently requires the services of University graduates to fill approximately 58 vacant positions at various independent and dependent forecast centers throughout Canada and at the Headquarters of the Meteorological Division in Toronto, announced a Civil Service spokesman yesterday.

Appointments to these positions will be made immediately on the termination of the university year, May 1949. However, due to the acute shortage of qualified persons for this particular type of employment, the engagement of eligibles may be finalized at any time sub-

Campus Co-op

An Experiment In Democracy

By JACK GRAY

If you want to learn some lessons on just what we mean by the word "democracy", one of the best places to go at The University of Toronto is the Campus Co-operative Residences Inc. Set up in January, 1936, with one house and nineteen members the movement has grown through the past twelve years until this year the Co-op has 92 members living in five houses.

Both men and women belong to the Co-op, three of the houses being for male students and two for female students.

All May Be Members

Membership in the Co-op is open to all, and provides what is probably the most economical way of going to college. When they are selected, members pay $15 a year into a fund which provides the capital necessary to run the Co-op. This loan is repaid five years after membership commences. A room costs you from $10 to $13.50 a month while board charges are $28.50 a month.

At the end of each year any surplus over the actual cost of running the Co-op is distributed to members in the form of a dividend. The money paid in is about 10 per cent above cost.

Many Jobs Handled

Management of the Co-op is in student hands, the only employed persons being two cooks. The type of job that you get, for membership requires that you spend four hours a week helping run things, may run from being the general manager to scrubbing the kitchen floor. Twice a year a new slate of officers take over, in order that as many members as possible may have an opportunity to gain experience in running the residences.

More important perhaps than the financial advantages gained by members of the Campus Co-op are the intangible results gleaned from the co-operative democracy which the system is based on. Those who belong to the Co-op learn to live together and work together stressing those things they have in common.

29 Different Jobs

There are 29 different types of jobs to choose from in the actual running of the Co-op, apart from those functions which came under the head of management. Dishes are washed, breakfasts prepared, garbage taken out, floors washed. Management includes ordering supplies, getting publicity, holding social functions, and organizing a program of education.

The Campus Co-op considers it's educational program very important. Here members learn the principles of co-operation. Discussions, lectures, the preparation of papers to be read and speakers all have their place in the program. The members learn the history of the co-operative movement, and the methods of actually running a co-operative.

Have Fun Too

The lighter side of life is not neglected. Parties, dances, sleigh rides and skating parties are included. Here too economy enters the picture. A card, issued at the beginning of the year and costing a member $3 is his or her admission ticket to social functions. Each time he attends 10 cents, or 15 cents is punched on the card. If at the end of the year the $3 hasn't been all used, the remaining amount is refunded.

Another feature of Co-op living is the Health Service. Here again the charge is $3. On this amount a member may draw for medicines and small bills up to $15. At the end of the year any member having heavy hospital bills may present them to the Co-op and the remaining amount left in the Health Fund is divided equally among those presenting bills.

Responsible for discipline in the Co-op residences are Dons. House members lay down their own rules, and these are enforced by the Don.

The Co-op is open twelve months of the year. In the summer it is run as a boarding house, and dis-

Symposium

Musicians, ingenious people that they are, have found the formula for winning funds and friends all at once. In order to help raise the funds for the participation of Toronto Music Students in the annual Symposium (which brings them in contact with fellow-students from Juillard School, Curtis Institute, Yale, Eastman School and the New England Cons. at Boston) the students' organizations of the Royal Conservatory and of the Faculty of Music are arranging a series of events which make contributing to their fund an occasion for forming line-ups.

Tonight's organ recital by R. W. Ellsasser in the Conservatory Concert Hall at 5 p.m. is the first item. Ellsasser's playing and especially his improvisations are said to be quite stunning—Two weeks later, same place and time, Boris Roubakine, new member of the piano faculty, will introduce himself to his audience on behalf of the same cause.

Finally, on March 10, the works which will be contributed to the symposium (by Nimmons, Pepin, Somers, Beckwith and Freedman) will be performed for Torontonians. In a way, this is the most important feature of the series, because it will give us a chance to find out about the scope of the whole effort.

It is very important indeed that the local deputation should be enabled to got to Boston in sufficient numbers to make adequate participation possible. There is no better cure for the American tendency to think of this country as a drab extension of the Ozarks and for the inevitable temptation for those thus classified to become convinced that it is true.

Prize Plays

Ambitious and encouraging were the three one-act plays presented by the U.C. Players Guild for the Robin Godfrey prize in the theatre of the Women's Union last Thursday night. The first play on the bill, Hugh Shaw's Double Engagement was held together by the author's sense of cosmic irony. It is concerned with the conflict between a man's duty as father and as commander of an air force station. By obeying the higher duty, the hero Buckley (Alvin Shaw) sends his son, who was to be married the next day, on a suicide mission, and sacrifices the life force of young love to the insatiable destructive forces of war. Whether the father is justified is never resolved. Despite the rather encumbered stage, the actors played their roles with sympathy and consistency.

In contrast, the winning play, Alec Dixon's Bonanza was a comedy of manners, well constructed and themeless. Centring around Mrs. Robins' winning $2,400 in a radio contest for guessing, in two out of three tries, who discovered America, the plot allows ample scope for Blondiean farce in the stock characters of a dressing-gown clad widow, Mrs. Robins (Isabel Ward), her glamorous light-headed daughter (Joyce Kamins), her bruiser teen-aged son (Murray Cohl) all delightfully portrayed. Thanks to the fast pace and excellent direction, the play moves swiftly through its many and entertaining complications.

More ambitious, Raymond Baker's Farewell Hope develops a Beaudelairean symbolism. It contains an artist Newton, brilliantly acted by Christopher Taylor, in search of the ideal which he thinks he finds in Lucy. But Lucy is carnal lust who combines with Evans (absolute evil) to destroy Newton's painting. The play seems to say that the ideal can never be realized. With the realistic portrayal of the three characters and the austere set, the play held its Beaudelairean atmosphere throughout. But here as in Double Engagement, we are brought to the peak of an emotional crisis, and left on the pinnacle with no final resolution.

Erna Sack

Presented by L'Association des Concerts Classiques de Montreal, Erna Sack, coloratura soprano, was heard at Massey Hall last week.

To an enthusiastic capacity audience she sang a varied program starting with two arias, one by Gluck, the other by Giordani, continuing with the Bell Song from Lakme, four Schumann songs and the rest 19th century songs ending with Voices of Spring by Johann Strauss.

The enthusiasm of the audience was not shared by this reviewer. Miss Sack, very obviously has an excellent voice even now, though she should use it cannily and perhaps not give a program which places such a strain on her vocal apparatus. As far as diction and pronunciation were concerned, her German songs were best. It is apparent, though, that her ability is best shown in the pyrotechnic displays of the high C region and not in the interpretation of Schumann songs.

The high-wire acrobatics of a coloratura, just like pure high notes of a flute, do not, by themselves, constitute music. The artist able to draw the most perfect circle free-hand, is not necessarily a second Rembrandt nor even a draughtsman.

J. T. Dentay.

Frederick Skitch

In his recital on Saturday night at Eaton Auditorium, Frederick Skitch showed that he was a competent if not a fully mature pianist. The music he plays best is that of Bach, Couperin, and I expect, Scarlatti.

His performance of the "French Suite No. 6" by J. S. Bach was very good. An emphasis was made upon the lyric qualities of Bach and this is an interpretation which is not heard as often as it should be. Too often a musician will regard Bach as an austere and coldly formal composer. He will play with too much restraint and lose the beauty of them usic.

Surprisingly, Mr. Skitch lost nearly all the lyricism of Schumann's "Symphonic Studies", partly because of an exaggerated rhythm in the left hand. His Chopin group was much better, the "Nocturne in D flat Major" being played with exactly the right intonation in the descending passage. The last number, Liszt's "Mephisto Waltz" was given a whirlwind performance.

BETTSON RETORT

The Editor, The Varsity:

When the University Extension Players chose Daphne DuMaurier's The Years Between for a vehicle we realized that such a quiet and subtle English domestic drama might well pass over the heads of a Toronto audience. Yet it is such a fine play that with the excellent group of English players in the drama classes it was felt we should risk the danger of an unresponsive audience.

To our surprise the audience were gripped by the intense emotional drama of this problem play and that mysterious, magnetic communion between actors and audience which is the essence of true theatre did take place. Both members of the cast and the audience remarked upon this fact. Then too, ripples of amusement at the quiet, dry humor swept the theatre.

Your reviewer, Mr. Bill Gagnon, apparently was in a minority of one in not appreciating the play. He would appear to be ignorant of the finer subtleties of acting or attracted by serious theatre which requires a little thought and concentration on the part of the spectator.

Just to keep the record straight with your readers, it should be pointed out that Miss Joan Ridewood, the leading lady, far from being a beginner, has had several years experience with repertory companies in England, and is a polished actress. Likewise Mr. Michael Hamilton has played repertory in Belfast, Ireland. Far from being miscast the players fitted their roles so well the director might more properly be charged with type-casting.

The reviewer also does not know English clothes or English furniture when he sees them because they were specifically chosen because they were both recently brought out from England, and were the type worn and used by English upper class people.

He would in addition appear to be unaware of the modern trend in the theatre away from realistic sets. Curtains, of course, require more imagination from reviewers than the exact reproductions of the movies. It would be nice to build a replica of an English library-drawing room, costing several hundred dollars (if we had the money) but it would only enhance the production slightly. The play itself and the acting are what interest discriminating theatre-goers. The lighting was set by the New Play Society's lighting expert who did an excellent job.

It seems a shame that a young company so full of promise should be maligned by a smart-alex reviewer who missed the entire point of the drama, when the rest of the audience thoroughly enjoyed the production which was attested by the prolonged ovation at the final curtain. It might be a good idea if some Varsity reviewers took a course in Modern Drama.

George E. Bettson,
Lecturer in Drama,
Department of University Extension.

Ed.'s Note: Pending the invention and perfection of a "magnetic - communion" meter we shall have to rely on the judgment of human reviewers. Bill Gagnon qualifies for the first half of the "smart-alex" epithet. He won the Robert Godfrey award for one-act plays in 1947/48 and has directed as well.

The Editor, The Varsity.

It was truly a shocking indictment of the official attitude of a portion of our youth and of the Liberal Party, to see the CCF Bill Respecting University Education defeated by the Liberal opposition at the Mock Parliament.

For surely one has had the impression that the Liberal Club on the campus were in favour of more government financial assistance to all capable students. But the defeat of this progressive measure will preclude the possibility of our approaching the Government at Queen's Park this session and asking for a similar bill to be introduced.

Let those "Liberals" remember that when the University itself required financial assistance, it went all out to secure it.

But at least it WAS shown to the people of Ontario just where the Liberals DO stand on progressive legislation.

fit you in your course. For example, a political science student might well read an article entitled— "I was Chief Cook and Bottlewasher at the White House".

5. Go to a Movie—This is such a common means of avoiding study that it would not deserve mention here were it not for the fact that we wish to point out that movies can be made legitimate time wasters with the use of the educational theme. That is, pictures in many cases can strengthen one's knowledge of one's course or prove of benefit in developing an all-round social life. For example, a Medsman majoring in obstetrics might well see "When My Baby Smiles At Me" or a Modern History student could take in "Forever Amber".

6. Draw up an Equipment List—i.e. make a list of things necessary to have on hand before starting to study. This can be made extra-effective by the inclusion of scarce items such as a bottle of purple ink, or a mickey of Hennessy's Three Star.

And in closing, a bit of parting advice—Get these suggestions into play as soon as possible—remember, exams start in 75 days.

When asked if this was meant to infer that Campbell had gone into debt as a result of card losses to Beckett, these sources said "Inferences!! Anybody can infer things. To KNOW, that's the difficult part."

Sources close to Campbell refused to comment other than saying that Campbell's excuse about the psychological experiment sounded logical. It is common knowledge, they said, that for weeks Campbell has been expounding a thesis concerning the inability of witnesses to a crime to adequately and accurately describe later what took place.

Beckett declined to comment on the incident when reached last night by The Varsity. To all questions he said he would have to consult his lawyer before issuing a statement on the attempted hold-up.

Hart House Announces Annual Camera Display More Entries Desired

"The exhibit to be hung in the Art Gallery of Hart House from Feb. 21 to March 5 is likely to attract more visitors than any other art show of the year," said Graham Rice, III U.C., Exhibition Manager of the Camera Committee of Hart House. It will be the 27th Annual Exhibition of Photographs arranged by the committee. The secretary of the committee, Ray Wolfe, IV M. & P., said, "Photographic shows always attract large audiences because photography is an art, as any cameraman will tell you, but it is an art that can be at least partially appreciated even by Skulemen."

Members of all faculties, from freshmen to professors, have contributed to Annual Salons in the past. Last year 250 prints were received, including a few color prints, of which the committee selected about 100 for the exhibition. So many color slides were received, that this year only six may be submitted by one entrant.

This year the prints will be selected and judged by a jury of three distinguished photographers, and the slides by another. Their names are being withheld to increase the suspense for those who have been invited to the Private View on the opening night of the exhibition.

All members of Hart House (Toronto and Ajax) may enter the competition, and entry forms may be obtained at the Hall Porter's desk. The closing date is Friday, Feb. 18, at 6.00 p.m.

fensive pattern and when they d, the Queensmen were so sur- ised that their shots were usual- way off the hoop.

And when they did get in close r a shot on the Varsity hoop, me terrific rebound work by big oug Tyndall, Bill LaChance and ohnny McManus soon deprived e Gaels of their advantage of session of the pill.

Blues Hot in Second

The Blues were leading 25-19 at e half—would have had a bigger ad but for some poor shooting of eir own and some loose defen- ve play in the closing minutes of e half. Then in the early stages the second half, the Blues got d-hot as they held Queen's prac- ally scoreless while running in me fast hoops themselves, main- off the fast-break. At one stage the second half, the Blues were 44-22.

Centreman LaChance sank the cest hoop of the game midway rough the first half when he pot- a beautiful left-hand hook ot from the front edge of the eyhole.

Brennan Fakes Play

Brennan pulled off another nice ay later in the second half when e faked husky 6' 2" Lampman, ueen's guard, so thoroughly on a st cut-in under the Queen's oop that Lampman went sprawl- ng head-over-heels over Bran- nan's back. Eddie was awarded two free throws on the play.

Doug Tyndall played a good game for the Blues, sank six points and fought for every rebound, es- pecially under the Toronto hoop Jack Gray also potted six points, all of them on foul shots. Gray sank five in a row in the second half.

Pettinger Sets Up

Glen Pettinger, usually a high scorer, had a relatively poor night in getting only five points, but set up his mates on numerous occa- sions. McManus and Stockman also played well.

For Queen's, Jim McNiven and Orm Weir looked as if they knew what it was all about. McNiven paced the Gaels' offence in the second half—sank 14 points to lead the homesters.

Summary:

Toronto — Pettinger, 5; Adams; Brennan, 22; Volpe; Tyndall, 6; LaChance, 5; Zeaton, 4; Stockman, 2; McManus, 4; Gray, 6. Total, 54.

Queen's — McNivin, 14; Bland, 2; Logan, 1; Soutter, 3; McLaugh- lin; Bahner, 6; Weir, 6; Dobbins, 3; Lampman, 2. Total, 37.

McGill Nabs Gym Title After 17 Year Wait

Montreal, Feb. 14—(Staff)—For the first time since 1932, the McGill gymnastics team won the Caron Cup, the Senior Intercollegiate tro- phy, as they defeated the Univer- sity of Toronto team, 113.5 to 106.5 in Currie gym Saturday night.

John Laxton of Toronto walked off with the Werry Cup, emblematic of the individual high score of the meet, with a total of 32.5 points. Laxton also placed first in the mats division.

Second and third spots went to Cochrane and Pavio respectively of McGill. Joe Humphrey, of To- ronto, by winning the high-bar di- vision, edged Barret of McGill for fourth place in the individual scor- ing race.

Blues Capture Fencing Crown

Montreal, Feb. 13 —(Staff)—For the second consecutive year, Varsity swordsmen won the Charles Wal- ters Trophy, emblematic of the Senior Intercollegiate fencing championship in Montreal Satur- day night.

The Blue fencing team defeated McGill 25 points to 23 in Currie gym. George Pouliot of McGill out- scored Mark Kellow, and Jack Stansborough of Varsity to cop the individual point championship. Kellow took second place in the extra match which was held to break a three-way tie for first place.

Varsity got their margin of vic- tory in the epee class, where they outscored McGill 11-5. The McGill team had the edge in both other classes, outscoring Toronto 9-7 in both the sabre and foils class.

McGill Squashed Blues Win 5-0

Varsity made a clean sweep of all five squash matches with McGill Saturday night to annex the myth- ical intercollegiate title with a 5-0 verdict.

Varsity held a slight edge down the line of seeded squashmen. Top seeded Ernie Howard of Varsity was barely able to edge out number one Redman Ham Quainn in a match that went the limit of five games. Even closer was the joust between McGill's Dick Pearce and John Hilborn which also went five games before Hilborn got the nod. Both were fifth seeded.

Bob Puddy won his match with Red Quainn in four games, while Ken Lane and John Roy took only three frames to down their McGill counterparts.

VIC BEATS HAMILTON

Utica, N.Y.—(Special)—Victoria College Senior hockey team trounc- ed Hamilton College, 9-2, here Sat- urday night, with Vic showing a smooth-passing attack and a keen defensive game. John Scott led Vic with one goal and three assists, followed by Crawford and Lougheed with two goals and one assist each. London, Red McKimm, McLure and Hartzy contributed the other mark- ers for Vic while Sanborn and Knapp scored for Hamilton.

COLE SLAW

Will you be my Valentine? We don't know for just how many years shy, apprehensive lovers have asked this question, but we do know that persistent promotion is building the event up to nauseat- ing proportions. We think that sticky sentiment is out of place all the time, and surrounded with all the trappings of commercial glop it is absolutely unbearable. The ter- rible part of these specific days of fond remembrance is the not so subtle inference that if you do not conform you are a thoughtless, sel- fish ingrate. We know, for in- stance, that if we failed to send our mother a potted plant on Mo- ther's Day there would be cause for much mutual embarrassment even though we were thoroughly aware that our mutual affection did not require annual confirmation. We preferred the rebellious expression of the ludicrous Valentine of a few years ago. It was so much easier to express ill-will than it is to gird ourselves to douse genuine affec- tion in the vats of sentimental VERSE.

Remarks such as "What's Watson's first name, Harry?" and "Wow, their passing is as good as the Blues!" were drawn to the mouths of male spectators who watched the Varsity women's hockey team romp to a 15-0 finale over McGill on Friday. The exclamations of "Who's Watson?" were stimulated by centre Ferne Watson of the Blues who lifted nine scoring pucks into the net to pull a triple hat trick, something rare in any league. Ferne is shown above smiling at Mary Richardson, the spunky little McGill goalie who fought every second of the game, but lacked support from her defense. Seven of the goals Ferne scored against her were single-handed efforts and for several of these goals, this smooth-skating forward took the puck right from the centre face off, stickhandled it past the opposing defense and drove it high into the corner of the net. Her teammate, Alison Jeffries, rolled up the high total of four goals by her fast skating and hard shots, and the whole Toronto team showed the 1,000 fans top notch hockey. The other goalgetters for Toronto were Helen Ferguson and Alice Jameison.

Cagers Lick McGill; Take Gaels 54-37, Brennan Hoops 22

Gael Attack Weak, Blue Defense Tight

By ED VOIGHT

Kingston, Feb. 13 — (Staff)— Sparked by the brilliant two-way play of little Eddie Brennan, the Varsity Blues basketball team knocked off the Queen's Gaels 54-37 in a regular Senior Intercollegiate game before a large crowd in Grant Hall here Friday night.

Brennan was practically the whole show for Toronto, as he weaved in amongst the larger Queensmen to sink set shots and push-ups with monotonous regularity. He got 22 points all told, set up his mates for some nice hoops, and played his defensive spot well to emerge as the individual star of the game.

Gaels' Offence Poor

Queen's had little in the way of an offence. The Gaels had great difficulty in working the ball in through the Blues' tight checking

Beat McGill 52-26; Last Win There—'39

By ED VOIGHT

Montreal, Feb. 13 — (Staff)— Completely outplaying the McGill Redmen in all phases of the game, the visiting Varsity Blues cage squad, coming on strong in the second half, pasted the Montrealers 52-26 to give Toronto their first basketball victory in Montreal in 10 years here Saturday.

Not since '39 have the Blues defeated McGill right in Montreal, but on Saturday, they made no mistakes. After a rather slow start, the Blues went on to outplay the Redmen at both ends of the floor. In fact, the Toronto team got better as the game went on, and at the final whistle, were winning going away.

Blues Are Second

The Blues' lop-sided triumph kept them right in the thick of the Senior Intercollegiate basketball race. Western is currently riding along in top place with four wins and no losses. The Blues, right on the Mustangs' heels in second place with a three win-one loss standing, get their big chance to create a tie for first place next Friday when they take on Western in London Arena.

Unaccustomed to the large playing floor here in Currie gym, the Blues found difficulty in getting untracked against the Redmen—in fact, after nine minutes of play, the score read 7-5 for Toronto. At the half, the Blues were up 21-15.

Defence Stymies Redmen

Then in the second half, the Blues, led by Eddie Brennan, Glen Pettinger and Bill LaChance, displayed a quick-breaking offence and a really tight defence that had the Redmen completely stymied. So efficiently did the Blues check McGill that the Redmen sank only three field goals in the entire second half.

"Smiley" Brennan with 15 points was the big gun in the Toronto attack. Brennan started the Blues off on the right foot at the start of the second half as he potted two quick baskets within a minute and a half of play. He got a well-deserved hand from the small crowd when he went off for a breather later in the half.

Big Bill LaChance came up with one of his best games of the year to sink nine points while also playing a solid defensive game. LaChance snagged a major portion of the rebounds off the Varsity hoop. Nick Volpe broke a personal scoring drought with five points, and checked in with a good all-round performance. Bill Stockman and Johnny McManus played well for the Blues, constantly outjumping taller McGill players under the hoop.

Summary:

Toronto — Pettinger, 9; Adams; Brennan, 15; Volpe, 5; Tyndall, 3; LaChance, 9; Stockman, 4; McManus, 4; Gray, 3. Total, 52.

McGill — Duford, 8; Endman, 2; Bloom, 10; Sharpe, 1; Fraser, 2; Caldwell, 2; Flewelling; Wilson, 1; Godel; Berger. Total, 26.

Shaver Gets Title Back In Wrestling

Three senior intramural wrestling champions were crowned at Hart House Saturday night.

In the 155 lb. class, Bernie Shaver of PHE retained the title he won last year by decisioning Jules Dick from UC, with a 12-3 point margin.

Two PHE boys battled it out for the 190 lb. crown and Ed Fisher came out on top. He pinned John Flowers twice.

Other titleholders are Lubbock and SPS's Jack Kirkup who won the 125 and 145 lb. classes respectively on Thursday. No one challenged UC's Wally Cassels (145 lbs.), or Trinity's George Davies (165 lbs.) so these two round out this year's senior intramural champions. There was no heavyweight match. J. Amos and 165 lb. champ George Davies wrestled to a draw in an exhibition bout to open the card. Last scrap of the evening saw Leo Smith win a first round fall from Bill Owston of PHE to gain a berth on the intermediate squad.

165 lbs—G. Davies (Trin.) drew with J. Amos.
155 lbs.—B. Shaver (PHE) decisioned J. Dick (UC).
175 lbs.—H. Graham (UC) beat L. Smith (Ajax), one fall.
190 lbs.—E. Fisher (PHE) beat J. Flowers (PHE), two falls.

Girls' Badminton Won By Western

London, Feb. 13—(Special)—The Varsity women's badminton team tied with McGill here this weekend for second place in the intercollegiate meet which was won by Western.

The Western first and second singlists, Doris Grey and Betty Thomson, went through all their matches unscathed to give the Londoners eight of their nine points. Toronto and McGill were right behind them with eight points each. Three points were garnered by Queen's, two by McMaster.

The Varsity doubles team of sisters Mary and Elizabeth Russell won all their matches easily.

Varsity singlist Mary Matthews added up the highest score against Western's Doris Grey and was inched out by McGill's Betty Evans, 11-5, 14-13. Claire Jewett, the second blue and white player, was shuttled out twice in close matches against Western (11-1, 12-11) and Queen's (11-8, 11-7).

Carabin Tie Is Cinched

Montreal, Feb. 13 — (Special)— Montreal clinched at least a tie for the intercollegiate hockey championship with a 6-4 triumph over McGill here Saturday night. Pinard and Emblem each clicked twice for the winners, while Day and Perreault added the others. Robillard scored twice for McGill and Roy Sinclair and Charlie Hayward added the others.

Crown 8 In Senior Boxing

By JOHN KENNEDY

The Senior Interfaculty boxing tournament was completed Saturday at Athletic Night with eight champions being crowned. Hank Henshaw and Carl Leprich were the only champs from last year to repeat.

Two of last year's winners became ex-champs when Tim Turner beat Rod MacLennan and Tony Lee defeated Clem Scott. The bouts all ended in decisions except the 175 pound affair which resulted in a TKO when Scott was not allowed to come out for the second round due to an eye injury.

The most gripping fight as far as the large crowd was concerned was the fray between Dave Geary and Carl Leprich in the 140 pound class. Leprich won a terrific fight over his shorter opponent by only the narrowest of margins. Geary was exceptionally fast and adept at coming off the ropes in a manner most disconcerting to Leprich. In the third round Geary had the UC man completely baffled with his lightning fast left hook and ability to back pedal without getting hit. Leprich came out fast in the last round and displayed wicked left hooks and jabs, but Geary was all heart and the fight could have gone either way.

Green Stalks Toy

Norm Green (Ajax) waited until the fourth before making sure of a decision over Sam Toy (SPS) in the 155 pound event. It was pretty even until the last round when Green took advantage of Toy's low-slung guard and hurt him with a savage left hook.

The McIlrath—Patrick go at the 165 stage was the dullest fight on the card with Medsman McIlraith winning only the first round.

The 175 pound classic was an abbreviated affray, Toney Lee (UC) winning a TKO over Scott with a rapid left jab that succeeded in cutting Scott's right eye badly enough to have the fight stopped.

That old smoothie, Henshall had no trouble in getting the nod over Jack Betz (UC), in fact he seemed to toy with him in the third round. Hank drew blood in the second but didn't move in for the finish.

John Hilliker won an action-packed joust with Gord Coggins (Vic) in the 133 pound match. Hilliker is another southpaw and is an aggressive fighter. He scored a knockdown in the second round, and again in the fouth.

The finale was the heavyweight contest between Rod MacLennan (Ajax) and Tim Turner (Trinity) in which the latter "emerged victorious." MacLennan seemed to have the edge in the first round or two but Turner started to use his superior reach in the last rounds and landed often with a very accurate left jab that took the starch out of MacLennan's attack.

Blue 2nds Top Title Break Swim Record

Sharp Nips Crown In TSC Girls Meet

Collingwood, Feb. 14—(Staff)— The four members of the Varsity women's ski team took the first, second, fourth and fifth places in the Toronto Ski Club Ladies Championship races here yesterday.

Anne Sharp, I PHE, won the championship with a combined time of 217.4 seconds, not quite two seconds less than the time of Conn Sparrow, III UC. Anne won the downhill in 60.4 seconds, with Conn right behind with 64.3. Then Conn sharpened up her edges to take the slalom down the 'Schuss' 2.3 seconds faster than Anne.

Pat Ellard and Margaret Ann McKee were close behind their teammates in both events, placing fourth and fifth respectively in the combined.

Two records were broken, one by Toronto, as Varsity won the intermediate intercollegiate swimming title in Hart House Saturday night.

The Blues piled up 41½ points on five firsts and liberal sprinklings of seconds and thirds in the nine events to capture the championship. Western was second with 33 points, OAC third with eight, and McMaster fourth with 3½.

Varsity's Lyons sliced two-tenths of a second off the old record of 1:14.2 in the 100 yard back stroke. In the 200 yard breast stroke, McFadzean of OAC broke the record of 2:48.6 which he set last year.

Along with Lyons, Dr. Jones was the hero of the piece from the Toronto point of view. Jones placed first in botah the 220 and the 300 yard free style events to become the only double winner of the night. Wortley of Varsity won the diving, and the 300 yard medley relay team of Currie, Lloyd, and Lowndes placed first for the other Varsity win.

Western took top spot in the 50 and 100 free style and in the 200 yard sprint relay. OAC won the 200 breast stroke. McMaster placed in only two events and won none.

300-Yard Medley Relay—1, Toronto; 2, Western; 3, OAC. Time—3:40.8.
220-Yard Free Style—1, Jones (T); 2, Schreiber (T); 3, Johnson (W). Time—2:43.1.
50-Yard Free Style—1, Work (W); 2, Horne (W); 3, Lowndes (T) and Scott (Mc) tied. Time—26.6
Diving—1, Wortley (T); 2, Carroll (Mc); 3, Galbraith (W).
100-Yard Free Style—1, Sanborn (W); 2, Johnson (W); 3, Lowndes (T). Time—1:09.
100-Yard Back Stroke—1, Lyons (T); 2, Bending (W); 3, Beverly (T). Time—1:14.0. (New record).
200-Yard Breast Stroke — McFadzean (O); 2, Lloyd (T); 3, Leber (O). Time—2.46.2. (New record).
300-Yard Free Style—1, Jones (T); 2, Schreiber (T). Time—3 58.7.
200-Yard Sprint Relay—1, Western; 2, Toronto; 3, OAC. Time—1:50.

Debate Trial Of Cardinal At LPP Forum

At an L.P.P. open forum held yesterday students from St. Michael's College censured the communist party in Hungary for their action in the recent trial and conviction of Cardinal Mindszenty. The speakers were invited to the forum in order that opinions contrary to those held by members of the L.P.P. party might be aired.

Newsmen Handicapped

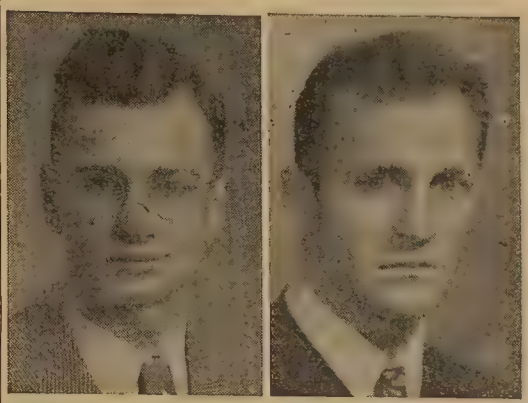
Mary Novak, IV St. Michael's, claimed "in spite of general belief" that the trial had been reported by unbiased members of the press, such had not been the case. "Members of the press who attended the conference were not familiar with the Hungarian language and were obliged to rely on translations supplied them by Hungarian observers at the trial," she said.

Miss Novak stated, further, that newsmen at the trial had been obliged to sign a declaration to the effect that the trial was fair and that they would report it as such in their coverage before they received Hungarian government approval. "One member of the British United Press was refused admission to the trial on the grounds that he had refused to sign this statement," she said. "It was thought that he could understand the language of Hungary."

Says Cardinal Liberal

She quoted a speech made by Stalin in which he was reported to have said, "The Communist Party cannot be neutral toward religion and must carry on a definite anti-religious program."

"Realizing that Mindszenty was to be prosecuted in the traditional communist method with charges of Fascism and Trotskyism, the Hungarian communists trumped up civil charges in order to remove him," declared Miss Novak.



Norm Endicott, III Vic, stated that in his opinion the discussion had ignored the thinking of the Hungarian people who, he said, considered Mindszenty a German who had been displaced by the Nazis only because they wanted his home for a headquarters. Endicott pointed to the trial as an example of advancements made by the Hungarian people along political lines.

Tried On Civil Charges

"A member of the present Hungarian government was imprisoned as a communist 24 years ago," said Endicott. "Now they must try Mindszenty on civil charges and not as a leader in the Roman Catholic Church."

Other speakers claimed the Hungarian Government was not a government representing the people of the country. For this reason, they said, Cardinal Mindszenty had not been morally at fault in opposing it.

University Delegates

Pictured above are Ed Eberle, III St. Michael's, and Al Noble, IV, UC, the two Hart House Debaters being sent as a team from here to participate in a series of debates in the United States with such universities as Wisconsin, Notre Dame and Michigan. The whole tour will last a week and will take in four states.

Hart House Debating Team Leaves For Tour In U.S.A.

The Hart House debating team, comprised of Ed. Eberle, III St. Mike's, and Allan Noble, IV UC, left Union Station last night at 11.30 for Chicago and Ann Arbor on the first lap of their debating tour.

They debated with the University of Michigan on the topic "Resolved that the United Nations should be resolved into a Federal World Government" yesterday afternoon. This afternoon they will be in Madison, debating with the University of Wisconsin on the same topic. They will be debating with Notre Dame and the University of Illinois on Wednesday and Thursday.

On Friday they will take part in a panel discussion at the University of Chicago. Their topic will be "Resolved that the growing socialist trend in the United States and Canada is desirable". On Saturday they arrive back home in Toronto at 10.20 p.m. at Union Station.

Al Noble is a fourth year student enrolled in Political Science and Economics at the U. of T. He spent 3½ years in the Air Force as a radar officer. He has spent his summers while at the University as a labor organizer with the CCL, and has completed several courses in Industrial Relations. He hopes to continue his affiliation with the unions after he graduates.

Ed Eberle is in the third year of the same course. He is interested in International Relations and has been active in the Political Science International Club and the ISS. Last summer, on a tour sponsored by the International Students Association, he visited many European universities while travelling through France, the Benelux countries and the United Kingdom.

While in the United States the team will stay at Student Unions at the various universities.

Different Procedure

The Toronto team will be at a disadvantage while in the States because a different type of procedure is in use at the universities they will visit. In Hart House debates, the Parliamentary system is used, while in the American colleges a "judged debate" form will be in use. This is a more formal and mechanical type of debate where all the pertinent data is gathered beforehand and is available in a card-index during the debate.

Eberle and Noble were picked on a basis of debating potential. They were given a rigid, two-week training course before they left for the American Universities. Carmen Guild, Hart House secretary, emphasized that this is not a contest, but a debating tour.

Say UBC Open House To Be 'Biggest Yet'

Vancouver, Feb. 14 — (CUP) — The University of British Columbia has completed plans for the largest Open House Day in its history. Guides, information booths and even a nursery with trained nurses in attendance to care for visitors' children are being provided to encourage attendance of the public.

Eight million dollars' worth of buildings and equipment will be on display for visitors, as well as an extensive display of scientific and art material.

Victoria Debaters Reject Gov't. Bill For Conscription

A motion by the House supporting universal military training was defeated by a vote of 21 to 12, at a lively session of the Victoria College Debating Parliament last night. Speaker of the House Gord Milling was forced to call for order on more than one occasion. The wording of the motion was: Resolved that Canada institute Compulsory Military Training.

Pilot Training Inadequate

Gord Thompson, introducing the motion, said it was not intended as a preparation for war, but as long as there is the possibility of an attack from aggressors, it is common sense to formulate adequate training. He cited figures to prove that the present pilot training is inadequate, and that during World War II young pilots were sent overseas under-trained.

Harry Green, first speaker for the Opposition, said military training has never prevented war, but has been followed by war. France, with compulsory training for 16 years, was overrun four times; Germany was defeated twice in 30 years. He said army life saps initiative, discourages free thinking, promotes wastefulness and is undemocratic; and health, discipline and social adjustment can be brought about in ways more conducive to peace.

Points To Mindszenty

Mac Allen, second speaker for the affirmative, said Canada can not uphold its share of the Atlantic Pact with the force it has now. If we don't fight Russia, he said, we will be faced with the same kind of thing that happened to Cardinal Mindszenty. He stated that even the narrow view of self-preservation would probably make the French Canadians support universal military training. Further, he said the Catholic Church would direct the French Canadians to support military training to fight against communism.

Rolly Parker, second speaker for the Opposition, said arming to the teeth will not prevent war, but if self-defence is necessary, atom bombs, guided missiles, jet planes, etc., make large armies obsolete. Military pacts, standardization of equipment and co-operative development of weapons is sufficient defence, he said, and added that Canada's economy would be unset by universal training.

Annual Meeting Of Young P.C.'s To Be At McGill

The third annual meeting of the Progressive Conservative Student Federation will be held at McGill University in Montreal over the week-end of Feb. 26, 27 and 28, Allan F. Lawrence, III Victoria, President of the Student Federation, announced yesterday.

Delegates are expected from a number of the Progressive Conservative Clubs, which have been formed on campuses all across Canada. They will meet to discuss political activities at the different universities. The Progressive Conservative Club of McGill, under the presidency of Jeff Turner, will be acting as host to the visitors.

George Drew, recently chosen national leader of the Progressive Conservative Party, and Mrs. Drew are expected to attend the conference, Lawrence said. Several other members of Parliament, including J. M. MacDonnell, M.P., President of the Dominion Association, E. D. Fulton, M.P., President of the Young Progressive Conservatives of Canada and Renaud Chapdelaine, recent victor in the Nicolet-Yamaska by-election, will be at the conference, he said.

The conference will begin in the McGill Union, Friday evening, Feb. 25. Saturday, a buffet luncheon is scheduled. Saturday afternoon, a public meeting will be held in the McGill Union, when the prominent guests will address the students.

The Student Federation was set up in Ottawa in March, 1947, when students representing nine different university groups attended the annual meeting of the Y.P.C.'s of Canada. "The Federation is an autonomous group and strictly a student affair. Many of its last year's resolutions were incorporated in the national party platform," Lawrence said.

The officers of the Federation are: President, Allan F. Lawrence, University of Toronto; Vice-President, Hugh J. Whalen, University of New Brunswick; Secretary-Treasurer, Ian Campbell, Carleton College.

Plan Botany Conversat To Illustrate Aspects Not Familiar To Layman

Plans for a botany conversat designed to illustrate the progress and development of the botanical sciences in language understandable to laymen were announced yesterday by Dr. H. M. Good of the Botany Department.

The conversat will be held in the Botany building on March 4 from 7: 0 p.m. to 10:30 p.m., and March 5 from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., under the auspices of the Biology Club.

Dr. Good said, "This display is part of the university's contribution to man's fight against disease and want, and will illustrate the relatively unfamiliar aspects of botany in such a way that extensive scientific knowledge will not be needed to grasp their significance."

Guides will be available to conduct tours. Admission will be free.

Dr. Good gave the following outline of how the conversat will be organized:

There will be nine displays, including cytology and genetics, physiology, ecology, morphology, taxonomy, plant pathology, forest pathology, a greenhouse display and films about these topics.

The cytology and genetics display will be directed by Dr. J. G. Wright and Dr. K. H. Rothfels and will concern heredity as shown by study of plant cells.

Dr. G. H. Duff and Dr. D. F. Forward will preside over the physiology show. It will consist of a study of the chemical and physical operations carried on inside the plant.

JCR Counter Man

Surveys Students Over A Mustard Bowl

By BILL GAGNON

Tap tap tap . . . tap tap tap . . . tap tap . . .

Jack Osborn cut the last hot-dog roll, then went to the counter expecting to find a horde of students drooling for coffee. Instead he found one lone "shmoe", haughty and imperious, arrogantly tapping the counter.

"Yes?" said Jack to the puerile, fuzzy-cheeked student. From the looks of him he wants to buy the place out, Jack thought.

"Three cents back on the bottle and how about stepping it up? I'm in a hurry!"

Here I am with only four 11-cup coffee-makers, a roaster that's half big enough for the dogs and rolls, and about fifty students coming in the few minutes wanting service and that young pup thinks he's in a hurry.

"Here you go," he said, passing the three cents to his nibs across the counter. I've seen plenty of kids grow up, he mused, what with two boys and three girls of my own, and fourteen grandchildren besides, but some of these young'ns take the cake,

"Could I have a cup of coffee, please?"

"Make it two."

The rush has started, Jack thought. "Cream and sugar?" he asked.

"Please."

"Yep."

It's times like this, he thought, I wish I'd stayed in England. He remembered his childhood in Brighton, Sussex, where he was born, the son of a carpenter, sixteen years before the turn of the century.

"One hot-dog and two cokes here, Pop."

I didn't get any back talk from the horses when I was a groom over in the old country. Didn't make much money, but it was enough to get married on. I even scraped up enough to come to Canada by the time I was twenty.

"Two donuts and a bottle of milk, please." The speaker was a COTC trainee, looking as sharp as possible in his uniform.

Reminds me of the old days in the Dragoons, thought Jack. I wonder if he'll stay in as long as I did. Thirty-five years is a long time. I hope he doesn't have to go through two wars. I didn't really mind it so much for myself this last time, though. The Paymaster's office from '39 to '47 wasn't as bad as the cavalry in 1914.

"Do you sell Cutex fingernail polish? Windsor Rose?" asked a sweet insipid young thing.

"No. Not here," Jack said.

"Well, I'll just have a chocolate malted."

"Sorry, we just have hot-dogs, donuts, cakes, bars, cigarettes, chewing gum, coffee, cokes and milk here."

"Well, they told me I could buy anything at the Snack Bar in the UC Junior Common Room. I guess I'll just have a stick of gum."

They haven't changed much. She reminds me of one I met when I was working in the machine shop just after I came to Toronto. Only she was behind the counter instead of me. It was at that little restaurant across the street. If I hadn't already been married to Ma I might have taken a shine to her.

"Coffee, cream and sugar, please."

This gets kinda tiresome, being on my feet all day, he thought. Be glad when I get home. Guess I'll listen to the hockey game tonight. I suppose one of the kids will come over and bring the young'ns. Ma won't let them bother me, though. Seems like I can hear Ma saying right now. "You know you can't get him away from the radio when there's a hockey game on."

"Well, how's it today, Jack?"

"Oh, it's you, Mike. Oh, about the same as usual."

"Well, you can go get your lunch now. I'll try to hold her down till

Hatred Towards None

National Brotherhood Week begins next Monday but obviously the people of Edmunston, New Brunswick, haven't heard about it yet.

According to newspaper reports the worthy citizens of Edmunston last Friday stormed into a private home, removed four inhabitants, and forcibly hustled them out of town. While the four victims were leaving with dire threats still ringing in their ears, a mob of more than 300 people threw carton after carton of their literature into a huge bonfire.

The four persons were not criminals. They had done nothing illegal. They had committed no evil. They had done nothing to harm the people who rose against them.

But they were members of Jehovah's Witnesses.

Because they dared to believe in and preach for a different religious creed, they were forcibly ejected from the community. Because they professed to teach a belief that was contrary to the belief of others, they were set upon by a howling mob.

It is difficult to understand how people who claim to be decent, law-abiding citizens can be capable of the hatred shown by the people of Edmunston.

Of all the scabrous pestilences which afflict mankind from time to time, none is more mischievous or vicious than hate. And hate based on religious persecution of this sort is the most vicious of all, not only in the grim effect it has on its victims but also in the degrading effect it has on its perpetrators. Cruel suffering is the fate of the victim. But the consuming inner rottenness and warped mentality of the perpetrator is even worse.

Its chief danger lies in its initial deceptiveness. It persuades the person whom it possesses that it is a species of justice—that the one he begins to disparage and condemn deserves his contempt and discrimination. And starting in small things it grows from disparagement to contempt to hate until soon he rationalizes lynchings and mob violence. It is easy to do. It seemed easy for the people of Edmunston.

Burning the books of Jehovah's Witnesses might not be a major conflagration. But it scatters sparks. The books burned in Germany during the early thirties left sparks too, sparks which later lit fires all around the world. The comparison may be disproportionate but if the flame is allowed to burn in the first instance, who knows where to draw the line?

In our self-righteous condemnation of abuses in other lands, we might do well to look around and correct such abuses in our own back-yard.

Cat Scores Again!!

First publication of script for Streamlined Production of "Hamlet".

"The Melancholy Story."

(A script specially prepared for The Farcity Story.)

(Open with "Farcity" theme, segeuing to fanfare of fanfares. Voices, in the distance, singing "Cheer for old Notre Dane.")

Narrator: And now, Toronto Farcity —the new, improved Farcity—the Farcity with ALL the culture — brings you . . .

Music: (COME TO ME, MY MELANCHOLY BABY.)

2nd Narrator: The MELanCHOLY Sto-o-o-ry.

Music: (Segues to theme stolen from "Lost Week-end".)

Narrator: But first—a word from our sponsor. Have you got something rotten in your state? Denmark this down in your notebook. Get a committee from the people who know about committees. The Stupids' Administrative Council has committees to suit every problem and every pocketbook. Are you worried about exams? An SAC committee will find out when they start for you, and bring you in a report by next September. Are you worried about love? Go down to your neighborhood SAC today, and get a committee to work. Then you can worry about the committee. And now . . . back to our story.

2nd Narrator: You'll remember what happened last week, if you were listening last week, which doesn't seem likely . . .

Narrator: Hamlet, a student at Notre Dane, had found out that his father who was the director of the All-Farcity Farce, was kidnapped and murdered by his brother, a Skuleman, and also the leader of an insidious union of theatrical employees. All this, of course, was revealed in the Retorter, not more than a month after it happened. Claudius has taken over the direction of the All-Farcity Farce, and is moving in on the leading lady, Gertrude. Gertrude happens to be Hamlet's mother, who has come back for her twenty-seventh straight try at Third Year Pass. Naturally, after all this time in Pass, she has no honor left to speak of. Hamlet is in love with a gal hockey player, named Ophelia. And now, we find him on the battlements, talking to his friend, Horatio . . .

Hamlet: He says he's seen it three times, I tell you.

Horatio: Ah, take it easy. Everybody knows there's no such thing as ghost-writers.

Hamlet: There are more things in heaven and earth than are dreamt of in Honor Phil. & Eng., Horatio. (A GROAN IS HEARD. IT DOESN'T COME, HOWEVER, AS YOU MIGHT SUSPECT, FROM ONE OF THE LISTENERS.)

Hamlet: Hark!

Horatio: Whaddaya mean, hark? You got a cold?
(THE GROAN IS HEARD AGAIN.)

Hamlet: Hark!

Horatio: Look, if you're just going to keep on saying "Hark!" we're not gonna get ANYwhere. Let's go over to the JCR for a cuppa coffee.

Hamlet: Look!

Horatio: Look at what? Yipe!

A SEPULCHRAL VOICE: (sings).
I'm your poor ol' pappy's ol' ghost-writer,
Known to all as a real first-niter,
If you want a play, just don't bother,
Slip me a buck, and I'll be your author.

Hamlet: Hearken, Horatio.

Horatio: Yeah, I heard. C'mon, let's go over to the JCR, huh?

Hamlet: Go you, then. I'll stay and hearken.

Horatio: O.K., Jack. But don't let the Caput find out about it. (He exits, laughing noisily.)

The Varsity Story

Behind The News

From Tip, To Reporter, To Paper

By JACK GRAY

When you pick up this paper today you will find in it something like fifteen news stories—some of them long and some short, some of particular interest to you and others that you won't even bother to read. It's Tuesday morning, and The Varsity will tell you where you can go to what today, and some of the newsworthy events of yesterday. At worst these stories will help to pass the time in a dull lecture.

News In the Making

We tend to take for granted what is ordinary. If you had gotten up this morning and looked in your mirror and found that your nose had disappeared in the night, you might be a little worried. But it was there, and so I doubt that you even thought about it. This is the story of one of those ordinary things in life—a news story.

Let us suppose, just for illustration that when you got up this morning, your nose had disappeared. Whether you like it or not you have become news. People want to know about you, why your nose disappeared, and when and where it happened.

Start Of a Story

Before people read about you and your unfortunate nose in tomorrow's Varsity a lot of things are going to happen. Stories start in different ways. Some are the result of a notice in What's On Today, a news release, a hunch, or a tip. You would probably come under the 'tip' variety. Down in the Varsity office the phone rings, and a voice tells a news editor that something has happened. A chap's nose disappeared in the night. "Oh", says the news editor and gets the particulars. Whose nose and where can we find him?

It sounds good—if it's correct. Screwy things do happen. So down in the News Book goes an entry. "Investigate report that Hector Smith's nose disappeared last night. Smith is in Pass Engineering at Wycliffe." The News Book contains a list of all the stories to be done for the next day, and its pages are dog-eared and grimy. It is read often, for it is here that the reporter finds out what stories need to be covered.

Reporter Curious

The reporter is a curious fellow with an insidious desire to know. He wants to know everything he can about anything unusual. Often maligned, little known, and usually ignored, he is the person who goes out and finds out whether there is anything to the 'tip', and if so, what?

With this particular story there isn't much to go on. First of all, he learns where Smith can be found, and starts tracking him down to get a personal interview. There are other things to worry about. Has such a thing happened before? What do authorities have to say about it?

He phones Dr. X, a world-famed authority on noses. The good doctor is surprised, but tells our reporter what he wants to know. Then come the university authorities. Have they any comment to make? Usually they haven't.

Once he has all the facts, his interview with Smith, his statements from authorities and officials, and has carefully checked everything to make sure what he will write is true, the reporter is ready to write his story.

Copy Prepared

The story when written goes to the copy desk. Here a team of "slot and rim" men take over. The story goes first to the slot man, who is the boss at the copy desk. He decides what news value the story has, where it will go in the paper and what kind of a headline it will have. He is called a "slot" man because in a large newspaper the copy desk is in the shape of a half circle, and the slot man sits in the centre with "rim" men on the other side of the table around him.

The next step is taken by the "rim" men who read the story for errors in spelling, bad English, and factual errors. If a story is too badly written it goes to a re-write man, who does it over in better English. The other job of the rim man is to write a headline for the story.

On The Varsity headlines must be written to fit the one, two or three column space they will occupy. Sometimes this is difficult, for the rim man must find a combination of words which will exactly fit

Co-op Tuck Shop History Outlined In Joint Meeting

Art Monahan, president of the board of directors of the St. Michael's College co-operative tuck shop, gave a short history of the enterprise at a joint meeting of the St. Mike's co-op and th. SCM co-op in Teefy Hall, Friday.

Two years ago, he said, a group of students started the tuck shop to fill a definite need on the St. Mike's campus, and decided to follow the Rochedale principles of co-operation.

Outlining the six principles, Monahan indicated what confused students most is that the primary aim of a co-op is not profit for the investors. St. Mike's students are asked to turn in their receipts daily and at the end of the year profits are divided up in proportion to the number of cups of coffee and chocolate bars consumed. The tuck shop, which is one of the most popular spots around St. Mike's, did over $1,000.00 business last year and expects to do much more this year.

Author, Explorer, R. M. Lower To Speak On Foreign Policy

Professor A. R. M. Lower of Queen's University will speak to the International Relations Club on "Some Issues of Canadian Foreign Policy" at Wymilwood, tonight at 8:00 p.m.

Professor of History at Queen's, Dr. Lower is a specialist in the study of Canada's growth as a nation. In 1946 he wrote Colony to Nation: A History of Canada which won the Governor-General's Medal of the Canadian Author's Association.

"Canadians are not militaristic" . . . "but they like war." By such apparently paradoxical statements he has brought a new approach to Canadian history. Dr. Lower has travelled widely in Western Europe and Russia and among other activities has explored the James Bay fisheries and served with the Navy in the First World War.

He is a prominent worker in the Canadian Institute of International Affairs, a past President of the Canadian Historical Association, past President and a member of The Royal Society.

In Maclean's Magazine, Dec. 15, 1947, Dr. Lower declared that Canada has no more chance of staying out of a possible U.S.-Russian war than North Dakota.

Hold Annual Convention Of Soaring Association

Kingston, Feb. 14 —(CUP)—The Soaring Association of Canada will hold their annual convention in Kingston on Saturday and Sunday with the Queen's Gliding Club playing host.

Canadian Gliding clubs will send approximately fifty representatives to the convention, which will be held in Hotel LaSalle. Common problems will be discussed, a new executive elected and several trophies awarded.

Widen Police Work Under Tory Gov't. Asserts Blackwell

Steps which the Ontario Government has taken since 1943 to reorganize and expand the activities of the Ontario Provincial Police Force were outlined by Attorney-General Leslie E. Blackwell last night in a speech to the Annual Banquet of the Forester's Club and Athletic Association.

Best Police Force

"It is a great satisfaction to my department that we have been able to set in force, in time, remedial measures which will give in peace and in a possible war the best possible police and fire services," the Attorney General declared.

Mr. Blackwell said he wanted to "disabuse" the minds of the Forester's from the view "placed there by newspaper accounts that the Provincial Police do nothing but strike duty." He explained that this was only one of their expanded functions. The Provincial Police are called on by small municipalities which cannot handle these problems by themselves, he stated. "We feel that we should deal with the problem of maintaining law and order in the province with a civil force rather than a military force," the Attorney General declared.

Force Increased

The Provincial force has been increased from about 500 members to over 1,000 since 1943, when the new policy was begun, Mr. Blackwell said. A modern communication system blankets the province through 11 principle radio stations, and 30 smaller stations. "The Provincial Police are able to deal with crimes anywhere in the province quickly and efficiently, and are co-operating with municipal forces to a greater degree than ever before," he said.

Make Awards

Athletic Colors were awarded to members of the Club who have earned them in the past year. Prizes won by J. C. Pringle, J. S. Morris and George Wilkes in the Annual Ring Literary Contest, were distributed.

Among the guests at the banquet were Varsity President Sidney Smith, Ontario Minister of Lands and Forests F. R. Scott, and Dean Sisam of the Faculty of Forestry.

Student Meeting Discharges Staff Of U of M Paper

Montreal, Feb. 14—(CUP)—The complete staff of Le Quartier Latin, student newspaper of the University of Montreal, was discharged at a recent meeting of the Association Generale des Etudiants de l'Universite de Montreal.

The Executive Council of the A.G.E.U.M. "considered the direction of Le Quartier Latin was not safeguarding general interest of the student members" said Jean-Gaston Rioux, temporary editor.

The paper is continuing to publish with a temporary staff. An election was held yesterday for the choice of a new staff.

Fatal Meeting

In a front page article in its most recent issue, the paper described the fatal meeting, and presented the text of the resolution as being: "Showing the present attitude of Le Quartier Latin to be prejudicial to the general interests of the A. G. E. U. M. the executive in a plenary meeting decides unanimously, by virtue of the constitution, that the present direction of the said Quartier Latin be relieved of its functions and replaced immediately by a new staff of which Jean-Gaston Rioux, temporarily, will assume the direction."

SPORTS STAFFERS

The following members of the sports staff are to report to The Varsity office at 3:00 p.m. today for the Torontonensis picture: Joan Eddis, Henry G. Westcott, Billy Ross, John Kennedy, Bob Jones, Ed Voight, Brian Land, Ed Sokolowski, Bob Dnieper, Hal Holden.

Advocates Three Measures To Stamp Out Intolerance

In connection with National Brotherhood Week, which is being held this week of Feb. 20, Miss Vivien Mahood, executive secretary of the 'Joint Labour Committee to Combat Racial Intolerance' said in an interview last week that at least before racial intolerance can be effectively combatted.

Need Reforms

The first of these reforms must be to improve the economic system. "Fear of losing one's job and not being able to get another, or fear of sickness — these help to persuade people to scapegoat others," Miss Mahood said. "Nationalizing the basic industries would tend to ease this fear". To illustrate, she said that the trend is toward socializing industry. "Co-operatives can't descriminate — they weaken themselves if they do". She said that if there was legislation for health plans, the fears out of which intolerance grows would be lessened.

Next, there must be a shorter working day, and the extra time gained this way spent in education —not formal education, but cultural. Better acquaintance with others' cultures as well as one's own tends to eliminate prejudice.

Better Housing Needed

The third reform, but not the least important, must be better housing. Miss Mahood said that poor housing is a great contributing factor to insecurity and fear.

"All these reforms contribute to modify fear — they tend to take the sting out of prejudice".

"Miss Mahood said she is definitely not in favour of assimilation. "Canada can gain a lot from specific groups. These things are too precious, we don't want to lose them. We want to accept parallel cultures and live with them."

Speaking about legislation and what has been done in this respect in some states of United States, she said we won't get legislation until we are ready for it. "Legislation is a very desirable thing, but we need adult education to get people ready for it".

You can study as an undergraduate for one year free at another Canadian University on an N.F.C.U.S. Exchange Scholarship.

Toronto Will Play Host To Inter-Varsity Plays

University of Toronto will play host to the Inter-Varsity Drama Festival next Saturday. McMaster University, University of Western Ontario and the U of T will participate in the festival.

McMaster's contribution is "Benedict" by Charles Cousely. Western's play is "The Coiner's" by Bernard Duffy. "Overlaid by Robertson Davies, the play that won the Inter-Faculty Drama Festival, is Toronto's presentation.

The festival will take place on Saturday, February 19, at Hart House Theatre at 8:20 p.m. Tickets are available at Hart House Theatre Box Office or at your college

Varsity Pucksters Meet Queen's Gaels

Meet Western In Ex. Game Hoopsters Play McMaster

The women hoopsters of the University of Toronto intercollegiate team will be giving a preview of their skills this week when they tangle with the Western team on Thursday and the McMaster girls on Saturday. The exhibition game with Western University will be just a friendly contest but should indicate the calibre of play to be seen at the coming Intercollegiate Basketball meet to be held here on Feb. 26 and 26. Both these teams will be sporting their alma mater's colors in the battle for the Bronze Baby at the meet, so the sneak preview at OCE on Thursday, at 7:00, should be of interest to the women's sports world as well as to the members of the other sex.

The McMaster game, which is a return engagement, should be a close tilt if the previous game score, 21-20, is any indication. Captain Anne Bradshaw will lead her team onto the Hart House floor against the Mac girls at 7:15 on Athletic Night.

The important event of the Intercollegiate Basketball meet will be the games. Starting on the Friday evening in Hart House at 7:30 when Queen's meets Western, and followed by the McGill-Toronto game at 8:30, the schedule will continue on Saturday morning, Feb. 26, at OCE, only to return in the afternoon to the Hart House floor. The morning games at OCE run at 9:30, Queen's-Toronto, and 10:30, McGill-Western, with the wind-up at Hart House beginning at 2:30 with McGill-Queen's, and ending with the Toronto-Western game at 3:30.

Such is the schedule for the Basketball week-end which will climax with the presentation of the Bronze Baby by Mrs. Ellsey (nee Azman) at the banquet Saturday evening.

Mrs. Ellsey was one of the first members of the initial women's basketball intercollegiate team in '21; she along with Lillian Laakso of this year's Varsity team, will have both played four years for the Blue and White.

This week will not only be important for the basketball girls, for the newly-heralded Varsity pucksters will be at Queen's this week-end. The past two years have seen invitation meets between the Victoria College women but this year the Blue and White team will do battle at Queen's.

Report On Tour of Europe Given By Marion Wallwyn

Miss Marion Wallwyn, of the Sharpe Travel Agency delivered a travelogue on her European travels to the Alpha Phi fraternity last night. The chief points of interest in her talk concerned Britain, Holland, Belgium, and Italy. Miss Wallwyn emphasized the antiquity of European civilization and pointed out its beauty and its extreme difference from our culture.

Her pictures of Britain included scenes of Robbie Burns' cottage, the Lake districts, Stirling Castle, St. Giles Church. Princes Street in Edinburgh, and the Abbey at which Sir Walter Scott is buried were also included.

In Belgium, Miss Wallwyn had photographed such historical cities as Brouges, the Venice of the Venice of the North, and Brussels.

In this part of the travelogue, however, she emphasized the beauty of the suburban and country gardens.

Her travels in France had taken Miss Wallwyn to such spots as the renowned fifteenth century castle of Versailles, and the house where Napoleon slept, the night before Waterloo.

Pictures of the peasants wearing their national costumes, in Holland, and of lordly castles in Italy, completed the evening's talk.

Editorial

Vive Levana

Women of today often fail to realize how much they owe to their immediate forebears, in the fields of both business and education. In the early nineteenth century there were few facilities in education open to the fair sex, but through the perseverence of some women, inroads into the fields of higher learning were made and today we have inherited the opportunity for education.

With respect to the attainments of those forebears it is with enjoyment that we read of the celebrations at Queen's University. Varsity women would like to join with Lady Alexander and other prominent women in extending congratulations to the inclusive Women's Undergraduate body of Queen's University on their diamond jubilee. Their motto:

Levana, levana, women to the fore,
Queen's forever, Arts forever,
Women's rights—or war.

bespeaks the determination with which the first women invaded Queen's faculty of arts in 1878.

Not only is 1949 commemorating the women who first graduated in arts, but the free women who braved the hostile attitude of the medical faculty to become doctors the same year. Of interest to the medical women on this campus would be the fact that the medical faculty at Queen's did not open their doors formally to women until 1942.

Among other difficulties experienced by the women of the Queen's campus was that for ten years they were not represented on the Queen's Journal, but in 1888, when they gained the vote in their Alma Mater Society and won a voiced on the Journal, the group also received their present name, Levano.

It is interesting to note that they accepted the suggestion of a man, a German professor. "Levano" was the title of an essay written by Jean Paul Richter, in which he prophesied "It may possibly happen in time that all the men may be engaged in a war, and peace establishment. It seems to me we should think more of educating girls to be the conductors of our business and the managers of our estate".

Queen's women's Levano is unique in its organization and common interest. On the campus its plays a role of major importance, joining together the various activities from athletics to social interests.

Here on the Toronto campus the women have their own college groups, but there is no unifying force. It is true we have a larger campus group, but the many separate college organizations and fraternities divide the Toronto women undergraduates and place emphasis on the college activity rather than the all-University ideal. This lack of unifying force has been made more apparent by such a celebration as that of our fellow-women at Queen's.

Canadian Ballet Festival Marks New Maturity In Art

By JANET HARBRON

As a vehicle of expression ballet in Canada is reaching maturity. It is attaining a selling value of its own. A field of art little recognized, and appreciated almost too late, it has developed with the mental expansion of the population. We have reached the stage where Canadian dancers, artists and musicians are prepared to convey to the Canadian public this medium with all its ramifications.

A Ballet Festival is being held at the beginning of March in the Royal Alexandra Theatre in Toronto. At last Canadian works are being choreographed . . . Canadian in their theme and in the use of Canadian talent.

New Ballet

A new ballet "The Red Ear Of Corn" is in production. A fast-moving interpretation of an Indian legend in primitive setting, it is Canadian in theme, mood and decor.

The story itself is a tragic one. A beautiful Indian princess, the first Christian in her tribe, had been promised to the chief, but was in love with a young brave of her own choice. As the sign of her betrothal to her lord she was required to present him with a basket of sacrificial fruit. She threw it at his feet; and and for this act of defiance he killed her. Where she died in a corn field her blood stained one ear of corn red.

From this tragedy of the past has arisen a modern tradition in lighter vein. If at a corn-husking bee you find the red ear of corn, you are betrothed to your beloved. The moulding of the red ear legend to the ballet medium has resulted in a series of entwining moods and impressions which run the gamut of human emotions.

Original Score

The production of a new ballet is a great undertaking. This one commenced with the composing of an original score by John Weinzweig. The music in all its forms symbolizes the development of the actual story. Fierce and pagan Indian tempos modulate to nostalgic impressions. The corn-husking bee music has all the elements of youth, fun and carefree abandon one would associate with a happy Saturday night in the country.

Precise Interpretation

Superimposed on the score is choreography by Boris Volkoff. The music, difficult to follow, has been demanding in precise interpretation. Each body movement and facial expression is designed to capture an emotion which portrays in pantomime a moving story to the audience.

As the dancers progress from the love duet to the death of the princess and the tribal dance of the braves, the primitive urgings of the music, the rhythm and wild abandon will incite disgust, hatred and anger in an audience sensitive to freedom of choice in matters of the heart.

When the legend has furiously spun its course we are confronted with a contemporary Saturday night free-for-all. Exuberance at its most explosive, the excitement and emotion of such a past-time, transferred to the medium of the ballet is a joy to behold. The choreography is precise and detailed and could only be accomplished to perfection by a man with a deep understanding of human nature and a great wit of his own.

Costumes, Scenery

The costumes and decor are done by two Canadian artists who are confronted, particularly in the matter of dress, with the need for complete expression of the Canadian environment while considering the convenience of the dancers. The work of these artists assumes even greater importance when one realizes that costumes as much as anything else will clearly interpret the story and its hidden depths to the audience.

The decor becomes symbolic not merely of the dress of a given period but of the complete social organization. In the corn-husking bee, for example, a village with all the strata of society is depicted. There are Indian, half breed families and French settlers with their comparative refinement and elegance. The color schemes are based on handicraft motifs, wood-cuts and hooked rugs. One costume is a snow scene in abstract.

But the "Red Ear of Corn" is only one segment of the Ballet Festival. This year in Toronto ten participating schools from east and west will attempt to indicate to the Canadian public the progress of ballet in this country.

Winnipeg Festival

Last year the first festival held in Winnipeg was designed to encourage existing groups and to introduce to the public the possibilities of a professional field for Canadian ballet. It was a tremendous success and it was decided to hold an annual festival. This year our city is the host, and there are five Toronto groups taking part.

The City Council has given $2500 to aid the festival and the Dominion government has provided further recognition by granting all donations as income-tax free.

Enthusiastic Reception

Enthusiasm has snow-balled. The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation orchestra under the alternate batons of Samuel Hershenhorn and Paul Scherman will provide the music for the festival. Two hours of the Ballet Festival will be produced from the Royal Alexandra Theatre.

The National Film Board has become intrigued, and since the show can't be interrupted for the purpose of making film snatches, the troupes will go back to the theatre the Sunday after the completion of the series for a special movie-taking performance.

Varsity Participants

Mildred Wickson, who teaches ballet technique and character dances at the University, feels that there is a greater interest in ballet than there was two or three years ago. Her group is taking part in the festival for the first time. This is a school which considers ballet part of a general education.

The Winnipeg ballet will do "Visage" and "Finishing School" and other groups from Vancouver, Ot-

Racial Understanding Stressed By American Anthropologist

Dr. Ethel J. Alpenfels, noted social anthropologist, spoke in the World Neighbourhood Lecture Series last Thursday evening at Northern Vocational School. Her topic was "Building Unity Through Understanding."

Dr. Alpenfels is a graduate of Washington University, and Associate Professor of Education at New York University. She is a member of UNESCO Commission of Hygiene, and consultant in Anthropology in the Inter-Cultural Affairs committee of UNESCO. A well known author and lecturer, her books include "Sense and Nonsense About Race" and "Race Against Time" and her lectures bear intriguing titles such as "Adam to Atom."

Dr. Alpenfels' sparkling personality and vital message captured her Toronto audience. She attacked the problem of understanding and appreciating the other nations of the world from a viewpoint determined by her status as a sympathetic woman and a teacher of a very new—but important science.

Unusual Career

The conditions under which Dr. Alpenfels started her career as an Anthropologist are unusual, to say the least. She was a physical education instructor in a public school in Denver, Colorado, when one day her principal summoned her to his office and suggested that further education would be an asset. Dr. Alpenfels took the hint and spent her summer in the acquisition of more knowledge. After three more years of teaching she enrolled in the University of Washington.

Evolution Myths

Returning to Denver as guest speaker recently, Dr. Alpenfels found her address captioned in the paper "Sees Need of More Education." This story illustrates one of the main emphases of Dr. Alpenfels' talk, that Canadians and Americans, and especially the youth of these nations, should be educated in the too much neglected study of man. Out of 7000 questions asked by students from all over the United States, 700 were concerned with whether man is descended from the apes. This and other myths springing from Darwin's theory of evolution are still unexploded and yet we who are in the vanguard of the Humanist nations, aspire after unity on an international level.

Facts About Race

Dr. Alpenfels dropped some revealing tidbits, such as the fact that no other race has as much hair as the Caucasian, and that beneath the overcoat of our friend from the zoo there is a white skin.

By studying the races and cultures, of the world, a new evaluation of social standards can be evolved, Dr. Alpenfels said. This will allow for the right of every race — the right to be proud of one's origins. The educated negro in the United States, for instance, has little desire to encroach upon the white man's sphere. It is the lack of mutual understanding between the two races that causes 9000 negroes to "pass" every year.

Concluding her address, Dr. Alpenfels challenged Canadians and Americans to discover the greatest basic means to the aid of humanity of the last 50,000,000 years — the discovery of the "understanding". Through understanding unity can be built, and through unity a world of neighborhoods can be founded, in which races, traditions, cultures and talents of all peoples can be appreciated and put to practical use.

VIC'S CORNER

If it's true that absence makes the heart grow fonder, we should be able to expect a warm welcome from our readers (if we may be allowed that presumption) this week. For those of you who looked in vain for the column last week, may we say that Vic's Corner, too, supports the I.S.S., and the money which would have paid for it was donated instead to that cause.

The reward for work well done is more work, and that applies to our V.C.U. Assembly, which is working overtime these days. The Acta question and the Bob were discussed at last week's meeting, the remainder of which had to be deferred to tonight. The business now under discussion concerns the Senior Stick, election procedure, and constitutional changes. Anyone who is interested is invited to come tonight as an observer. For those who feel they would like to know more about the V.C.U. and how it operates, may we recommend Nan MacKenzie's very interesting article in last Friday's Varsity.

Now is the time for all good members of 4T9 and 5T0 to come to the aid of their party, namely the combined farewell party to get all members of the class together once more before our ways part at graduation. The financial resources of both treasures will be appropriated for this gala event, which will take place Feb. 26 in Burwash Hall. It promises to be the best party of the year, and features Don Rumgay's orchestra and vocalist, food, favors, and entertainment by Jewison and Maxwell. Let's all come out for one more fling before we "pass and are forgotten with the rest."

Though you may not have heard about it, the United States was invaded last week, or at least a small part of it was, by the Sr. Vic hockey team, which played an exhibition game with Hamilton College in Clinton, N.Y., Saturday night. Besides several cartons of Camels, the boys brought back with them the spoils of battle, having beaten Hamilton by a score of 9-2. This should put them in good shape for the hockey play-offs, which begin this week. Other teams in the play-offs are Sr. Skule, Trinity A, and St. Mike's A. Schedules of the games will be posted, and we hope the team will have plenty of supporters to cheer them on.

The athletic banquet is coming up soon, and the list of color winners will be up this week. If anyone has any additions or corrections to make to this list, will he please leave a note for Al Strike in the V.C.U. office.

They say that if you think politics is easy, try standing on a fence while keeping your ear to the ground. But we'd like to remind all those who are undaunted by this warning that the V.C.U. elections are not far off. Anyone who is considering running for an office in these elections should contact members of the V.C.U. about it.

What with the year speeding along as it is, and the number of activities beginning to lessen, the Corner has dwindled down to "but a walking shadow" of its former self. We seem to have scraped the bottom of the news barrel for this week, but there will be more next week, when Stan will be with us again. For now, au revoir!

Oedipus — Critic

The New Play Society's policy of introducing contemporary plays—always respected even when the choice was not applauded by this department — has inevitably shifted the weight of attention away from the performers towards the plays. The performance of Sophocles' King Oedipus and Sheridan's Critic is a welcome occasion to restore the balance. It is good to be reminded of the high percen age of genuine talent gathered in the organization when it can find expression in established and great vehicles.

The Oedipus production impressed by being nicely proportioned within a reserved and dignified conception of the whole. Sophocles, in Yeats' fine version, has too much to say and his terms of reference are too different from ours that melodramatic sweep should be an adequate method. This, I imagine, must have been the director's (Mrs. Mavor-Moore) guiding idea and her success was assured by the actors' ability to convey sufficient variety in the comparatively low key.

Foremost, as it should be, was Glen Burns as Oedipus. He transformed full understanding into a very touching portrayal by means of great technical resources, especially on the vocal side. There was no groping, nothing haphazard about his progress towards the play's climax. It is reassuring, how much an actor can learn in a year. On the lesser scale imposed by the part Larry Henderson offered a neat, strong and engaging Creon.

The eternally difficult problem of the portrayal of old age without fuss and silliness was neatly solved by Frank Wade whose Tiresias really conveyed the terrible burden of being the spokesman of fate, and by Gus Kristjanson as the Herdsman whom I was pleased to see at last in a larger part, commensurate with his obvious talents. Josephine Barrington's Iocasta was not as even as one might have wished; excesses in gesture often obscured the better aspects of her work. Only two notes to be added: the words of the chorus tended to disappear in their beards and insufficient synchronization blurred that important part of the play. The sobs of Antigone and Ismene became a definite nuisance after a while.

Little space is left for the 'Critic'. One likes to think that it is so funny that it plays itself, but the illusion only bespeaks the ease of the production. Michael Ney's Mr. Puff should have carried off the laurels; he did not, because he put the words on top instead of behind each other and most of his mannerisms seemed unrelaxed. Frank Wade as a robust and beautifully pompous Sir Fretful was so successful in generating laughter that a longer scene would have been dangerous to wind and limb. Messrs. Legg and Beckwith (Sneer and Dangle) coped with the more difficult tasks imposed by continued presence on the stage the former having the benefit of wittier lines. Of the participants in the play within the play, there is only room for the clever feather acrobatics of Peter Mews (Sir Christopher), the romantic antics of Constance Vernon (Tilburina) and of her silent pendant Katherine Hawtrey (Confidante).

Outsiders Govern Clubs Says U. of A. Socred Head

Edmonton, Feb. 14—(CUP) — Al Schindeler, president of the University Social Credit study group at the University of Alberta, charged in a closed Socred party caucus that campus political groups receive direction from off-campus sources, the Gateway, campus paper, recently reported.

Speaking to a small group of students attending a Socred meeting from which the press was barred, Schindeler claimed U of A political groups are "governed from the outside." He revealed a series of political manoeuvres which may result in a drastic reorganization of the political situation on the campus.

Although the press was barred from the party meeting, three Gateway representatives took 16 pages of notes, unknown to those present.

They deserve our enthusiastic support. Particularly is this true since intelligent and well-educated men and women are required to carry out the sensitive details of the ballet medium. Composers for original scores are necessary. Artists are needed with a knowledge of period, able sympathetically to interpret the choreography.

Unfortunately most of our talented ballet adherents find it necessary to leave the country just as they are able to present their finest and most sensitive work to the Canadian public for approval. Surely we are ready to accept this form of art with its need for a comprehensive understanding. Let us hope it is not expression too mature for the minds of a "young" country.

The dummy shows the printer where each story will go and how much space it is to occupy. The slot man makes up a dummy for each page on blank sheets of paper, ruling in lines to show where pictures go, and where stories are located.

Since The Varsity is printed in Oshawa, the news staff and the printing staff must work by remote control, via Gray Coach Lines. We even have a copy boy who takes the edited material from the Varsity Office in the basement of University College to the corner of Bay and Bloor Streets, where it goes onto the Oshawa bus. Copy goes out to Oshawa each night on the 8.30, 10.30 and 11.30 buses.

In a further article we will tell you what happens to the story of Smith's disappearing nose after it leaves the Varsity Editorial Office, and before you pick up the paper the next morning.

Campus Shows

Saints Alive

History was made last Saturday, when "Saints Alive", a musical comedy that was as tender as a teabag and as crisp as a crumpet, opened on the Hart House Theatre stage.

It was not a college show in the usual sense of the word. It was a combination of Gilbert and Sullivan-like technique and Broadway musical style.

At all times the comedy was subtle, original, and well performed. The music throughout was fresh, bright and well sung.

The Trinity Collegers have proven conclusively that they are the only ones on the campus who can run a book type show and get away with it. Most other colleges that have tried to run a complex theme as a pattern have met with amateurish results. The credit for the plot success rests, of course, on the haloed heads of Trinity's words and music team, Ron Bryden and Keith MacMillan.

We believe that it has been a long time since the Hart House Theatre has housed such an enthusiastic audience. The usual tough and sinewy "bagel-hard" Toronto audience was actually shouting approval as well as applauding. Although it might be claimed that the audience was chiefly made of Trinity students, it seemed to us that only a basic knowledge of Trinity customs would be needed to grasp most of the satirical references.

This year's production, as contrasted with last year's "Wot No Crumpets", was greatly improved by the tactful direction of Michael Ney. Ney himself, was not in the theatre during the performance, as he was appearing in the New Play Society's production up the street. It was Ney's use of visual effects that completed the excellent script, to make a unified production.

Unlike most campus shows, "Saints" gave the lead parts to women. It might be pointed out here that it has been the habit to use the co-eds bodies only, that is in kick choruses (of which there was an absence in the opereta). The St. Hilda sisters have proven that they can carry comedy as well as their coarser counterparts.

The part of Chloe was played by Donna Haley with Ethel Mermanish vigor. We might also mention that the part itself resembled that of Annie in "Annie Get Your Gun". Dan Belaway as the Wordsworthian Daphnis Montmorency seemed to be well at home in the part. Diana Jacob's Hester was played with the proper amount of prudishness. Louella Mae portrayed by Sheila Higgins was expertly amusing.

Keith MacMillan's choral direction was enough to make father Ernest proud, we think. Although not quite a Mendelssohn chour the singers seemed to be well synchronized at all times.

The appearance of the Trinity show in Hart House marks another first of the year. Although the graduation of MacMillan and Bryden will be a great loss to the college it is to be hoped that a Trinity contribution to the Hart House college show circuit will continue.

Our chief regret is that the program booklet did not offer the lyrics of some of the excellent original songs. Like most college tunes the ones heard, although perhaps of better than hit parade calibre, will disappear into oblivion.

We think that Poppa Ernest should put son Keith over his knee for wanting to be a biologist. Any person who can turn out material like that in an age that has to go back to G & S for operetas, owes it to somebody or other to keep writing.

Harry K. Rasky.

Junior Bees League Play Benefit Hockey For Jack P. Punnett

By SAM CAMPBELL

For the last six month a quiet, grim battle has been progressing in the east end of Toronto. Yesterday, victory came one step nearer for one of the combatants.

Waging relentless war on one side are those submicroscopic germs that cause the creeping disease known as multiple sclerosis. On the other side are patience, hope, faith, medical science, a host of friends, a mother's love . . . and dark-eyed, 19-year-old Jack Parkinson Punnett of Hannaford St.

All-Around Athlete

A few months ago, Jack was the versatile athlete who excelled in basketball, baseball, football and almost every sport on the list. Hockey, however, was his first and best love. Now, all that Jack can do is lie in bed and dream of the professional career he was offered recently and that soon he will be able to walk again

"Something or somebody is going to make me better!" Jack has vowed over and over. "I feel sure of it!"

Walk By Summer

And this is the optimistic attitude which will make for Jack's final and complete restoration to health . . . the attitude maintained by all his friends, particularly his mother who says: "I have hopes he'll be able to walk by summer. Jack has always been such a clean-living boy . . . never smoked or drank. When you see these hoodlums around Toronto it makes you wonder. Yet you have to have faith!"

Yesterday it was learned that Mrs. J. B Punnett's faith had been justified. A Toronto physician, whose corrective methods have helped more than 600 similar cases, is now treating her son. He states that the youth definitely has a "fair chance for considerable benefits".

Dig Deep

Although special treatments and diets have been costly to the Punnett family, making it necessary for them to dig deep into their life's savings, there has never been the slighest murmur of discontent or unwillingness.

"The cost doesn't count as long as Jack gets well," says Mrs. Punnett. "That's all that matters, as far as we are concerned. After all, he's only a boy".

Buddies Moved

People all over Ontario have been stirred by the stories published in The Star of the young athlete's plight. Most deeply moved of all have been his buddies of the Corner Boys A. C. . . . the boys who know him personally and played on the same team with him.

In order to help finance costly medical treatments, Saul and Lou Goldberg, former Star newsies and sponsors of Jack's old team, The Corner Boys' hockey club, are working in conjunction with Father Flanagan of St. Michael's College, Warren Stevens of the University of Toronto and Stafford Smythe of Marlboro's to promote what is to be known as a "Jack Punnett Benefit Game" in Varsity Arena, Tuesday, February 22. The entire proceeds of the evening, which should amount to well over $2,000, are to be turned over to the boy's parents for use in his treatment as they see fit.

'It Isn't Charity'

Goldberg wants everyone, particularly Jack, not to think of this as charity. "Anyone who pays his 50-cents admission will see two full-fledged junior B league games—the last double-header of the season," he said. "It isn't charity, really, it's a genuine feeling surging through this community to help one of us, regardless of race or creed, who might some day be in the same position ourselves."

Through the special efforts of Ross Workman, treasurer of the "Jack Punnett Fund" and manager of Varsity Arena, the entire facilities of the arena have been donated free of charge by the board of directors of the University of Toronto. Ticket-takers, sellers, ushers, attendants, and an O.H.A. referee in the person of Percy Allen have all donated their services for the evening.

Players Pay

"Even the players will pay admittance that night," says Goldberg.

Already the feeling is swelling throughout the district, and it is backed up solidly by the Danforth-Dawes Rd. Business Men's Association.

Demand Tickets

"Tickets are in great demand already," says Goldberg, telling of how R. S. Hibbs, of the Hibbs Construction Co., started the ball rolling by purchasing a $100. strip.

It is expected that Feb. 22 will be a gala night at Varsity Arena with many notables in the sport world present, Jack Plunnett himself, if it's at all possible. The first game is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. between St. Mike's and Varsity Junior B's; the second game at 9:00 p.m. between Corner Boys and Marlboro Jr. B's.

Contributions to the Jack Punnett Fund should be mailed to Mr. Ross Workman, treasurer, Varsity Arena. Tickets will be on sale Mon., Feb. 21 at Maple Leaf Gardens, Varsity Arena, Corner Boys A. C., 2754 Danforth Ave., and later in the week at sporting goods stores throughout the city. Further information may be had by telephoning HO 0028.

PITCHING SPORTSHOES

By BILLY ROSS

They had a chance to take a good lead in Group IV of the Interfaculty Major Basketball League yesterday but the hoopsters on Trinity's A squad fell out of step and dropped their game with Pre-Meds 33-17. The two teams are now tied for leadership of the group with six points apiece. Each has won three and lost one. For the first half of the Trinity-Pre-Meds encounter things were fairly close with the winners looking only a bit better than their opponents. The Pre-Medsmen finished the half leading 11-10. After that the battle went to Pre-Meds aggregation as it doubled its first half score to net 22 points while Trinity squeezed out a meagre seven. Topping all scorers were Mitsui with 12 and Tanz with nine for the winners. Next in line was Trinity's Rogers with five.

They put a lot of effort into it but the St. Mike's A hoopsters couldn't scale the barrier that Sr. SPS put in front of them in Hart House yesterday. Out for their fifth straight win, the undefeated Mikemen put heart and soul into the game but had to quit content with a 27-27 finish. Skule's Group I squad felt that it had a lot at stake too and didn't give an inch in yesterday's most pleasing ball game. Pacing the double blue team and topping all scorers was McKeown who rang up 11 points. For Senior SPS Fletcher's seven, McLenahan's six and Pogonchef's five did the cause good. Mikemen Ryan and Figel contributed five and four points respectively to their team total.

When they hit the ice the next time the puckmen of SPS IV will be out for their seventh straight win. Yesterday they got their sixth when they smashed Meds III 6-2. Right from the start the Skulemen were keyed to a win. They scored four times in the first period. The Medsmen built their total slowly — one goal in each stanza. Killiden and Zacleri were the scorers. Winning point-counters were Coates with two goals, and Vann, Hart, White, and Harper with one each.

Lindgren, Lowndes, and Lester, each with two goals, and Mortimer with a singleton, gave the UC firsts a 7-1 win over SPS I in Varsity Arena yesterday. Curry was sole Skule scorer with a second stanza goal. The winners got four in the first.

That's Mike, always kidding, Jack thought. He's a nice young fellow, though. I like him.

"Yeah, I know, Jack, I was only kidding."

"Well, so long. I'll be back in an hour."

Most of these university kids are all right, he thought. You get one or two that are kind of uppy, but they're just the young ones. On the whole I like them pretty well.

Emblem Top In Scoring; Spence 5th

Georges Emblem extended his lead in the Senior Inter-collegiate scoring race by racking up two goals and an assist Saturday to help the Carabins in their 6-4 triumph over McGill.

These points gave Emblem a total of 22 and a margin of two over was awarded two assists in the second-place Andre Charest who was awarded two assists in the same contest.

Gregoire Giguere and Roger Pinard followed with 18 and 16 points respectively to round out the Montrealers' top four.

Varsity's high scorers, Bill Spence and Bob Henry, are tied for fifth place with 14 points each. Spence counted a goal and an assist against Queen's to catch up with Henry who assisted once. Next best for the Blues is their linemate Cec Turcott with nine points.

In the goal-getting department former leader Reggie Sinclair of McGill was forced to share with Emblem. Sinclair rallied once against the Carabins but Emblem's two goals gave him ten also.

Paul Hutzulak of the Blues still leads the active goalkeepers, but Jack Gelineau's wide lead reveals why the Bruins summoned him.

College Champeens

In spite of the fact that they had just won the senior intercollegiate fencing title in Montreal over the week-end, Varsity fencers returned to their practicing yesterday for an important meet with Wayne on Feb. 25. That's Jack Stanborough, (right), interfaculty champ who placed third in Montreal, clipping Leslie, a Grad.

Varsity Fencing Champions Spend Little Time Gloating

There was still a victory smile on the faces of the intercollegiate fencers when they returned to their practising in Hart House yesterday. But in spite of the fact that they had just won the senior intercollegiate fencing championship over McGill in Montreal over the week-end, they spent little time gloating.

Just a few minutes after the inner circle of the ten most enthusiastic of the fencing clan had arrived, Jack Stanborough pulled on his gloves and challenged all and sundry to a duel.

"There's a reason that the boys are so happy," explains supervisor Lou Smith. "That's the first time Varsity has ever won the title in Montreal. In fact it's very difficult to win a meet away from home.

Mark Kello who topped the Varsity brigade at McGill in second place left his weapons at home yesterday, and was just chatting with fencing master Charles Walters. "You have improved immensely," Walters told Kello, "and so has Gerry Belanger."

Apparently McGill masters agree with Mr. Walters as Belanger is tied with Pouliot who stood first in the meet, for the George Tully trophy which is given for style and good sportsmanship." One vote is still to be cast to decide the winner. Tully, who donated the trophy is coach of the McGill team.

With the Charles Walters cup and the intercollegiate title tucked safely away for the next year, Varsity fencers are practising for a meet with Wayne a week from Saturday. "They had better practice," admonishes Lou Smith. Wayne is rated very high among fencing schools . . . very high."

Both Need Win To Make The Playoffs

By ED SOKOLOWSKI

The Varsity Juniors again have an opportunity to show what they can do when they meet the Corner Boys in the first game of a double header at the Varsity Arena tonight at 7.30.

The Juniors head the Junior B circuit by four points and will have only three more chances to keep that lead. The Corner Boys are tied with the St. Mike's Buzzers for the second spot and it looks as if it will be a photo finish for the two top teams when the schedule ends next week.

Bees Need One More

Last season the St. Mike's Buzzers and the Varsity Juniors made the playoffs for the Good Humour Cup and the Irish took that Trophy in two out of three games. The Varsity team at the moment are at the top team and it appears that they will be one of the teams fighting for the Trophy. To make sure of a playoff spot the Bees must win at least one of the three games left.

The tilt tonight should be full of excitement. No love is lost between the two clubs and tempers usually run high. The lads from the Corner House Grill play a rough brand of hockey and they know how to dish it out. In practically all their games approximately fifteen penalties were given out by the referees.

Rough And Tough

The Varsity team aid the cause as they do not take anything from anyone and they can play rough when they need to. The Blues usually stick to straight hockey but sometimes are forced to use their weight as well as their wit.

Coach Bill Wade has the men to play a good game tonight and also men that will not take abuse. The Corner Boys must win the next two games to be in the play-offs. The game is an important one for both teams so it all adds up to be a terrific game and should be well worth the while to spend only time to see the game.

SPORTSWOMAN

Hockey

UC I clinched victory yesterday by scoring twice in the last period against St. Mike's making the score 3-0. St. Mike's efforts to retaliate were thwarted by the UC defence sparked by Dorothy Morrison and Joan Hume.

Saints Rita Bauer and Nan Goetz fought hard to break into the scoring but their team did not play well as a whole. The UC edge came to a crest in the third period when first Jean Holmes and then Helen MacDonald pulled the St. Mike's goalie to put the game "on ice" for UC.

Swimming

The intramural practice this Wednesday has been cancelled, but the OCE pool will be open on all the following Mondays and Wednesdays until the intramural meet March 5.

Varsity Rated Best For Wrestling Title

By JOHN MOYSE

"We should win again this year," said Coach Morris Sobel of the Varsity wrestling squad as he watched his charges wriggle and squirm at the Senior Interfaculty meet for the honour of representing Toronto on the Senior Intercollegiate wrestling team, and the intermediate team which goes to OAC Saturday.

Last year Varsity carried away both Senior and Intermediate wrestling championships. This year's senior bouts will be held at Kingston on Feb. 25 and 26, and Moe thinks that Bob Leewright and Dail Leonard will recover from their injuries in time to participate. Only Wally Cassels remains of last year's Blue weight winners, for Frank Campbell, Ron Taylor, and Kirk Wipper have graduated.

Coach Is Champ

Moe knows whereof he speaks for he is the heavyweight wrestling king of Toronto and Ontario. In the Canadian championships last year he placed second and injuries cost him a berth on the Olympic squad.

His blood boiled when the conversation turned to the University of Buffalo meet a week ago. "When we went to Buffalo," he said, "we agreed to wrestle under American rules provided they would observe our rules on their visit.

"American rates call for an eight man team while Canadian rules make no such stipulation. I saw their heavyweight changing in the locker room and told him we had no one to face him. 'Oh,' he laughed, 'I'm just going to do a few pushups.' Yet when they saw themselves about to lose the meet by three points they paraded the heavyweight onto the mat as eighth man and claimed five points which would give them victory."

Chesty Announces Entrants

"Chesty" Martin, supervisor of wrestling, announced last night the team that would represent Varsity at the intermediate intercollegiate meet at OAC this Saturday. Only class still in doubt is the 175 weight where either Scott or Lee may go. Scott suffered a cut eye in the interfaculty trials Saturday night and may not be ready by the week-end.

Athletic Night

Program Appeals To All

The whole student body will be beating a path to the Hart House doors to enjoy the startling, extravagant Atheitic Night that UC and their muscied auxiliary are arranging for this Saturday night.

While there is no single feature that is to be boosted for Saturday night, Walt Cassels, the gentleman in charge is exuberantly confident that the UC-PHE planned program will appeal to all tastes and types.

Lower Gym Feature

In the lower gym, the Varsity senior girls' basketball team play McMaster University. The Varsity Juniors team will play in the big gym, against an opponent who is unknown at press time.

During half time of the senior game, a special gymnastic number will be presented by some of the flashy females of PHE.

In the upper gym the fans will get a great treat watching the Varsity floor hockey team play Broadview 'Y'. Floor hockey, which is quite a stranger to Hart House, has all the thrills of ice hockey, without any of the restrictive civilized rules of that game. Floor hockey is tough and it should be exciting to watch.

Give Sabre Lessons

Other features in the upper gym will be on how to hack your opponent with a sabre in one easy lesson. Along with this there will be a gymnastic display and a table tennis exhibition by the city champions from Central 'Y'.

In the pool, the Varsity senior team will test itself against the water bugs of West End 'Y'.

An event not to be missed is the water polo game in which Varsity takes on a rugged crew from Hamilton. This will be water polo at its best and all those who follow the game should get a thrill.

Feature Insanity

The super-secretive special exhibition of aquatic skill and daring will take place in the pool between the two events. All those who have weak stomachs are urged to stay away from this fantastic show of fearlessness, courage and insanity.

In the fencing room the PHE boys have rigged up a test to gauge your agility, ability, and strength. You can take this test without having to change into gym shoes, and arrangements have been made to park your date outside, so she won't see the ridiculous marks you made.

For Non-Athletes

The usual parlor games will be found in the boxing room. The wrestling room has been converted into a lounge; here soft lights and smooth piano music will be conducive to relaxation.

For those who like exercise to music, square dancing will be held in the upper gym during the latter part of the evening. At the same time ordinary dancing will take place in the big gym.

All in all a great evening has been planned for your pleasure. Don't forget the number of tickets available has been strictly limited. Buy yours early and have fun Saturday night.

Foreign Role Of Canadians Debate Topic

Secretary of State for External Affairs Lester Pearson will be guest speaker at a Hart House debate tonight. The topic for discussion will be: "Resolved that in the opinion of this House, Canada, in the conduct of its external relations, has become a satellite state."

The resolution will be moved by S. L. Endicott IV Vic and defended by D. J. Quigley, III SMC, and opposed by A. G. Douglas, IV SPS and J. A. Geller, I UC.

Endicott will say Canada's policy on war, peace and social and economic advance shows her to be a satellite of the U.S., particularly with regard to her part in promoting the North Atlantic "War Pact"; and that her independence as a nation is being sold to the war plans of American Imperialism. He will quote the Prime Minister as having said, in effect, that Canada is so far committed to this war plan that if 11,999,999 citizens wished to remain neutral, Canada could not do so.

Vic Graduate

Douglas will say while in many cases Canada has voted with the U.S., Britain and other Western countries, it has done so because of self-interest, and that the term satellite state implies a vassal state compelled to follow the policies of another. He will give examples to show that Canada does not fall into this category.

Guest Speaker Pearson was graduated from Vic in 1919, went into the RFC and was invalided out after a crash. He had served on the UN for Canada since 1945, and was commended by the UN at Lake Success in 1947 for Canada's work in connection with the Little Assembly plan and his work on the Palestine sub-committee. From 1944 to 1946 he was Ambassador to the U.S. On the commission on Food and Agriculture in 1945 he helped draw up a long-term plan for agricultural recovery, and at Princeton in 1947 he voiced disapproval of the veto.

Canada was criticized in the UN recently by the Australian delegate, who claimed that Canada was servile to the great powers.

Br-r-r!

Student reaction to periodic cold waves took a humorous twist when even Jason appeared one morning mysteriously bundled for harsh weather. The statue, a familiar figure in the Hart House quadrangle, is reported to have mumbled through half-frozen lips: "You can't take Toronto weather for granite!"

Togas, Tunics and Tragedy Featured in Julius Caesar

This year's Hart House Theatre season will close with Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar". Mr. Robert Gill directs the largest cast show yet presented at Hart House.

Don Davis, John Walker, David Gardner and William Hutt head a cast of 38 speaking parts plus 20 citizens and soldiers. A new experiment is being tried this year in having two women cast for each of the feminine roles. The purpose of this is to give more women a chance in a predominantly male show. Scott Addresses CCF Topic—University Fees

Reid Scott, MPP, B.A., will address an open meeting of the U of T CCF Club on Wednesday, Feb. 16 at 1.05 p.m. in West Hall, U.C. His address will be entitled "University Fees".

Scott graduated from Victoria College last spring. In the last provincial election he won the riding of Toronto-Beaches for the CCF. He is the youngest MPP ever to be elected to Queen's Park. At the present time he is taking a law course at Osgoode Hall and devotes some of his time to the work at Queen's Park.

Canada Accessory In World Affairs —Professor Lower

"As Canadians, we need to accept the brute fact that we're not a great power and that our resources don't make us so", stated Professor A. R. M. Lower of Queen's University speaking to the International Relations and the History Clubs at Wymilwood last night. "We need to be content in the knowledge that we are very fortunate in respect to natural resources and that we do count in world affairs".

Two Great Powers

"The Canadian role will continue to be that of an accessory. We are important only after the decision for war or peace has been made. There are only two great powers in the world hence we are not called upon to exercise great responsibility and we won't ever start or stop a war," he stated.

Canadian are rarely ready to get down to brass tacks on foreign policy as it concerns themselves. Anglo-Canadians tend to have "a great power mentality" because of English tradition behind them. Our 13,000,000 count for more than any other group of that number, but there is need for more knowledge of geographic and historical factors.

"Canadian in many respects are chameleons. They become part of their surroundings, wherever they are, and find it hard to be themselves".

He further described Canadians as "the illegitimate children of Uncle Sam and John Bull torn between avowed and hidden respect for their respective parents".

Professor Lower regards suggestions that we will have a population of 25,000,000 in 25 years as sheer lunacy. "Such assertions insinuate the basic ignorance of this country. No one wants to homestead in the Arctic region," he pointed out.

North Pole to Hide?

He called attention to the fact that the first objectives in the event of another war would be the important ones. "The line between New York and Moscow, stretching over 4000 sea miles, is most significant. In view of the fact that the bulk of American industry lies between New York and Chicago he suggested that the North Pole might be a good hiding place. Toronto will never be

Fluoride Tests To Be Conducted By Dr. M. Cox

Dr. M. A. Cox, professor of preventive dentistry at U. of T. will supervise the study of the teeth of 600 Leaside school children. Dr. Cox will study the topical application of sodium fluoride, a chemical found in some natural drinking water, and relate it to the incidence of caries and to the lactic acid salivary count.

Funds provided for public health research under the national health plan will pay for the project.

Due to the lack of tooth decay experienced by people who drink water which contains sodium fluoride, medicine believes that the chemical might prove very valuable in preventing decay.

Teeth of school children painted with sodium fluoride will be compared with those untreated. If there are hopeful results at the end of two years the study will be continued for a period of five years.

"We will attempt to find out whether sodium fluoride reduces the number of lactic acid organisms in the saliva. It is usual that a high lactic acid count exists where there are many cavities," Dr. Cox stated.

Research into the effect of this chemical on tooth decay has mainly been confined to the U.S. The city of Toronto health department is also conducting a study.

The $100,000 set aside this year for encouragement of public health research will pay for the experiments.

Open Nominations Friday For Hart House Elections

The annual elections of undergraduate representatives to Hart House Committees will take place Thursday, March 3, it was announced last night. Nominations will open at 9 a.m., Feb. 18 and close at 6 p.m. Wed. 23.

Nomination forms are available at the Warden's Office and after being duly moved and seconded by two undergraduate members of Hart House they should be signed by the nominee and returned to the Warden's Office.

The House, Library, Music and Art Committees are open to nomination without specific qualification to virtually any undergraduate member in good standing.

Two committees, the Debates Committee and the Squash Racquets Committee are also open to any undergraduate member but in each case a qualifying statement must be signed by the nominee indicating some interest in the affairs of the committee in question. Specifically, a candidate for the Debates Committee must certify that he has spoken from the floor of the House in at least two Hart House debates this academic year or three times including last year.

Similarly a Squash Committee candidate must sign a slip stating that he has played squash at least six times this academic year and that his name has been on the challenge ladder three weeks prior to the date of his nomination.

The remaining committees for which elections are held are those of the various clubs in Hart House, namely the Camera Club, Chess Club, Glee Club, Archery and Rifle Club. Nominations for and election to these committees are confined to members of the respective club.

Each candidate may spend not more than $5.00 for the purpose of electioneering. He should also remember that his poster may not be larger than 24" x 36" and that no articles of value such as cigarettes, or chewing gum may be distributed for electioneering purposes. Blotters are the usual medium of advertising.

Hollywood Award Winner To Speak On Brotherhood

Harold Russell, ex-sailor who won two Hollywood Academy Awards for his first movie role in M.G.M.'s "Best Years of Our Lives", will be the speaker at Monday's Brotherhood Week lecture, scheduled for Monday at 4 p.m., in the Women's Union Theatre.

Russell, who played the part of a handicapped serviceman in the picture, lost both hands on active service with the U.S. Navy. His campus appearance will be sponsored by the Inter-Cultural Affairs Committee of the SAC.

Encourages Veterans

"The Years in Our Lives" will be Monday's topic. Since his motion picture debut, Russell has undertaken the task of encouraging other disabled veterans. Much of his time has been taken up in visiting war amputees in hospitals, and his present project is a tour of the United States and some Canadian cities. He is expected to arrive in Brantford Sunday after a short stay in Detroit. From Brantford, he will be driven to Toronto for an address before the Empire Lodge, B'nai B'rith.

Lecture bureau officials who are in charge of Russel's tour explained last night that the attraction is in making his tour was to speak to high school students and youth groups. His contact with maimed ex-servicemen, they said, had convinced Russell of the necessity of warning youth not to be "victims of hate movements".

"Men in amputation wards come in all shapes and sizes, all colors, nationalities and religions," said Russell in a recent speech. "No one has to sell them on brotherhood."

Early in his convalescence Russell gained exceptional facility with his highly practical substitute hands. He was discovered by M-G-M after he appeared in a government film illustrating the use of prosthetics.

"Miss Jones From Smith"

By NAN JONES
Trinity-Smith

Smith is a stepping stone to more than Dartmouth and Yale; for some of us, it has been a stepping stone to the University of Toronto.

We feel very lucky. At present, unless he takes some of his pre-university work in Canadian schools, one of the few ways an American can wiggle into the University of Toronto is via the Smith Jr. Exchange channel—and this applies only to "she's".

Student Knows

This restriction is due not to a difference in standards but in educational systems. The great point of difference is the immediate specialization of the honor course here which presumes that the entering student knows just what he wants—and so presents him with a prefabricated program which trains him thoroughly in that field. The general course here most nearly approximates the Smith, and largely the American, system which encourages dabbling during the first years in various fields with later specialization in one. Even then, there is far more option at Smith. Toronto's pass course is different in that it is three years instead of four.

Potential clashes resulting from a mixture of these two systems have been remarkably well-eluded, thanks to the understanding officials and profs and interested students. They've given us a veritable golden key which unlocks all sorts of doors in this maze of subjects—from which we pluck classes of all courses and years to satisfy our own and Smith's requirements. It was a shock to Toronto's honor students with pre-determined schedules to have to face such queries as "Who are the best professors on the campus?" or "What's the average number of hours to take?" At Smith the professor is more important than the course—if he isn't good, his clientele decreases.

Slow Starting

Fortunately, for us, classes here do not seem to coagulate for at least two weeks, but percolate tamely until people get settled. Occasionally I still lose an elusive class or prof; they like to shift meeting places and times, or to hide in towers miles above ground or in vaults beneath.

Enough about courses! You've asked about living conditions. We're finally getting adjusted to the idea that life can be beautiful without our beloved blue-jeans, and our yellow slickers and sou'westers. But we're still amazed at the fortitude which keeps 17,000 students perpetually well-dressed!

Change Is Pleasant

Of course, much is due to surroundings. After our little New England town in the hills, going to university in a large city is a pleasant change. Even the dangers are different—in Toronto it's the TTC's unpredictably snapping jaws while in our New England town it's dodging the charge of 2,000-odd bicycles. Seriously though, in addition to the advantages of concerts and art galleries, of good theatres and restaurants, there's also the settled feeling and broadening influences you get from knowing people in their homes. And the University of Toronto is unusual as city universities go, in that it keeps its own identity within the city; it doesn't get swallowed in the mass.

Cry Havoc

In Monday night's debate at Victoria College, a resolution calling for compulsory military training was voted down by a margin of nearly 2 to 1.

We think this is, in itself, a good thing.

But the arguments advanced by both sides indicated something more interesting. Throughout the course of the debate speakers on both sides emphasized that Canada was, beyond doubt, in grave danger of attack from an aggressor nation. They differed only in their method of seeking national security. Only one person present, a girl in first year, saw fit to point out the possibility that no immediate threat to Canada exists.

It would seem that the tide of victory has definitely turned in favor of those who, through the press, radio and movies, consistently give the general public an alarming picture of world events.

To hear a group of students discuss problems of national defence, without even acknowledging a slight possibility that war is not inevitable is very depressing.

Maybe some have yet to learn the grim lesson that war is somewhat distasteful.

Hart House Recitals

Lorne Watson

Milton's "Areopagitica" lines around the walls of the Great Hall in Hart House glowed Sunday night with a new surprising warmth. The cause of this new glow was Lorne Watson, pianist (Varsity Class of '48). Warmth is a quality that his playing had never shed before. That was the surprise.

Mr. Watson began with two sonatas of Scarlatti (B Minor and C Major). His warmth here lay in an overdose of damper that somewhat romanticized the composer's puncning, classic style. Scarlatti's score calls for no pedalling. Mr. Watson's interpretation was much like buttered toast. I like mine dry.

High point of the program was Brahms' "Variations on a Theme of Handel."

Lorne Watson's sound fingering dexterity plus his proficiency of technique were quite up to its demands. He articulated the fugue with a clear, precise attack . . . while fervor went with a balance and proportion (of both phrase and tone) to make the Brahms the best part of the hour.

Chopin did not fare as well. Mr. Watson played the most difficult of all his Nocturnes . . . "The F Sharp". It requires a slight flavoring of rubato, and a limpid, delicate touch. The soloist's rendition was more limp than limpid, more ponderous than delicate, and quite regular in time.

Andrew Macmillan

Fresh from his success in "The Marriage of Figaro", Mr. Macmillan, baritone, commenced his 5 o'clock recital with arias from Mozart's illustrious work. "If you like dancing", "Say good-bye now" and "Fools you are" all bore the same lusty enthusiasm and rollicking manner that are fast becoming well-known in these parts.

Five Schubert lieder brought Mr. Kilburn's skilful accompaniments to the fore. In "Gute Nacht" and "Die Krahe" I found I was listening to the Steinway and not the voice. Possibly this was due to the close acoustics, the low resonance of the singer's voice, or even the supple brilliance produced by the accompanist's dexterous technique.

Dvorak's five gypsy songs were Macmillan's most effective vehicle. In "I chant my lay" and "Tune thy strings" both singer and pianist attained a fine balance, fusion and rapport.

Rare is the time when an actor can sing and a singer act. When both occur, art is enhanced a hundred-fold. Andrew Macmillan holds possession of both. Yet his program bound him to sonorous lyric, lengthily-phrased songs that his voice is least suited to sing.

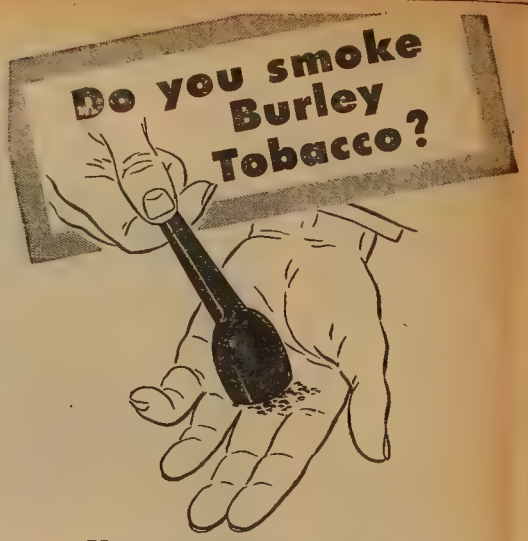
versity has the advantage of being unforced. One of the things we like best about our Toronto year is the idea of seeing men without formal dating. Teas and coffee-dates are wonderful institutions, and it's nice to be able to go to a rugby game without being away for a weekend.

Comparing the people here at Varsity with those at Smith, we find, or think we do, individual characteristics are more noticeable at Smith. Canadians generally aren't so casual as Americans. The men talk more about politics and will talk more readily about serious subjects than Americans. We like that very much, although occasionally we miss the "American Line."



I don't think I need to say we like Varsity and its people tremendously. We can't imagine how anyone could have been nicer to us, or done more for us. We've felt completely at home almost from the moment we arrived and this is a good chance for us to try to say thank-you to everybody.

We Tease Yanks

You don't mind teasing Americans though! We've heard some hilarious stories about the "American Tourist", that awful cigar-puffing, bespectacled creature who takes delight in misrepresenting the majority of Americans abroad, and who comes to Toronto looking for snow in July and lunch in Winnipeg!

The worst that we can say about Varsity is that it is far too lenient with us! We admire tremendously the adult attitude which assumes that students don't need constant prodding and tests to keep them working—but I'm afraid we're children at heart and the thought of approaching exams brings on acute symptoms of hysteria. But at least we'll have spent our last college year in a wonderful place!

Also other exchange students from Smith at Toronto are, Hester Goodenough, UC; Galen Sanborn, UC; and Kate Robertson, Vic.

You should! Because Burley is one of the mildest tobaccos grown . . . with a smooth, mellow fragrance that tastes especially good in a pipe. Burley packs easily . . . burns slowly . . . leaves a clean, white ash. And it stays lit!

New pipe smokers enjoy this cool, sweet tobacco, right from the first pipeful. Veteran smokers swear by it. Try a Pipe of

By BILLY ROSS

This interfaculty open track meet, which has been producing an impressive number of records this season, added another to the long list last night when Paul Forestell, of the St. Michael's entry, hung up a 4:41.10 for the novice mile event. George McMullen who sports the same colors as Forestell, captured top honors in the senior mile with a 4:36.03 for the distance.

Forestell started his Varsity running around here last year but was unable to place at the start. Under expert tutelage by the late "Hec" Phillips and this year's mentor Harold Brown he has shown up as promising intercollegiate track material. His mile time for last night's meet was considered plenty hot for a novice.

St. Mike's also captured the eight-lap relay, making it a clean sweep, with a team which featured Bill Kelly, Bill Davis, Gary Garrissino and Sam Neill. Their time was 2:35.09. Trinity was second and UC, who used Ted Gawinski, John Hryshko and Manis, all of whom had just finished running the mile, took the show spot.

Vic thirds came out from behind a two point deficit at the half to overcome Forestry A's 31-23. The first half was a toss up but the Vic men turned on the pressure in the final frame to pile up seventeen markers to the losers' seven. Lowery was tops for Vic with nine while Pond got five and Stevens four. For the Forestry quintet Collict was the big gun with six with Hamilton and Scott notching four per head.

New York," he pointed out.

Canada's long colonial experience was a bad psychological influence. There was always someone to make the decisions. As a nation we have little self-knowledge. When people have discovered themselves history takes on an added significance. By way of contrast he stated that history is real to the English and Americans speak of Jefferson as if he still lived.

Want Leading Role

"French Canadians have realized and striven for things within their reach by turning inward to a terrific degree," he said. Some other Canadians find it hard to accept the role of Great Britain as a lesser power. Because of the tradition of great power behind them, they aspire to a leading role for Canada.

The history of Canada in the last 100 years in respect to the outside world has continuously been one of increase in self-government. We have progressed from a mere colony to a nation, on paper, at least.

There is a tendency on the part of Canadians to assume that they know their geographical background. A necessary step for informed attitude on foreign policy is to spend hours gazing at maps and to be realistic about what they imply. A student of foreign affairs needs to be well trained in history and in national psychology. Canadians tend to be more interested in situations in Palestine or in Indonesia than in Canada.

Canadian Armchairish

The Canadian student doesn't feel the responsibility that an American does but tends to be better informed. As members of an important power, individual Americans feel the need to do something about the situation. Canadians tend to be academic and armchairish in the knowledge that the final decision is not in their hands. Professor Lower stressed the need of realizing our sphere. With a greater knowledge of Canada we can see ourselves as a whole and divorce the academic.

"Alaska and the North Pole may be ruled out as important spheres of occupation in the event of another war" he stated. "We should not be alarmed by assertions that we are next door to Russia. There is a need to look at the map when considering such statements," he concluded.

HART HOUSE ELECTIONS
Thurs 3rd March

U.C., it's this way...

By HAL ROSENTHAL

With nominations for positions on next year's Lit Executive about to take place on March 1st (less than two weeks) we are, by special request, dedicating this column to an exposition of the requirements and rewards of the various positions available—for the guidance of all those who will be seeking election during the early days of March. Doubtless there will be literally scores of candidates, judging from the mobs of students who packed themselves into the J.C.R. for the "Open Lit" meetings this year. The fantastic enthusiasm that swept the college weeks before each open meeting will obviously be reflected in the coming campaign. The members of this year executive are thinking of limiting the number of candidates who will be allowed to contest each position, to 15, but this will, of course, hamper and frustrate too many budding politicians, who have shown such intense interest throughout the year. As a matter of fact, hundreds sit around the J.C.R. every day, for the entire day, just to be, I suppose, near the Lit Offices.

Well—good luck to all of you. But before you decide which position you will run for (for which you will run), please read on to see if you have the proper qualifications; and if the rewards of office interest you.

President:
at present: Ralph ("He can do anything") Campbell.
qualifications: Must be born in Foxboro or some equally well-known metropolitan centre reward: A Rhodes Scholarship and or a redhead.

Literary Director:
at present: "Genial Jim" Cairns.
qualifications: Be entirely ignorant of anything in the realm of literary activities. Know how to look as if you are on official business while pilfering the snack bar.
reward: All the free snack bar "coffee" you can drink.

Athletic Director:
at present: "Fabulous Phil" Downie.
qualifications: Long, lean athletic build.
reward: A special upholstered chair in the Lit office in which you can sit and read the latest magazines.

Social Director:
at present: Harry ("My name is Harry Rasky") Rasky.
qualifications: Ability to look haggard and dishevelled, constantly preoccupied, busy, bewildered, etc., during Follies season.
reward: Ulcers, nervous breakdown, etc. Also chance to make speeches in front of curtain.

Publicity Director:
at present: (the position seems to have been vacant this year.)
qualifications: Very few. However, must wear conservative clothes and look as if you are concerned about ticket sales while watching the local talent walk by in the rotunda. Ability to win elections by overwhelming majority essential.
reward: Can plaster your own pictures on rotunda billboards.

S.A.C. Rep.:
at present: J. Potts.
qualifications: Ability to explain clearly and concisely. No bureaucratic tendencies. Politically independent. A quiet, unassuming personality. A weird vocabulary.
reward: A blue and white bow tie

Treasurer:
at present: "Gentleman George" Rutledge.
qualifications: Look solid, trustworthy, a man of business. Smoke a pipe and look thoughtful—even if not.
reward: A trip around the world, your own Cadillac, new clothes, suite in the Park Plaze, etc.

Secretary:
at present: "Laughing boy" Leon Gelman.
qualifications: Don't be able to read! to write! to type! Don't be able to speak on phone! Don't shave! In short, the Lit secretaries like the Pi Phis—don't!
reward: An office in which to miss lectures.

Space prevents us from printing the qualifications of the individual year presidents. Taken as a group—the only qualification is to have no unusual ability whatsoever. By no means be distinctive in any way. The reward is to be revered and idolized by the noble men of the year you represent.

— Remember — on March 8th — Vote as you like — but vote for yourself!

Corner Boys Tie Juniors With Final Minute Goal

By ED SOLOWSKI

The Corner Boys scored a goal in the last minute of play to tie the Varsity Juniors 3-3 in the first game of a double header in the Varsity Arena last night. Playing without a goalie in the last minute of play, Jim Black notched the tieing counter at 14.52 to split with the Juniors and they still remain four points behind.

The game was fairly slow and referees Ed Morris and Bob Larose kept the tilt from getting too rough and dished out 12 minor penalties, six to each club.

The Corner Boys took a two-goal lead in the first period before Varsity entered the scoring picture. The Blues netted their first counter late in the first stanza and added one each in the last two frames to take a one-goal lead. Then Jim Black tied the score in the dying minutes of the game.

Henderson scored the first goal at the 2.25 mark with Black and Hawkrigg helping out. MacAllister added another goal at 7.40 with Gray and Dusto assisting. Jack Raftis put the Varsity score in lights after Artie Holmes and Al Conboy set up the play, in the last minute of play in the initial frame.

Jack Raftis netted his second goal of the night when he deflected Darcy Prendergast's drive at the goal. Artie Holmes was also in on the play.

Porky MacDougal broke the deadlock and put the Varsity ahead at the 10.50 mark when Jack Raftis and Artie Holmes carried the play in the Corner Boys' zone. Jim Black tied the game from a scramble in front of Leuty's net after teammate Brian MacAllister shot out in front.

Raftis with two goals and one assist, Artie Holmes with three assists, Al Conboy and Porky MacDougal were standouts for the Varsity Junior Bees, while Jim Black, Brian MacAllister, Gord Haddleton and Jim Craig shone for the Corner Boys.

Yet Unbeaten Seconds Face Jr. Mustangs

Jack Life's free-wheeling intermediate hockey team leaves today for London where they take on the last-place Western Colts. The team has a two win, no loss record, having beaten OAC and Western while losing to McMaster.. To cinch the championship for the third straight year the team has to win all its remaining games.

Having beaten the Colts in Toronto last month 13-2 the intermediates should have little trouble tonight but the "crucial" games will be the home fixtures with OAC and McMaster, next Friday and the Friday following.

The team has been playing a rousing brand of hockey in their last couple of outings with Red Waldron especially beginning to smash the attacking forwards. Joe Kane has been switched back to the defence position, after a brief fling at the centre slot.

Dinty Moore, Bill Paterson and Doug Dies have all improved vastly since the start of the season and show it in the points department.

"We are using a large crowd cast to give the feeling which the Elizabethan theatre audiences had of the tremendous vitality of the Roman crowd—the crowd that is one of the most important elements in the drama," stated Mr. Gill.

A unit set will stage the play. Deep red steps leading to large white columns make an impressive picture against a blue sky. Realistic shields, battle standards, spears, daggers and a bust of Pompey the Great are being made by Marion Walker, secretary.

Some 85 new costumes, togas, tunics and gowns, are being made for the production. The togas, worn by senators, measure 16 by 12 and must be draped on and carefully pinned by a staff of "dressers".

The production will be presented from Feb. 26 to Mar. 5. Tickets go on sale tomorrow.

COLE SLAN

We went eagerly to a small musical evening last Sunday, ears cocked for the sounds of genius in the works of the student composers represented. Sadly, we must report that we came away just as eagerly, ears still straining for the unheard sounds of genius. We were impressed, however, by the dispirited competition to take away first prize for mediocrity. In these intense times, it seems quite incredible that anyone engaged in any creative enterprise could fail to react in some way to such strong stimulus. It is profoundly saddening to find that these student composers not only fail to react but are, apparently, completely oblivious to their environment. Even this would be excusable in the light of some other coherency, but the aimless wandering of notes over manuscript merely drops in exhaustion at its end without ever once approaching a recognizable destination. With one exception, the dullness of the composition was equalled only by the inep'ness of the performance.

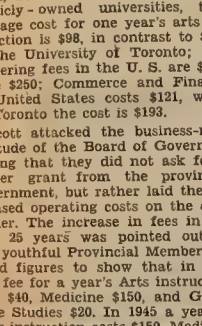
SAYS CANADA STILL SOVEREIGN

Youthful MPP Asks Province Up Subsidies

Reid Scott, M.P.P. for Toronto-Beaches, contended yesterday that the province of Ontario is almost alone in its trend away from low-cost university educations. In an address to the University C.C.F. club Scott recommended increased government subsidies to gradually decrease fees and to eventually wipe them out.



Cites U. S. Example

Supporting his statement of the trend toward lower educational costs, Scott said that in American publicly - owned universities, the average cost for one year's arts instruction is $98, in contrast to $150 at the University of Toronto; Engineering fees in the U. S. are $124, here $250; Commerce and Finance in United States costs $121, while at Toronto the cost is $193.

Scott attacked the business-man attitude of the Board of Governors, saying that they did not ask for a larger grant from the provincial government, but rather laid the increased operating costs on the consumer. The increase in fees in the last 25 years was pointed out by the youthful Provincial Member. He cited figures to show that in 1925 the fee for a year's Arts instruction was $40, Medicine $150, and Graduate Studies $20. In 1945 a year of Arts instruction costs $150, Medicine $350 and Graduate Studies $150. The speaker claimed information indicating that there would be another fees increase within a year, because costs have risen since 1945.

Bursaries Too Few

He said the bursary system has helped but is far from satisfactory because bursaries are too few. Very few people apply for them because of this scarcity. There are only 162 government bursaries open to the approximately 350,000 people eligible.

He said that bursaries are too small, since the largest is $400, and added that it is almost necessary to prove abject poverty to qualify for them.

Can't Work Way

"Scholarships," Scott stated, "are almost negligible, and as for working one's way through university, people who extol it don't have to do it." He quoted a survey putting the average summer-wage for students at $300 and the average cost per university year at $600. "The result of this is that many young people are deprived of university education," he said.

Scott quoted an estimate which said that 27,000 people who wished to attend university in 1945—more than the number that was actually enrolled that year—were unable to attend because of lack of sufficient funds.

LESTER B. PEARSON

Equalitarian Idea In World Politics Laid To Rousseau

Rousseau endowed European and American politics with equalitarian principles and this concept of equality opened the road to socialistic systems based on equality; he tore the shallow covering off society's prejudices and was at all sighted champion of reform, declared Professor Laure Riese in a lecture in Vic Alumnae Hall yesterday afternoon.

Society vs. Individual

Professor Riese declared that Rousseau believed that the main cause of the downfall of society was social inequality to an overflow audience. Rousseau held that society and the poverty it condoned was responsible for the degradation of the individual. "For Rousseau," the speaker continued, "man was naturally good — if he was corrupt it was due to the conditions under which he had to live." "Running thus counter to the very basis of religion's concepts of man's original sin it was not surprising that his views were opposed by the theologians," declared Professor Riese.

Many have been severe in their criticism of Rousseau holding him to be "a poisoner of the soul and an instigator of revolution" but the heritage he left includes "the right vision of life in relation to men, nature, and God," Professor Riese said.

No Formal Education

Born in Geneva, the son of a watchmaker, Rousseau's ill health precluded formal education "and so it was that this self-taught man was unfitted for the polished and sophisticated society of Paris. But he spent his life in fighting for the under-privileged who were living in abject poverty," said the speaker.

"Rousseau's criticism of the immoriality and sensationalism of the theatre of his day is pertinent for us today," Professor Riese pointed out, "with Hollywood movies placing their emphasis on the stirring of passion and the presentation of crime themes in glittering colors."

"Nature for Rousseau had many faces," the speaker said, "he was in love with nature which was animated by men's labor as well as the harmonious combination of pure nature."

Born Too Soon

"A forerunner, Rousseau was misunderstood by his contemporaries, but his legacy has been the inspiration of human brotherhood," Professor Riese said.

"Rousseau has survived wars, capitalisms, and atom bombs because he fought for fundamental principles of justice and liberty against prejudice, intolerance and social inequality," the speaker said.

Dominion Not US Satellite Hart House Debaters Decide, Vote Motion Down 142-61

Minister Clashes With Student Son On Foreign Policy

Father and son clashed over Canada's position in world affairs at a Hart House debate last night when Geoffrey Pearson, III Trinity, rose from the floor to challenge his father, Canada's External Affairs Minister Lester B. Pearson, to show that Canada was not subordinate to the United States.

The government motion, "Resolved that in the opinion of this House, Canada, in the conduct of its external relations, has become a satellite state," was defeated by a vote of 142 to 61.

Highway Built For Americans

S. L. Endicott, IV Vic, introducing the motion, said in all main policies of social and economic advance Canada acts as a satellite of the U.S. He defined satellite as suggesting an element of subservience. The presence of thousands of American troops under U.S. authority in Canada, and the fact that a highway was built for U.S. troops when one was denied Canadians, Endicott declared, demonstrates Canada's subserviency. He reiterated that American bankers and their Canadian counterparts through the North Atlantic "War Pact" are forcing Canadians, against their will, to make feverish war plans. Except in cases of minor technical differences, Endicott said, Canada has followed U.S. cues.

Canada Not Vassal State

A. G. Douglas, IV SPS, first speaker for the opposition, said Canada has voted with U.S. in some cases because of self-interest. The term satellite state, he maintained, implies a vassal state compelled to follow the policies of another. To show that Canada has acted independently he pointed to the fact that Canada refused to recognize Israel until eight months after U.S., and to Canada's refusal to aid in the Berlin airlift. He stated that the UN had given recognition to several Canadians, and that Canada led a move against the wishes of the

Western Officials Reverse Decision, Controversy Ends

London, Feb. 17 — (CUP)— The week-long controversy between the students and officials at Western University over the speaking engagement of Stanley Ryerson, secretary of the Ontario Labor-Progressive Party, culminated today when the Administration granted Ryerson permission to speak to the student body.

A statement issued by Dr. G. E. Hall, president of Western University, warned that the university as a whole was "critical" of Communism, and the fact that it grants Mr. Ryerson permission to speak on this occasion, cannot be considered a precedent.

Dr. Hall's statement said in part: "The informal invitation to Mr. Stanley Ryerson will be honored, permitting him to participate in a regularly scheduled classroom discussion with a fourth-year honor class in the history of political thought on the question 'certain inconsistencies in Marx's theory of value'."

Ryerson will speak to the students today.

Dr. Balinkin To Discuss Color At R.C.I. Lecture

A lecture-demonstration entitled "Color Phenomena" will be the subject of Dr. Isay A. Balinkin's talk before the Royal Canadian Institute, Saturday evening, Feb. 19, in Convocation Hall. Dr. Balinkin is Associate Professor of experimental physics at the University of Cincinnati.

Dr. Balinkin was born in Odessa, Ukrainia, and received his B.S. degree in mechanical engineering from Robert College in Istanbul, Turkey. He attended the University of Cincinnati, majoring in physics, and received the degrees of M.Sc. and Ph.D. in 1929.

War Only Possible If Western Union Attacked — Pearson

"Canada will be involved in a possible future war only if any one of the Western Democracies is the victim of Soviet aggression," External Affairs Minister Pearson told The Varsity last night In the event of the U.S. or any other nation in the group being the aggressor, Canada would by no means be bound to join in a war against Russia.

Speaking at the Hart House debate Mr. Pearson emphasized that "Canada is not a satellite state: in fact, Canada has as much control over its external affairs as any moderate-sized nation has, or has any right to have."

Canadian Policy

The External Affairs Minister went on to say, "We do not disagree for the sake of disagreeing disagreeably with the big powers. If we cannot agree with our friends, we oppose them, but Canadian foreign policy is dictated by self-interest, and our self-interest is not served by opposing our friends in conferences. We try to iron out differences in policy before these policies are aired in the public arena for discussion, and on more than one occasion we have caused the U.S. or Britain to modify their attitude so that it would be more compatible with the views of the

A Liberal Party Policy of "intelligent change rather than socialistic experimentation" was advocated by External Affairs Minister Lester B. Pearson at a closed meeting of the U of T Liberal Club yesterday. The federal government minister said the Liberals must pursue the lines of "a party of the moderate left."

"In the natural division which must be made between left and right in this country, we must retain our traditional left-hand position," said Mr. Pearson. He expressed the belief that, by adhering to the tradition of progress, the Liberal Party would be able to maintain its supremacy in the next election. "Whatever may have been the mainspring of past success, we cannot coast along on it," he declared. "We must keep the party progressive."

Pearson pointed out that recent Progressive-Conservative tactics under the leadership of Col. George Drew indicated the P.C.'s would stake their election chances on an appeal to Quebec. "They may lose much of their Ontario support through their tie-up with Quebec nationalist and isolationist interests," he said.

Commenting on a feeling he recognized as "prevalent," namely, that the next election would be "time for a change", Pearson pointed to the number of new and young members in the federal cabinet, the recent change in federal leadership, and to the new spirit in the party. "The fact that we have had 21 years in power does not mean that we have passed our peak or lack new talent."

Problems the dominion government will face this year might be serious ones, the speaker said. "The present government has handled post-war problems with much competence, but its difficulties are just beginning," he declared. Our economic position, he said, was de-

Bob Hetherington New Meds Prexy In Lively Contest

R. F. Hetherington was elected President of the Medical Society at the annual elections yesterday in Hart House. Vice President was G. S. Cameron; Treasurer, by acclamation, A. R. Doyle; and Secretary, J. F. Mustard. More than 75 percent of the faculty voted.

The show put on by the candidates was in the usual Meds tradition. Highlighting the entertainment was a cultural interlude wherein a large coloratura soprano rendered works of Bizet and Haydn. Her rendition of the Dying Swan was peculiarly suited to her voice, which though still melodious, lacked strength toward the end of the recital. In short, it was dying.

Cameron was supported by a song and dance team, composed of patients "from the psychiatric ward of Toronto General Hospital". In spite of the nasty slur on the mentality of his supporters, Cameron was elected. At this point the proceedings were interrupted by a more or less authentic moose which was led through the theatre in support of Fraser Mustard.

The intermissions were taken up by a gag team imported, it was purported, from the Queen St. Culture Castle.

The Medical Athletic Association election results: E. D. Hubbard, Pres.; R. A. Halliburton, Vice-Pres.; J. R. Evans, Sec.-Treas., and W. Mackenzie, Publicity (acclamation).

For the Med Women's Undergraduate Association: C. M. Stillwell, President.

For the Med Women's Athletic Association: J. E. Fletcher, Pres.

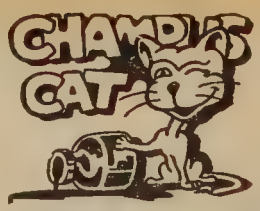
It Can Be Done

Students, too often, sell themselves short.

Much of the student apathy that is to be found at some universities stems from a general belief that students can do nothing to change conditions laid down by university officials. Some students feel university regulations are so iron-clad that little can be done by students to alter a decision that may seem unjust. But they are wrong.

Last week's incident at the University of Western Ontario offers ample proof that students, acting collectively in a calm, rational manner, can make their influence felt.

University authorities at the University of Western Ontario recently barred Stanley Ryerson, provincial LPP secretary, from speaking on the campus after he had been invited by a 4th year economics class to discuss "certain inconsistencies in Marx's theory of value."



The ban was greeted with loud protests from the student body. Editorials in The Gazette, the university's student newspaper, criticized the move. The University Students' Council, sitting in emergency session, unanimously affirmed the principle of allowing Ryerson to address students. In an informal student assembly, more than 80 per cent of the students present felt Ryerson should be allowed to speak.

Earlier this week, Dr. G. E. Hall, president of the university, issued a statement which reversed the ban and granted permission for Ryerson to address the class. As a result, the LPP secretary will speak today.

It is gratifying to know that the university, although opposed to the political philosophy represented by Ryerson, finally reaffirmed the principle of freedom of speech so vital to the growth of any university. Of even greater significance, in this case, was the fact that the reversed decision came after students had voiced protests.

It may not be absolutely correct to suggest that the university's reversed decision was the direct result of student influence. But it is reasonable to assume that the attitude of the student body was a major factor in the reconsideration. And it is possible to assume that the ban might have remained if students had not shown their disapproval in the way they did.

The incident is an excellent example of what students can do to reverse or mitigate a ruling they consider unjust. In spite of the fact that such decisions rest entirely in the hands of university officials, students, by voicing their opinions on a reasonable basis, can do much to influence such decisions.

Gunman Faces Assault Count At Moot Court

The trial of Ronald Y. Campbell, III Law, who was booked last weekend on a charge of assault against Thomas A. Beckett, IV Law, is to come up tonight at the school of Law's annual Moot Court. The court will be held at 7.30 p.m. in the Junior Common Room, U.C.

Campbell is charged with assault, with attempt to rob and with being armed with an offensive weapon. The alleged crime took place last Friday afternoon in front of Knox College.

Beckett claimed he had been attacked while walking with his fiance. Campbell stated the entire incident was an experiment to test the qualities of observation of a witness to a crime.

"Impartial Witness" Will Appear

Campbell will be defended by D. B. Dodds, III Law. Witnesses for the defense will include a psychologist, the defendant, and J. Gardiner, III Law, the friend of Campbell's who is said to have been acting as "the impartial witness."

Crown counsel for the trial is S. Lavine, III Law. Lavine will call Beckett, his fiance, Miss Baden-Powell, the policeman who arrested Campbell, and the doctor who treated Beckett for injuries sustained in the attack.

Lavine refused to comment on the case he will present saying it would be "unethical" for the crown counsel to comment on a case before the courts. He added that he would tolerate no untoward conduct during the trial.

Clear Court if Necessary

"If any incidents occur to disrupt the court such as have occurred in previous years, I will ask the judge to clear the court," he said.

Chief Justice of the court is Eric Lovekin who outlined last night the nature and aims of the annual Moot Court. "The Moot Court is, roughly speaking, a legal debating society for the School of Law," he said. "The purpose is to provide an atmosphere as closely parallel to a real court as possible."

Lovekin said every student in the school tries a case during the year and the best "counsels" are chosen to conduct the Moot Court.

"The trials during the fall term are all 'appeals on a stated case'," he added. "The Moot Court is to test the ability of the best counsels in the school to handle witnesses."

Regular Procedure in Court

Lovekin said the case before the court was not pre-arranged but would be handled in regular court manner. He said the facts of the case had been established by staging an incident but the merits of the case would be decided on the manner in which the facts were stated.

New Musical Aired Tonight As J. Potts Charges "Libel"

The original musical comedy, "Single or Nothing," contains a caricature of "scurrilous and defamatory characted," Joe Potts, IV U.C., charged today. "Single or Nothing" will be presented tonight as the last in "The Varsity Story" series over CJBC at 9 p.m. Potts indicated the possibility of a libel suit unless radical changes were made in the script before broadcast time.

Susie Davidson and Michael Hornyansky, co-authors of "Single or Nothing" denied their script provided grounds for libel. "In fact, it flatters Potts," they said.

According to press reports omitted from Tuesday's The Varsity, the story is concerned with "strong feelings between men and women on the campus."

"I haven't seen the script," Potts declared. "But I understand it shows me fighting a woman. That's libel."

Norm Jewison, who will play Potts in the half-hour production, claimed to be completely impartial. "It's a great show. The singing is great. The tunes are great. The script is great," Jewison stated. Further inquiries brought forth the assertion that the acting was also great.

Ross McLean of CBC, producer of the show, dismissed the whole affair as a publicity stunt. "Potts is looking for a chance to get his name in the paper," he suggested.

An experienced cast will appear in the show, including Mel Breen as a prominent CBC announcer; Nipper Benson as Ethel Footloose, cashier in Hart House; Evan Scott as a Thinker, and Jewison as Potts.

Orchestral accompaniment will be provided by Bill Isbister's ensemble. A mixed chorus directed by Ward McAdam will sing McAdam arrangements of such Susie Davidson tunes as "A Woman's a Wonderful Thing", "You Came in Spring" and "Together Again" (formerly known as "Follow the Blues"). Margo MacKinnon, Nipper Benson and Evan Scott will be featured as soloists.

Pres. Smith Opens Brotherhood Week At Sunday Festival

Special Brotherhood Week activities have been planned for Feb. 20 to 27 by the Inter-Cultural Affairs Committee of the SAC. Committee Chairman Susan Burgess, SAC rep. from St. Hilda's, said last night the Brotherhood Week program would be officially opened Sunday night by President Sidney E. Smith.

Folk Festival Opens Week

The president will attend the committee's first activity, the Folk Festival being held in Convocation Hall at 8.30 p.m. The Festival will feature musical numbers by the All-Varsity Mixed Chorus, the YMHA Displaced Persons Choir, specialists in Yiddish music, Merle Natsui's Japanese dancing ensemble, Leah Leventhal's Spanish dancers, an Indial musical and dancing group, numbers from "Gyp y Night", the Ukrainian Club production, and Bill White's Negro Choir with their spirituals. Art Bell, II Social Work, will be narrator.

Full Program for Week

Lectures and discussions Monday through Friday will begin with movie actor Harold Russell's lecture on "Fears of Our Lives" Monday in the Women's Union Theatre. This part of the program will continue through the week with an Inter-Denominational Forum in West Hall Tuesday at 4 p.m., a lecture by Dr L Lynch in Cartwright Hall Wednesday at 4.15 p.m. on "The Dignity of Man", the Laval University vs. U. of T. debate Thursday and Friday's Panel Discussion in the Junior Common Room, UC, on Whether or not legislation is an effective means of combating discrimination.

Through the week films on subjects related to racial and religious tolerance will be shown in Hart House, the Women's Union Theatre, Victoria College and Trinity College. Most of these events will take place during the noon hour. A full-length movie, "Gentleman's Agreement", will be shown during the week at a time to be announced later.

Dance Climaxes Week

Brotherhood Week's climax will be on Saturday night when the committee will sponsor a cabaret style dance with a floor show in the Drill Hall. Along with regular-style dancing, there will be barn dances. The floor show will star singing and dancing representatives of various racial groups.

So far, the Inter-Cultural Affairs Committee has pushed ahead with the Brotherhood Week plans by announcing poster and essay contests. Posters and essays must deal with subjects related to the theme of Brotherhood Week, and prizes have been donated by interested Toronto business men.

All Campus Helps

Brotherhood Week activities are being planned and carried through by members of almost every campus organization. Representatives from clubs and the various colleges and faculties conferred with the SAC committee several weeks ago. Each organization will contribute to Brotherhood Week whatever facilities it can offer as well as the executive ability of its representative.

Communist Policy In Canada Today Tim Buck Topic

National leader of the Labour Progressive Party, Tim Buck, will discuss the necessity for Canada to remain independent of "U.S. imperialism, both political and economic," in his speech tonight in the Economics Building, president of the campus LPP club, Steve Endicott, said yesterday.

Will Discuss L.P.P. Policy

Edicott added that the L.P.P. leader will comment on a decision reached at a recent LPP convention to oppose "right-wing" CCF leaders and cease supporting CCF election candidates. Mr. Buck would also outline general policy planned by the LPP for the next federal election.

The title of the address will be "Canada: the Communist Point of View." It will be given at 8 p.m. today in the main lecture room of the Economics Building.

Buck will also deal with the development of Canadian culture and the importance of this to Communists.

Who Took The Book

An Innocent's Adventures In Bookland

By HARRY K. RASKY

One of the few privileges left a student during school hours is that of standing in line to get a book from the main library.

Since now is the time that all good men begin to wonder about study and such, The Varsity presents here the adventures of one of its staff in Library-land. It is hoped that this may help the reader when he wants to remove a book from the library.

The first thing we did was to find which building was the library. A very kind freshman pointed out the impressive structure next to the medical structure — the Medical building.

Meets First Line-up

If you are serious about getting the book out, you have to make a reservation for it in the morning. No telephone reservations are allowed. This is where you meet your first line-up. If you are lucky you won't miss more than one lecture while waiting in line.

After queueing up you discover that you have to find what is known as the shelf number. Like a potential bureaucrat you approach a large row of shelves. If you are a bingo player from way back, you will be acquainted with the procedure.

The Hunt Begins

Under the B's you find Bernbaum, whom we will use as an example. The book you want is "A Guide Through the Romantic Movement". This is not a love story as it may seem. You may find something that looks like: "BSc(Lond)—1523 in 5 volumes plus tax". What we do now is mark down the important looking material and get in line again. At last we have the book reserved.

If you have any lectures left before 3 o'clock, you can now attend them. If not, you get some coffee before getting in line again. A quick breath of fresh air and you're ready again.

A university education you decide is a very good thing. It makes you appreciate things—things like books of your own.

The line-up is as long as the library at 3.00 p.m. You may meet somebody ou know, or if not you can read one of the interesting two thousand page dictionaries that are lying on the table.

Nears His Goal

By 4 we near our goal, the library desk. By now we have learned such vital information from the reading material around us as: "A mosquito is a kind of gnat, female of which punctures skin of animals with long proboscis and sucks their blood; . . . pants are long tight drawers . . . a hummock is a hump or ridge or ridge on icefield . . . a homoeopath is one who practises homoeopathy." All this and a library book too.

Here we are at the desk. "I would like Bernbaum," we say calmly.

"Is your name Bernbaum?" asks the spectacles with the librarian behind it

"No, I'm Rasky," we reply sweetly.

"Then why do you want Bernbaum?" asks horn-rim and friend.

"My name is Rasky and I want a book by Bernbaum," we answer not so sweetly any more.

Finds a New Line

The little lady looks a bit hurt and asks for our ATL card which we show her (if we have it). We now wait in a line beside the line.

The voice with the spectacles asks, "What volume was it you wanted?"

"Darn it" (or something less strong), we reply chewing on our ATL card. "Give us all the volumes".

Away she goes. Into the stacks and racks and hurries back.

The feather-thin voice echoes in our ear once again, "I'm sorry sir. A professor has had all the volumes out for a week. If there is anything else you'd like you can wait in line again."

"No thanks," we reply, chewing up our ATL card, "the only line I'm going to wait in tonight is the one outside a movie house."

Evangelistic Missions Continue Work in India

Evangelism will be present in India as long as the Christian Church exists there, declared Dr. J. B. McLaurin, Secretary of the Canadian Baptist Foreign Mission Board, yesterday, at a meeting of the Engineering Christian Fellowship. Dr. McLaurin discussed "Is The Day of The Evangelistic Mission finished in India."

Dr. McLaurin pointed out that the Hindu Constitution provides for religious liberty.

Dr. McLaurin does not expect any major opposition to Christianity in India at the moment. He explained that there are three Christians in the Supreme Government of India, and also that a large number of influential positions are held by Christians.

Student Compositions

The Victoria College Liberal Arst Club presented its second annual concert of student compositions last Sunday. Though all the five composers heard still are chiefly concerned with formation rather than synthesis of style, their music shows a fortunate lack of amateurism and fireworks.

In his Arabesque (after Debussy) Desmond Waters successfully absorbs the impressionistic idiom and makes good use of dynamic contrast. Stylistically the piece rather belongs a little before Debussy —it is interesting and probably sound that these young composers are slightly more conservative than their respective models. Water's Rhapsody combines impressionistic figuration with the rhetorics of romantic pianism. Strong and tender elements are well blended but for its length the piece lacks direction in its emotional plan.

Two songs, "Dreams" by William Marwick and "Lento" by Douglas Valleau, both are warm and sombre. In "Lento" voice and piano have an equal share, in "Dreams" the motion of the voice is restricted to a minimum and a consistent figure in the piano sets the atmosphere.

While all these works follow the romantic tradition, John Kane, a pupil of Weinzweig's, combines an atonal framework with an almost Mozartean type of diction in his three "Sketches" for oboe, clarinet and bassoon. The sweetness of woodwinds is engaging in itself, but the excellent writing with its variety of solo, polyphonic and unison passages and its humorous touch makes me long to hear the Sketches again.

Samuel Gould bases his works on a much wider range of styles and is the only one of the five to be considerably influenced by the American idiom. The "Suite" for viola and piano reflects great facility and a good sense of variety but the various stylistic components are not yet well enough blended. Gould's two songs are striking in their extreme economy of means. In the song from Li Po the piano merely repeats a few simple chords till the voice rests and the instrument soliloquizes for a moment—a very effective treatment.

More significant than the merit of the individual work is the indication of trends. Generalizations may be dangerous and hardly apply to Kane's work, but there seems to be a pre-occupation with harmony and sound as such at the expense of structural organization, counterpoint and rhythm. An absence of fast tempi, high registers and rhythmic vitality is only the musical expression of something that disturbs me more than technical imperfections: on the human side most of these works reflect a seriousness uncommon with youth, a lack of optimism and joy. Has our youth so little to look forward to?

Helmut Kallmann.

Ellsasser Recital

I noticed that the advertisements of this organist bore the word 'phenomenal'. This is no understatement. As I sat watching and listening to Richard Ellsasser perform on the Conservatory organ Monday afternoon, it did not take long for me to realize that here was art, and here was the artist. I was about to be awed, to put it mildly.

The program got off to a classical start with Walond's 'Introduction and Toccata in G', followed by an Andante by Karl Stamitz and the exacting 'Rondo in G' of John Bull. The second part, all Bach, comprised the Fourth Concerto in C, the Chorale-Prelude 'Heartily I Yearn' (O Sacred Head), and the 'Toccata in F'. Rather than comment on the former two, I should like to say that the Toccata, which usually holds terrors for even the most daring of organists, was fearlessly and resolutely attacked, although taken at a breakneck speed. Where he found time to change registration so often remains a mystery to me. I might add here, by way of criticism, that, at times, Mr. Ellsasser tended to be a little over-dramatic, but never once did this interfere with his brilliant pedal and manual technique, nor cause his meticulous accuracy to suffer in the least.

His own three sketches from the ballet 'Greenwich Village' was exceedingly peculiar. Written in the jazz idiom, it evokes every branch of the imagination available. As an encore, he played his 'Concert Study in D minor' (over 4,000 pedal notes in three minutes), a piece that sounds vaguely reminiscent of Vierne's 'Carillon'.

The highlight of the program came when Mr. Ellsasser improvised a piece on a theme submitted by Frederick Silvester. Beginning as a three-part fugue, it evolved into a fantasia elaborated with pedal cadenzas and delicate shadings of registration that betrayed an extremely cultured taste. To hear Mr. Ellsasser perform is enough to make one feel almost unworthy of being in the presence of such artistic ability and production, which was my personal reaction at that time.

Night Mail there was poetry by W. H. Auden that, in his early conversational style, described the Night Mail train tearing through the country-side "shoving steam over its shoulder" and "by lonely farmhouses where it shakes a pig on the dresser". This poetry had the extra merit of being the clearest poetry by Auden on record. Altogether, Night Mail was a quite exciting thing and showed us a bit of life we would never otherwise have seen in a movie as long as most directors find the neuroses of female pianists more interesting than the everyday life of a clerk on a mail-train.

The two Chaplin films were called The Adventurer and The Rink; both were wonderfully full of clever comic invention. The Adventurer, in particular, showed us the tragic side of Chaplin. Take the scene where we see the poor little adventurer in his bathing suit floating half-drowned beneath the wharves. Chaplin's art is so good and simple that it escapes definition, beyond what one can pin down by noting the clear sharp style of some of the dancing in The Rink. In The Adventurer there was some of the clever symbolism later seen in Monsieur Verdoux; the constant use of the sea as a symbol of freedom, the hero eventually escaping into it, is noteworthy. There is nothing to compare Chaplin with except things one has only heard about like the Harlequinade where the conflict between Pantaloon and Harliquin certainly resembles that between the large bully and that infinitely ridiculous little pathetic figure in both The Rink and The Adventurer.

Canada's Little Magazines

Though we are frequently assured that Canada's horizons are unlimited, the horizons facing the creators of serious Canadian literature are extremely limited. For Canada has but four "little magazines" devoted to the cause of good writing, and two of these make poetry their sole concern. Leading precarious lives fraught with financial peril, and dependent on sales rather than advertising for their existence, these magazines deserve the support of all those who profess an interest in Canadian literature.

The fall (1948) number of Contemporary Verse ($1.00 a year, 2487 Florence St., Victoria) contains the best recent work in Canadian poetry. Reading these poems by M. Avison, F. R. Scott, J. Reaney, and M. Waddington, we get the impression that the writers have integrated their personal experiences into their poetry to a very high degree. We notice in some of the poems, too, a tension between two differing modes of existance; it almost takes the shape of a plea for men to cease their preoccupation with the conventional demands of civilization and pay a little more attention to the inner demands of the reality within each of us. The five poems by E. D. Baker reveal a taste for experimentation which will possibly produce better work later. Also in this issue is a fine critical essay on Dorothy Livesay by Robert Weaver.

Compared with Contemporary Verse, the December (1948) issue of Canadian Poetry Magazine (7A Forest Hill Rd., Toronto—$2.00 a year) is definitely disappointing. The poets represented, for the most part, are more concerned with verbal prettiness than with the serious expression of their most intense emotional experiences. Perhaps their choice of themes is responsible for this; it is difficult to feel very intensely about landscapes and historical figures. True, a social consciousness is evident in M. E. Coleman's "Out Patients' Clinic", but there is too much of a reportorial quality in this poem. And J. R. G. Adams' attempt to integrate technology into poetry in "Ceiling 9000" can only be regarded as a failure, for what could be less poetic than the concluding lines,

"The log-book signed, the singing props are still,
And Operation Fuel-Line is complete".

The Sept.-Oct. (1948) number is the latest Northern Review ($2.00 a year, 3575 Durocher, Apt. 4, Montreal) we have at hand. Northern Review covers more ground than the poetry magazines inasmuch as it prints short stories and articles as well as poetry. This issue is notable for a brilliantly savage review of Ezra Pound's Cantos by A. M. Klein, and a just plain savage review of Oscar Williams' anthology, A Little Treasury of American Poetry by Guy Glover. The short story, "Sleigh Ride", by Joan Strong reveals excellent skill in penetrating into a child's world. The article on the documentary films of Robert Flaherty is interesting and informative.

(As yet, the latest issue of Here and Now, the fourth and most pretentious of the Canadian little magazines, has not appeared. We still hope, however, to review it in these columns.)

Franz Kafka

Herbert Tauber's study, Franz Kafka: An Interpretation (Reginald Saunders: $4.75) is the first full-length analysis of the Jewish allegorist's complete works. Anyone who has ever read any of Kafka's novels, such as The Trial or The Castle, to mention the two best known, will surely realize the need and the value of an interpretative study. For such is the intensity and the complexity of Kafka's allegorical method that every incident and every character in his stories is fraught with symbolical meaning, and the problems he deals with are fundamental to human existence. The relationship between the physical and the spiritual worlds, the seeming incompatibility of these two worlds, man's search for God—these are a few of the questions treated in the allegories. Yet despite the allegorical undercurrent, the stories and novels are realistic to an extremely high degree. The curious paradox of perceptive symbolism combined with vivid realism is the fundamental phenomenon of Kafka's writings.

The main body of Tauber's study is concerned with the ethical implications contained in each individual work. Therefore he traces the development of Kafka's philosophical position from the early pieces through the great novels to the last works. While reading these detailed, analytical, and highly involved interpretations, we get the impression that Tauber is missing the forest as a whole through inordinate attention to individual trees. It is only in the last chapter, a recapitulation of Kafka's position, that this misconception is cleared up. Here Tauber reveals himself aware of many of the broader implications inherent in Kafka's writings, such as the effect of Kafka's relations with his father on his work, and the peculiar revulsion Kafka felt towards some of the physical aspects of life. But Tauber seems to miss certain satirical elements in the allegories; The Castle and The Trial surely contain a burlesque of bureaucracy, and this opinion is strengthened by the realization that Kafka lived under the Austrian Hapsburg Empire. Kafka died of tuberculosis at the age of 41. The final year of his life, however, was made happy by a felicitous love affair. Unfortunately this more congenial mood is not reflected in any of the later pieces. The inference could be drawn, and Tauber suggests it, that the new sense of well-being felt by Kafka would have integrated itself into his work.

Though many of Kafka's literary efforts are incomplete (both The Trial and The Castle are unfinished), they possess a compelling magnetism that powerfully attracts the intelligent reader's attention. As an analysis of and a commentary on Kafka's works, Tauber's Franz Kafka: An Interpretation is an important and valuable study, though perhaps not definitive.

Chaplin and Documentaries

The University of Toronto Film Society presented its members with a mixed grill last Sunday. There were four documentaries, of which two were more interesting than the other two, and two early Chaplin pictures, one of which alone would have made spending Sunday afternoon in the Museum Theatre worthwhile.

Since hardly any of us have been to Lapland, the Swedish documentary on this country was bound to be interesting no matter how badly done. It was a beautifully composed film, however, and showed us an exotic, happy land of Lapps and reindeer with a good deal of imaginative poetry, some passages of which (the comparison of flowing water to a sky filled with wild swans) are not easily forgotten.

Night Mail, an English documentary on the London-to-Glasgow mail-train, tried too hard at times for its poetic effects. As in Song of Ceylon, Basil Wright here tried some unusual background commentary; in Song of Ceylon he used a 16th century traveller's account of that country, and in

Let's LOOK at it!

YES MA'AM YOU CAN afford to be fastidious. That's a nice feature of quality buying. A suit from Joan Rigby is a quality purchase that outlasts the run-o'-the-mill variety, feels better, lasts longer, faces up to many new seasons with its same old quality while inviting such subtle re-newing as the addition of top-of-the-fashion accessories to bring it up to the day after tomorrow. Make a habit of dropping in at 54 Bloor Street West in passing, just to see what comes in week after week. The very friendly people there may be busy but they like to chat about what to wear where, when, and why.

MEN . . . IF you're considering a new suit give a thought to Teasdall's. They're not a budget house but cater to a great many students, have learned that very frequently students like to pay as their checks come in . . . therefore special arrangements can be made for slow payments. Shirts, pyjamas, ties, dressing-gowns socks can also be purchased with your suit. Have a chat with Mr. Beattie. He's got the college man's point of view. 804 Yonge Street.

SKIRTS AND SWEATERS are popular items at this time of year. This is the experience of the Evangeline Shops, who have done considerable catering to the college girl and girl about town. That's why they bring in rafts of new ones to brighten the eye, combinations to mix or match to your heart's content. The new Evangeline Shop, at Bloor and Bay caters to the college trade in a very special way, is a grand spot for housecoats, lingerie, costume jewellery, accessories, skirts, sweaters, suits.

WATT'S, like many shops catering to the student trade, find that students make good budget customers, don't embark on a purchase project without taking care of payments when due, moreover students know what they want, shop intelligently. F. J. Watt's new Spring suits and coats and sweaters and skirts are arriving, and Mr. Watt wants you to drop in and look over the new arrivals, study the new prints. There are some dandy new belts too, in reptile and suede, ready to clinch your waist into that good trim look.

THREE NAVY DRESSES . . . make news at Northways. They're basic beauties in crepe and bengaline, can take any amount of costume jewellery or leave it alone. First, in crepe and bengaline, has empire waist, zips down the back and flattering long sleeves. The second, another winner, slim front, gored backnew plunged neckline. The third, interesting slimness in front, back gores give it fullness and a new wind-blown line which is exceedingly flattering. See these in Fashionland.

TUDOR GRAPE PINEAPPLE is a new fruit flavour in ice creams that has something very special to offer, the fresh grape, fresh pineapple flavour which combines into a new and genuinely better flavour . . . and the ice cream it's made of comes with a new smoothness and richness of quality which distinguishes all new Tudor ice cream. Also the Tudor Fruit Salad is very delicious, makes a perfect dessert for the salad-conscious who insists on his d ally quota of fruit in the raw. Other Tudor flavours are equally delicious. Ask for Tudor and you'll get it. Made by Acme Farmers' Dairy.

Our Readers Write

THE L.P.P. VIEW

The Editor, The Varsity:

To reply in detail to Capt. Geary's letter would take much more space than is available, so I will confine myself to dealing with just a few of the points raised. The first is whether force can stop an idea. Here Capt. Geary falls into a common trap. What is his answer to the problems of crime and juvenile delinquency? To search out the causes in insecurity, bad housing, lack of recreational facilities and the like. No, the answer is more police, jails, and lashes. The only trouble is these measures don't work. The same thinking in international affairs has us offering the war-torn and backward peoples of the world guns, tanks and planes instead of a better way of life. Already in China, Greece, and elsewhere this policy has proven bankrupt. And yet a display of force is the weak reed upon which Capt. Geary and his friends (presumably Queen's Park conservatives since Sergeant-at-Arms is a lush political appointment) place their trust. Huge armaments guarantee war. They have never stopped the spread of a new idea.

Secondly I question the accuracy of Capt. Geary's information on international affairs generally and on the Soviet Union and the New Democracies in particular. He comes out with the amazing statement that "when the Germans invaded their country in 1941, tens of thousands of Russian people, together with whole divisions of the Russian army flocked to surrender". This is news to me. There were, it is true, Ukranian and other fascist nationalist groups in the German army, but from the beginning the vast majority of the peoples of the Soviet Union fought with great heroism. In fact the whole military strategy of the Red Army in 1941 was based on a scorched earth policy, and on being able to leave numerous groups of guerrillas behind to fight without direction or help from the main army groups. Further, according to Allied statements, the Soviet Union had little trouble with fifth columnists during the war. Hardly a likely condition if tens of thousands, including whole army divisions were anxious to surrender.

I submit, Mr. Editor, that Capt. Geary should either produce evidence from official sources backing up his claims regarding Russian desertions in 1941 or else have the courage to admit that he has committed a grave slander on a wartime ally tens of thousands of whose people, men, women and children, showed courage so exemplary as to be deserving of V.C.'s rather than slander. I suggest that Capt. Geary cannot back ridiculous claims and that many of his statements are based on misinformation and prejudice rather than a careful perusal of the official facts which are readily available. It is all right for Capt. Geary in the sinecure comfort of his office to talk about our high standard of living. But seven million people of the Soviet Union lost their lives and much of her most fertile and productive territory over-run. Under similar circumstances our standard of living would be low too. Ignored is the fact that under socialism the standard of living of the Sov.et peoples has risen steadily and that right now while inflation robs the Canadian worker's pocket-book, in the Soviet Union wages are rising (by government policy, not costly strikes) and prices have been falling steadily. This is the kind of argument it takes more than atom bombs, Capt. Geary, to beat.

MISQUOTED

The Editor, The Varsity:
Dear Sir:

In your issue of Feb. 8, 1949, Page Four, the article on Anthropology Survey stated that the purpose of retaining the raw data is "to prevent the animosity of the residents of the districts." I was misquoted. There is nothing in the aims or methods of the survey to excite the animosity of anyone. What I said was that raw data were not turned over to the Civic Advisory Council "to preserve the anonymity of the residents who co-operated by supplying us with useful information."

I should be grateful if a note of this correction could be inserted in an early edition of The Varsity.

Canadian government."

World Division

Mr. Pearson pointed out "Today the world is divided into two superstates. It is a very tragic situation, but on one side is the U.S.S.R. with its satellite states, and on the other is the group of democratic states with the super-state, the U.S. Surely it is good sense to line up with our friends in the common fight."

Referring to the proposed North Atlantic Pact, Mr. Pearson said "It is a pact for peace, not for war, and will be within the charter of the U.N. under Article 52." The minister added, "There would be no pact if the Security Council could guarantee peace, but the justification of the Pact can be seen in the breakdown of the Security Council. This breakdown is due mainly to the obstructionist and recalcitrant policy of the U.S.S.R. Co-operation with Russia is possible only on Russian terms, and Canadian diplomats serve the interests of Canada, not of Russia."

Minister Clashes

U.S. to reconvene the UN Atomic Energy Commission.

"Blindly Follow U.S."

Second speaker for the affirmative, D. J. Quigley, said until recently Canada was a satellite of Britain, and has now had to turn to the U.S. He declared that if Canada had been able to join the airlift she would have. Canadians received UN recognition, he maintained, because U.S. wishes it. He claimed the Atomic Energy Commission reinstatement was the work of several other small nations. The world today is split by two different, conflicting ideologies, he said, and Canada has chosen to follow the one most nearly allied socially, historically and economically to her own ideals —the one fostered by the U.S. When the chips are down, he declared, we must follow blindly the U.S.

J. A. Geller, I U.C., second speaker for the opposition, said Canada can go against the U.S. when it is in her best interest; as in the case of the austerity program. The refusal of American goods entailed in this plan, he said, is against the U.S. interests. No nation is independent, Geller maintained; Canada is dependent on U.S. and Britain and they are reciprocally dependent on Canada.

Though asked by the U.S. to join the Pan-American Union, he stated, Canada has consistently refused. From time immemorial, Geller continued, nations have banded together for mutual defence against an aggressor. That is what Canada is doing in supporting the North Atlantic Pact, he said.

pendent on international conditions less favorable now and in the months ahead than they had been in the immediate past. "Prosperity here has depended far too much in the last 12 months on U.S. aid to Europe," Pearson said.

The External Affairs Minister declared that Canada under the Liberal party had tried to work as much as possible with the United Nations. "Our hope for peace is at present based on a North American alliance to hold Communism in check. This must be backed by the United States if it is to be at all possible, and we may have to contend with congressional opposition there," he said.

Interfac Hockey Playoffs Begin

By JOHN MOYSE

The regular season is over in intramural hockey and the playoffs start today. Eleven teams will strive for top honors this year, Sr. Vic and Sr. SPS are the first group representatives while Jr. Vic and St. Michael's As, holders of the two top spots in group two will compete. The remaining six groups will contribute one squad each to the proceedings.

Six teams finished the season unbeaten and untied. All three Trinity squads boast this record as well as two Forestry teams and the SPS III of the fourth group. Trinity As scored 55 times in their six game schedule to lead the list of goal producers by a wide margin. Best defensive team was Sr. Vic, whose two netminders missed only three pucks in five contests. Carl and Higgins were the top twine minders. The Sr. Vic-Ajax contest scheduled for tonight was permanently cancelled for lack of available ice facilities.

If there were a "Most Valuable Player Trophy" in the intramural league, Max Putnam and Jay Watt, linemates of the Knox entry would be among the leading contenders. The pair stood first and second in the individual scoring race. Putnam bagged twelve goals and Watt followed close behind with eleven markers to his credit. Together they accounted for 23 of Knox's 32 goals.

Wardrop of Trinity A netted eleven to tie for second spot with Watt. John Lieshman, also of the Trinity A squad copped fourth spot with a nine goal net along with Cooke of Pharmacy, while Harley and Clarke of Trinity and Forestry Bees respectively were deadlocked for fifth.

Wardrop's six goal effort against UC was the high game total with Putnam sinking five in one game to take second spot in this department.

Blue Cagers Need Victory To Force Tie

With four straight victories under their belts, University of Toronto senior basketball Blues face their toughest week-end of the season, with a league game in London this Friday against their perennial rivals, Western Mustangs, and an exhibition game Saturday night in Windsor against the powerful Assumption College Purple Raiders.

The Blues must win Friday night's game with Western to force a first-place tie with the Mustangs. Only defeat suffered so far by the Blues in league competition was against the same Western Mustangs in the opening game of the season in Toronto. Since then the Blues have beaten McGill Redmen twice, 66-52 and 52-26, Queen's once, 54-37, and University of Buffalo once, 55-46.

Little Eddie Brennan took scoring honors away from Glen Pettinger in last week-end's games against Queen's and McGill, totalling 37 points in the two games. Pettinger, Bill LaChance and Doug Tyndall were other prolific scorers.

Coach Bob Masterson and the Blues are confident they can pull the intercollegiate basketball championship out of the fire, just as the football team did last fall. Should Varsity win its two remaining games against Western and Queen's, they will force a playoff with the Mustangs, similar to the post-season football playoff which gave Varsity the senior intercollegiate title.

Will history repeat?

Blues to Montreal To Play Twin Bill Both Tilts Crucial

By HAL HOLDEN

The Varsity Blues entrained for Montreal today where they will play the first two games of a three game road trip which will just about decide whether they'll hold onto the Queen's Cup for another year or not.

Ace Bailey's Blueshirts skirmish with the McGill Redmen at the Forum in the Quebec Metropolis tomorrow night in a game that is part of the McGill Winter Carnival program. After what promises to be a tough session with the Big Red Machine the Blues move into Verdun and tackle the University of Montreal Carabins.

This is the second time this season that Varsity has received a rough ride from the schedule. Earlier in the season the Blues split a similar double-header with the same two Montreal clubs. This time the champs will have to sweep the two contests or bid farewell to their hopes of retaining the title.

After their do or die engagements in Montreal the Blues return home until Wednesday when they travel to Kingston and come to grips with the winless Gaels.

Down Montreal way, even in the McGill camp, they're taking it for granted the U. of Montreal Carabins will wind up on top. Bob Bornstein writes in the "McGill Daily" that "there is still a mathematical possibility that Toronto could take it all, but the Blues' chances of overhauling U. of M. are about as good as the chance of McGill having cheerleaderettes next year."

Les Carabins have two games left to play and one of them is against Varsity Saturday night. The other is against McGill Redmen. Neither club has been a pushover for the Montrealers this year and it could turn into a disastrous weekend for the Carabins. To assure themselves of the title, Therrien's Terrors need only to win one of these encounters. If they lose both, and stranger things have happened, and Varsity swept its three remaining games, a tie would result for the league lead and a play-off would be necessitated.

The least the Blues can do is let them know there is another team in the league besides Les Carabins.

Varsity Bows Now Dominate Mail Archers

The Canadian Indoor Mail Match archery competition, now in its third year, boasts a seven-team roster this year who will vie for the C.I.M.M. Trophy. The Hart House entry was successful last year in winning the trophy and promise to make another impressive showing this year.

Other clubs include the Winnipeg Archery Club, Winnipeg Canoe Club, Six Nations Archery Club from Oshweken, Greenwood Archers from Vancouver, Technocracy Archery Club of Toronto, and the Cedarvale Archers of Toronto.

Shooting this year is on the upgrade. The highest team score last year was 2676, set by the Hart House aggregation; this year with only three weeks of competition gone, that score has been topped no less than seven times. This year's high is 2794 which was piled up by the Winnipeg Archery Club. High individual score is held by Bill Frost of Varsity whose 512 total stands to date.

The Gold Award winners this year to date total 10 against only eight for the whole of last season, which again proves the great improvement in the calibre of this year's shooting.

Team Standing (Third Week)

(1) Hart House, 7967; (2) Winnipeg A.C., 7965; (3) Six Nations, 7630; (4) Vancouver, 7016; (5) Technocracy, 6713; (6) Winnipeg C.C, 5850; (7) Cedarvale, 3911.

H. H. ARCHERS DEFEAT OAC

Hart House Archers played host to a team from OAC Tuesday evening and scored their second triumph over the Guelph bowmen by a 3996-2974 score. The local archers had previously outclassed the same OAC squad in Guelph by a decisive 2859-1937 margin. The Varsityites are last year's defending champions.

Hey! Hey! Hey!

Where are all you swimmers hiding yourselves these days?

The Department of Athletics and Physical Education for Women (sounds pretty long, doesn't it? But that's what they stick on their letterhead) have managed to have the Lillian Massey pool open for recreational swimming three days a week, but QUOTE "Some periods have been cancelled due to lack of interest . . . If we find there is not enough interest, these periods may be changed, so it depends on the students."

We women have been beefing for a women's building ever since, and probably even before, Miss Parkes' editorial in a 1917 issue of The Varsity. How are we going to hustle up the completion of this proposed women's building if we don't even show any interest in using the few facilities we have now?

To get back to swimming, Miss Baxter tells us that she has started a diving club on Thursdays from 4.30 to 5.30 in the recreational swimming period. On top of this the recreational swimming hours have been changed to:

Tuesday—4.00-5.00
Wednesday—2.00-4.00
Thursday—1.00-2.00
4.30-5.30

Miss Baxter writes that students who are practicing for the intramural meet can get credit for these periods as well as for the regular practice periods at OCE on Monday and Wednesday nights.

There's no skiing these days, no skating, no tobogganing, no sleigh rides but (Music, Maestro!—Phil Harris, that is)

"Don't despair
Use your head,
Wet your hair,
Use the L.M. poo'."

HOCKEY

In a fast, but furious game yesterday, Vic II succumbed to the yet-to-be-defeated Meds by a score of 6-0. This sends the Meds into the playoffs against the winners of Group I.

As to the game itself. The first period remained scoreless with the Vic II girls playing a strong offensive battle at the beginning. The opposition, however, poured shots at the Scarlet and Gold net which, but for the good goaling, would have tallied.

The second and third periods saw the Meds team, under the leadership of Irene Haines, who chalked up five goals, three unassisted, get up steam to win the game with a slight margin. Throughout these two periods the Vic goalie, Erylene Bryden, stemmed the attack, stopping the flying puck from all angles.

Meds' defense was particularly strong with Jean Fletcher and Estelle Heakes backing up the flying forwards, thus enabling them to score. Sally Sarles was the other goal-getter with Mary Struthers and Kay Batanoff gaining assists.

FIRST LEAGUE

The final game in Group I, played Tuesday, found the Vic I edging out a 1-0 win over the St. Hilda's I. Peg Taplin did the honours on a pass from Alison Jeffries who played her usually strong game. The netminding of the losersw as the outstanding feature of the game with Marg Martin stopping many labelled shots. The Saints kept up the fighting spirit to the end with Ros Lloyd doing double duty by leading the attacks and back-checking her opponents.

Varsity tracksters are holding a meet at Hart House today which will feature competitors from North Toronto, West End "Y" and possibly from East York as a sort of trial and training in preparation for the forthcoming 91st Highlanders games in Hamilton. The 50 and 600 yards events and the mile and eight lap relay will be contested with the 100, 300, 1000 yards and the twelve lap relay to be run off next week.

Today is the start of the interfac puck playoffs and SPS IV oppose Trinity C in the opener at 12:30 while the four o'clock encounter will feature the Trinity and Forestry Bee entries.

On the major hoop floor the PHE II and SPS III shot it out to a 27-27 ending yesterday in Hart House. It was a real deadlock all the way as both squads piled up 15 points in the initial half and rang up twelve each in the final frame.

LaFontaine was top contributor for the engineers with thirteen counters while teammate Lemon sank six. Skulemen Trower and Bryce both rang up trios. Jack Carson and Hank Henshall with five each led the red and white and Danylchuk and Keegan were good for four per. Neving with three and Heath, Brian and Ireland who got two, complete the PHE total.

Senior UC's cage quintet took the measure of the St. Mike's Bees yesterday, administering a 35 - 14 trouncing to the double blue basketeers. UC held a six point lead at the half and went on to outscore the Mikemen 21-6 in the last frame.

Penny and Durbin led the red and white scoring parade with sixes while Goldberg and Bockneck followed with five each and Johnson and Cooper netted four apiece. For St. Mike's it was Murphy with five, McMullen and Farrell who sank three per and Carr and Huschuli wind it up with two and one respectively.

Architecture's aqua-polo entry swamped SPS III yesterday by a 9-0 margin. Crang was the big goal-getter for the builders with five goal throws. Kyro added two while Anderson and McNaught potted singles for the winners.

Services Dull Says Debaters From Trinity

The present conduct of Trinity College Chapel services was criticised when the motion "Resolved that the chapel as presently constituted no longer serves a useful purpose" was carried by a vote of 15-12 at a meeting of the Trinity Literary Institute.

Dave Donaldson opened for the affirmative with quotations from diverse sources to the effect that the chapel should be the centre of college life, especially in a college, endowed by the Church of England. He affirmed that "the centre of activity is the buttery not the chapel". He pointed out that although the chapel did obviously have some use, it should be condemned for not fully developing its potentialities.

Admitting that "only small numbers attend" Don Hutcheon maintained in the opening opposition speech that the chapel is serving a useful purpose "even if it does only for those who make use of it". He claimed that the chapel was for "giving rather than receiving" (a statement later denied by the affirmative) and that it was not for "making converts or being a missionary service".

The first of several speakers who criticized the conduct of the services was Pete Alley, speaking second for the affirmative. He felt that a chapel should be more than a building, "it is the body of people who attend". He condemned the Trinity chapel as "a trade school" for the theologs and "a place which at present no more than supplies a place for worship."

Durley Burland quoted the Common Book of Prayer that church college students should receive Communion every Sunday at least. He admitted that this was not the practice and criticized the faculty members for the remissness. He claimed, however, that the individuals were to blame and not the institution, "If 100% attended (the chapel) you could not say," he affirmed, "that it was serving a more useful purpose."

The opposition maintained throughout that abuses were insufficient grounds for passing the motion but the contentions of Lawson (4th year) that the chapel services were "most unattractive" and that it was a "church" rather than a "chapel" carried the majority, with the backing of a divinity student who claimed that his fellows were as "pained" by the services as any and slated the ministers.

This creation of the meteorologists which has caused a few critically raised eyebrows among students passing along "Philosophers' Walk" isn't really a beehive as Louise Gardiner, III UC, discovered. The snow bedecked box actually contains temperature recording instruments. Not so long ago a thermometer was stolen from this little box and has not been returned.

Award Toronto Professor Nuffield Metallurgy Prize

A Nuffield Travelling Fellowship in Extraction Metallurgy has been awarded to Harry U. Ross, assistant professor of Metallurgical Engineering, President Smith announced today.

The fellowship is one of five made available each year for five years by the Nuffield Foundation with the object of advancing research and training in extractive metallurgy and mineral dressing. Offered to members of the teaching staffs of universities and approved mining and metallurgical schools in Great Britain and other parts of the Commonwealth they enable the holder to visit important mining and metallurgical centres during the summer vacation.

Professor Ross proposes first to visit Norway and Sweden to make a first-hand study of their iron and steel industries, in particular the new Norwegian Tysland-Hole process for smelting iron ore electrically. In North America, the blast furnace is used almost exclusively for the smelting of ore. The depletion of suitable coal for blast furnace use and its rising cost have created a need for close study of the electric process.

While in England Professor Ross plans to visit the most important of the steel plants and to attend the Fourth Empire Mining and Metallurgical Congress in London and Oxford in July.

U.S. Leads Canada To Warlike Course Says LPP Leader

An overflow audience in the Economics Building last night heard Tim Buck, national leader of the LPP, demand that Canada drop a policy of economic and political subservience to the United States which he said "is restricting development of the Canadian economy and leading Canada to war."

Speaker Heckled

Laughter and shouted comments interrupted the speaker sporadically throughout his address and the question period which followed. Applause came after a member of the audience, during the question period, asked, "I wonder why a speaker cannot make an address without encountering loud and vociferous interruptions "

In opening his speech, Mr. Buck said that Canadians should become aware of the significance of a political and economic crisis that has resulted from a "reorientation of Canadian government policy toward subservience to the U.S." Most people, he continued, saw this crisis in the form of a shortage of American dollars and considered its solution as merely one of conserving and collecting these dollars.

Blames U.S.

"But," he said, "the real crisis stems mainly from the fact that in 1947 the U.S. government decided to turn its back on the Potsdam Agreement and abandon U.N. for an outside power block. The Canadian government then reoriented its economic policy to one which would have no competition between the U.S. and Canada in Marshall Plan countries, including Great Britain. At the same time the government also changed its foreign policy from one of no committments to one of prior commitments, as shown in plans for the Atlantic Pact."

The speaker referred to a recent editorial in "Saturday Night", which he said is "close to Liberal policy-making circles." This editorial, he stated, admitted that the Canadian government had to drop plans for new trade relations between the U.S. and Canada because they had been based on the assumption of a Republican victory in the U.S. elections last fall. The newspaper had said that trade reciprocity between the two countries had been hoped for, he added. More American manufactured goods would be allowed into Canada in return for opening the U.S. border to Canadian raw materials, he said.

Such a policy, Buck said, would lead to the strangling of Canadian manufacturing and the conversion of Canada into a mere producer of raw materials for American manufacturers.

Russian Attack "Impossible"

In attacking Canadian participation in the North Atlantic Pact, the Communist leader said that aggression by Russia against Canada is an "impossibility." He added, "There is only one nation in the world with the navy, shipping and long range bombers necessary to carry war across oceans. That country is the United States."

Recent changes in the U.S. military budget by President Truman, said Buck, show that America is preparing for aggressive war. Buck said President Truman had $300,000,000 removed from the budget for the construction of jet fighters and had an equal sum applied to the manufacture of B-36 bombers. Bombers such as these are offensive weapons, he asserted, while jet fighters are meant for defence.

The speaker compared the writings of the "capitalist press" with the leaders of the "new democracies" in eastern Europe and of Russians. The inevitability of war is constantly reiterated in the west, while Communists emphasize the ease with which co-operation between capitalist and socialist countries may be attained, Buck said.

He warned, "The result of the war which the leaders of capitalist nations are preparing for, if they are victorious, will inevitably be a reaction to neo-fascism. The new democracies could only be fought by a fascist state."

Buck emphasised the need for Canadians to develop a true national culture. "In Canada we have never had a sustained attempt by the government to encourage development of such a culture."

US Student Body Extends Goodwill Via NFCUS Prexy

During his visit to the University of Wisconsin earlier this week, Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, President of the National Federation of Canadian University Students visited the offices of The United States National Student's Association and returned with some interesting information about The NFCUS' American counterpart.

The USNSA is a much larger organization that NFCUS, claiming about 700,000 members in 280 American universities. Organized on different lines than NFCUS, USNSA has a paid executive, and a very active program. They also have many of the same problems that NFCUS faces, Gwynne-Timothy said, "the two big ones being student apathy and misunderstanding of the aims and activities of the student organization."

Study Co-operation

The object of Gwynne-Timothy's visit to USNSA was to discuss ways and means of effecting closer co-operation between NFCUS and the American union. "We got along very well," Gwynne-Timothy stated.

He also brought back a message from The USNSA: "The National Student's Association extends its heartiest good wishes to the NFCUS. Through the visit of your president, Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, to our national headquarters, a close bond of friendship has been

Ontario Attorney General Will Speak in West Hall

The Hon. Leslie Blackwell, K.C., Attorney General for Ontario, will address a noonday rally next Wednesday in West Hall of UC.

Mr. Blackwell has represented Eglinton riding in the Ontario House since 1943. He has served as Attorney General in the present government since it came to power in 1943. Mr. Blackwell will be a leading contender for the leadership of the Provincial Party at the forthcoming Provincial Convention, which is to be held in April.

Mr. Blackwell served in the First Great War with the 75th Battalion and was severely wounded during the battle of Cambrai. After the war he attended the U of T and Osgoode Hall and was called to the bar in 1926.

Mr. Blackwell has been closely connected with athletics on the campus. He has acted as coach of the water polo team and coached the intermediate and senior football teams.

New & Entrenous

'Mister Microphone McLean'

By HARRY K. RASKY

Ross McLean should have been named Mike McLean.

And this is why. Just as some plumpish women have a perplexing passion for chocolates, so Mister McLean has an inexplicable desire to use alliterations. In his everyday speech, and more especially in his writing the mellifluous McLean carefully picks and chooses his words to make them tingle off the end of the tongue.

While feature editor of The Varsity he had a daily column—New & Entrenous. He introduced a record column which bore such flattering heads as "Platter Chatter" and "Sermon Re Herman".

Re Radio

As founder of radio on the campus, McLean called his program "Campus Call". With his idea to begin a series of radio art lectures came the nimble name "Kilocycle College".

Along with his appetite for alliterations go his home-made words. Like a sophisticated Colonel Stoopnagel, McLean can make words do somersaults and juggles phases like so many oranges. Musicians never play for McLean; they music they talk on records for this word-gymnast is "a disc-ussion." A bevy of beauties are renamed " a Glorious Gal-lery".

During the ISS campaign in past years our man McLean wrote a daily publicity campaign column —"McLean's mISSives".

Being Born

A psychiatrist may have explained that McLean always wanted to be born with an alliterated name. In fact, he was born Evan Ross McLean in Guelph, Ontario, but soon moved to Brantford where he attended high school.

The rising Ross was a newspaperman before leaving high school. He edited, wrote and published a journal while in Senior Fourth— The East End Expositor. A column in the school year book, which he edited in his final year, contained a column — Meandering with McLean.

He joined the staff of The Brantford Expositor in 1941 as a sub reporter. Surprised was McLean when they handed him a camera and informed him that he was also the staff photographer. ("They told me what buttons to push").

London and the "Free Press" was the next stop for the McLean train. A short stay in the Army Signal Corps and McLean moved to the University of Toronto.

Ross McLean looks like his writing. In a time when they were still considered intellectual he wore horn-rimmed glasses. These were so peculiar to him, that later they were sometimes referred to as "Ross McLean glasses". Over six feet in height, he resembles a "walking ivory tower".

Extra-Curricular Eros

If medals were handed out for extra-curricular activities, McLean would have a chest-full. Although the McLean name may not be familiar to the freshman reader, a few years ago it was as common to see it in The Varsity pages as the Champus Cat.

In his second year at college,

Elections

Nominations for Hart House committees open today. Today until next Wednesday a number of undergraduates will place their names on the nominating list.

These candidates are interested in the affairs of Hart House. But, to judge from previous years, the male stu-dnts of this university are not particularly interested in the affairs of Hart House or in the qualifications of these candidates.

Last year about one-third of those eligible voted. Two years ago the percentage was even lower.

Almost very undergraduate male at this university takes part in some Hart House activity—even if his activity is confined only to the use of the dining hall. Whatever his interest, his opinion can best be expressed by voting for or against the individuals running for office.

In any democratic election the number of ballots cast is usually far less than the number of eligible voters. This is as true of campus elections as anywhere else. And such apathy indicates a lack of interest in government. It is not a question of politics, with its popular connotations, but a question of democracy in action. Neither the student body of a university nor the electorate of a nation can justly criticize the actions of its government if it neglects to turn out on election day. And election day, in this instance is March 3rd.

Nearly all students believe in democracy, although their interpretations may be vague and varied. But democracy is not only difficult to gain, it is difficult to retain and requires constant vigilance to ensure that it is not lost. And one of the first symptoms of a decaying democracy is an apathetic electorate which neglects its responsibility and leaves its affairs in the hands of a small energetic group, while smugly believing that it is being governed in a democratic manner.

Government is no better than its smallest unit. Each student organization on this campus is a small unit of government. And, in the case of Hart House, it represents the largest segment of student government to be found at this university.

If your attitude is governed by self-interest, if nothing else, you should be in Hart House March 3rd, marking ballot slips. It is to your advantage.

ant poked a gun in Beckett's ribs and said "Your money or your life". At this point, she said, she screamed, there was a scuffle, Beckett fell to the ground, and the man ran off. Beckett corroborrated this evidence, adding that his assailant tripped him.

Gardiner said that Campbell did not get close to the couple. "He was afraid to", he said, "Beckett tripped over his own big feet and fell into the gutter, Baden-Powell screamed, and we scrammed." Gardiner proved to be such a garrulous witness under Crown Counsel S. Lavine that Justice Lovekin had to request that he confine his remarks to answering the questions.

Gutter and Blood

The third witness, Dr. Moffat, gave as his residence address Knox College. When he arrived on the scene he said that he found Beckett in the gutter, bleeding from the left temple artery. He described the injury as a mild concussion. He said that he also found a hysterical woman on the scene. He described the woman as Miss Baden-Powell and said that he gave her a mild sedative, Corby's Tonic, and sent her home.

Bruce Quarrington, who gave psychology as his occupation admitted that he had given an assignment to the class of which Campbell is a member. The assignment was an experiment to test observation and recall under emotional stress. He said that it was a voluntary assignment and only the more sincere and interested students would carry it out.

Police Evidence

Officer L. Grumbell, of the University Police, said that he saw the whole thing. "I heard a scream," he said, "and saw two people scuffling. One of them fled." Officer Grumbell apprehended the person who fled and identified him as Campbell. "I took a red toy pistol from him", he said, "a mask, and a cane". "When I came back I saw Beckett on the ground, apparently seriously injured, in a semi-conscious condition."

Hank Westcott, who took the pictures of the scuffle, said that he ran for help because he didn't want to get his camera broken. He emphasized that he definitely did not run from cowardice.

When asked why he saw nothing unusual in the fact the man coming toward him was wearing a mask, Beckett said that there were a lot of SPS men coming home from the school house at that time and he thought this person was one of them, therefore he paid no attention to him.

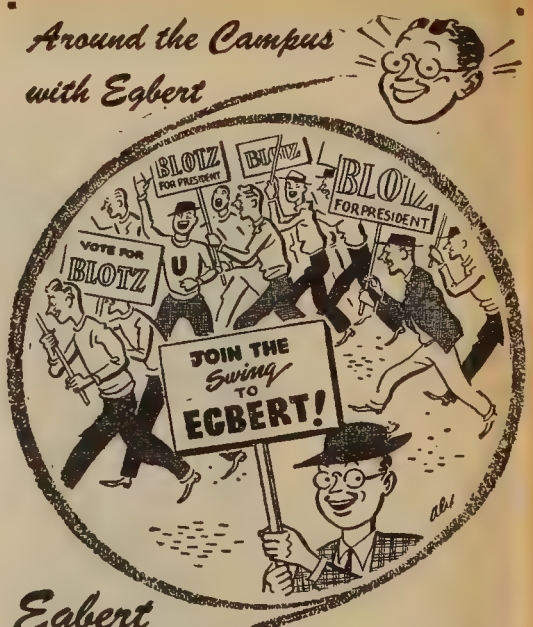
"Some students have a part in running the Union but they aren't elected . . . They seem to have no concept of government on the student level. Many didn't even know that overall union control was in student hands.

Friction In Government

"There is a great deal of friction between the governing body of the Student Union and the Student Government. One of the things our committee will have to do is define exactly what the responsibilities of the Union governing body are.



"The Wisconsin newspaper is not of the same calibre as The Varsity . . . They pay 5 cents a copy for it . . . It is put out by the School Of Journalism and seems to be free to express overall opinions . . . It is fairly widely read.

"I was impressed with the number of activities they carry on. On Sunday, for instance, which in Toronto is a quiet day something like 2500 people use the union. The lounges were filled, the were movies in the small theatre, a ski meet outside organized by the Union (with coffee and donuts), meals were served, a tea dance after the ski meet, and square dancing in the evening. Sunday evening there was also a concert."

U.S. Student Union Given Great Praise By NFCUS Head

There is no question that a student union can become a centre of college life to a degree that cannot be imagined here at the University of Toronto, declared Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, SAC President, in an interview yesterday afternoon.

Wisconsin Union

Gwynne-Timothy was speaking about the student's union at The University of Wisconsin which he visited last week. Ruth Comfort, II Occupational Therapy, Hart House Warden Nicholas Ignatieff, Hart House Comptroller W. R. Cowan and SAC Sec. Treas. E. A. Macdonald also went to Madison, Wisc. to examine the student union which many authorities consider the finest in the United States.

"We were all impressed by the enthusiasm and interest students there have for the union," Gwynne-Timothy said. "Of the 17,000 students about 16,000 use the union regularly and each of these persons participate in about four of 20 possible activities."

The Toronto group flew down to Madison last Saturday and returned to Toronto Wednesday night. During their visit they talked with Student Union officials, Wisconsin students. Several days were spent examining the workings, activities and administration of the Wisconsin Union.

Report to SAC

A full report on the findings and recommendations arising out of the visit will be made to the next meeting of the SAC, Gwynne-Timothy said.

Some of the impressions Gwynne-Timothy brought back from Madison: "The Student's Union has two theatres, one quite large, and reputed to be among the five best theatres in the United States, and the other a small experimental Little Theatre seating only 350 people. Last year these theatres staged 520 different shows, concerts and recitals. Ordinarily these theatres put on student shows without interference from professional unions.

Women Not Pretty

"The women on the Wisconsin campus aren't half as pretty as on the Toronto campus . . . I was really surprised.

"One of the more interesting features of the Union is the 'Ratts Keller'. It seems to be a combination pub and coffee shop. They sell beer, on draft for ten sents . . . but the students didn't seem to be drinking much . . . We would like

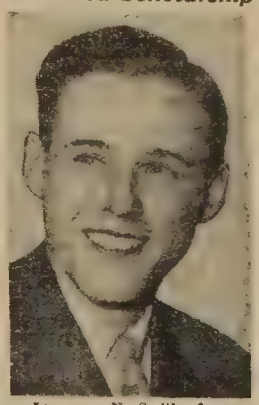
ISS Fund Drive Fails To Reach Stated Objective

Failure of the ISS fund drive to reach its objective of $10,000 was announced in the drive result statement issued by ISS chairman Warren Goldring yesterday. "Although the exact total gathered by the week-long drive is not known yet," Goldring said, "it is obvious the campaign was not successful."

Since the objective has not been reached, contributions will still be received, the ISS statement said. "Many DVA students may want to contribute now that they have their cheques." Contributions will be accepted at the SAC office, or at the local ISS office, 119 St. George Street.



Program Affected

Goldring declared the small response to the appeal may mean ISS will have to cut its program. This may result in a continuance of hunger and lack of books in European and Asiatic universities. Again, it may mean that fewer DP and European student will be able to come to Canada to study here, he said.

Definite plans as to what parts of the program will have to be changed will not be known until the total is complete.

Congratulations to all faculties and colleges which did well in the campaign were offered by Goldring, who also extended his appreciation to all those who worked in the campaign.

Awarded Scholarship

Lawrence N. Smith, former editor of The Varsity, has been awarded the third Canadian Kemsley Scholarship in journalism. He will spend a year in Britain gaining experience on the Kemsley newspapers.

Announcement of the scholarship was made Tuesday by Senator W. Rupert Davies, chairman of the Canadian section, Empire Press Union. The Union sponsored the competition for the award. The scholarship is also awarded in Australia, New Zealand, and South Africa, and is to stimulate the exchange of experience among British and commonwealth journalists.

Smith was editor of The Varsity in 1940-41.

East-West Ball Games Plus TTC Street-Cars Equal Optometry Show

The College of Optometry will present its annual show, "The Spectacle of '49", March 8 and 9 at the Hart House Theatre. Director Ron McClung has chosen to offer more small parts and more dialogue, rather than a few stars and many songs, which are usually the feature of college shows.

'Approach To Family Life' Opens J. V. Moberly Series

Dr. Evelyn Millis Duvall, Executive Secretary, The National Council on Family Relations, Chicago, Illinois, will open the J. Vera Moberly Lectures on Feb. 22 at 4.30 p.m. in the Museum Theatre.

Dr. Duvall will speak on "Today's Approach to Family Life".

She has made several radio appearances on "America's Town Meeting of the Air" and has lectured at several leading American Universities, one of which was the University of Chicago. Dr. Duvall is also the author of six books on family relations and is associate editor of "Marriage and Family Living".

The lectureship is being presented to the University of Toronto by the Infant's Homes of Toronto in memory of Miss Vera Moberly, an outstanding social worker in the Infant's Homes and a graduate of the School of Social Work in this university.

The lectures are being administered by a committee composed of representatives from the Infant's Homes, School of Social Work, School of Nursing, School of Hygiene and the Faculty of Medicine.

Ukrainian Dancing, Singing Highlights of ISO Evening

The Russian and Ukrainian Clubs as guests of the International Student Organization reciprocated by providing the guest artists at a get-together in the Women's Union Wednesday evening.

A colorful example of Ukrainian culture was exhibited by the performance of Bill Sametz, III U.C., and Olga Worobec of the Ukrainian Club, in a lively variation of the mountaineer dance of their homeland. It depicted a young hero's return from the wars to his own valley and the girl he loves. To the accompaniment of his own accordion, a youthful tenor, Walter Gonas, contributed two lively Russian folk songs. Later he sang the popular "If You Ever Go Across the Sea to Ireland" to add a cosmopolitan touch.

Cultural Program

Walter Diakow, Pres. of the Ukrainian Club, explained the club is a social group where students of Ukrainian descent, especially those from out of town, may meet others with similar interests. The club's aim is to present the culture of the Ukraine to its own students and others on the campus. They are contributing the production, "Gypsy Night", to the Folk Festival in Convocation Hall on Sunday evening.

The Russian Club differs from the Ukrainian, in that its membership is largely non-Russian. It comprises a group interested in contemporary Russian music and culture. Organized just last fall it numbers among its achievements the presentation of Chekhov's "The Marriage Proposal".

At the close of the program the members of the three clubs and others present concluded the evening with dancing, featuring several novelty dances.

PRIMATE TO PREACH

Archbishop G. F. Kingston, Primate of All Canada, will be the speaker at a special service at St. Stephen's Church, Sunday, at 7:30 p.m. The service is specially designed for Anglican students at the University, through their official organization, the Canterbury Club.

Archbishop Kingston, who makes his headquarters at Halifax, N.S., has been in Toronto for several days on church business. He was appointed to his present post less than two years ago on the death ff the last primate, Archbishop Derwyn Owen.

Senior Stick Holders Must Attain "B" Standing

Two amendments to the constitution of the Victoria College Union were passed by the VCU Assembly at a meeting earlier this week.

An amendment moved by Acta Victoriana Editor, Doug Fisher, requires holders of the senior stick to attain B standing in the Pass Course and second class honors in an Honor Course in at least one of the holder's years at college.

A second amendment put forward by Bill Kitchen, IV C. and F. would allow candidates to have written one supplemental examinations. (The Assembly nominated candidates for the coming elections for men's and women's senior and athletic sticks.)

Ronald Y. Campbell Acquitted By Jury After Long Debate

At the meeting of the Law Schools Moot Court in UC Junior Common Room last night, Ronald Y. Campbell was acquitted of the first charge of assault and convicted on the second after a lengthy session. Accused was remanded for sentence until 10 a.m., Monday, Feb. 21. The impartial witness in the case, J. Gardiner, revealed that the attempted hold-up was only an experiment in psychology to test observation and recall.

"Pantywaist"

Gardiner described Campbell as a "bit of a pantywaist" and said that he was afraid to use a real gun. The weapon in question at the trial was a toy pistol made of red plastic. When shown the weapon, Thomas A. Beckett said that since he is colorblind, the gun looked gray in color and quite real to him.

When confronted with Campbell, about 5' 6" tall, Beckett, over 6 feet, said, "He seemed much bigger at the time." Beckett said that he was carrying about $125, which he had won in a crap game that afternoon in Burwash Hall. When asked whether he usually won that much, Beckett remarked, "I usually win; that was a fair day". Here Judge Eric Lovekin had to request D. B. Dodds, Defense Counsel, not to wave a pistol at Beckett, since it seemed to make Beckett nervous.

Williams In Debt

Miss Baden-Powell, witness for the Crown, said that she picked up a letter at the scene. "It was from THAT MAN", she said, pointing to Campbell. The letter, signed W. K. Williams, revealed that Campbell owed Williams $100, which was to have been paid back by Jan. 1. Miss Baden-Powell said that the assail-

Musical Festival Including Dances Open To Public

One of the largest musical groups ever brought together in Convocation Hall will take part in the Brotherhood Week Folk Festival Sunday night. Eileen Gorman, I Music, chairman of the SAC subcommittee arranging the Festival, said last night she considered the performers assembled for the event "probably one of the most interesting" groups ever brought together.

The concert will open with a group of English songs sung by the All-Varsity Mixed Chorus under the direction of Harold Neale. Traditional folk dances of Japan, supervised by Merle Matsui, will be performed by a number of Japanese dancers. Other dances will include selections by Leah Leventhal, who does a Spanish dance with folk-melody accompaniment, and by a Ukranian dance group under the direction of Walter Balay.

Other Choirs Sing

Besides the All-Varsity Mixed Chorus, choral groups taking part are the YMHA Displaced Persons Choir, the singers of the Association of United Ukranian Canadians, and the Toronto Negro Choir.

The D. P. choir will sing the Yiddish melodies which are their specialty, and the Ukranian Association's contribution will be a potpourri of their own folk tunes. Director Bill White will lead the Negro Choir in the spirituals "Wade in the Water", "I Know the Lord" and "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot".

No Tickets Sold

No tickets are being sold by the Brotherhood Week committee. The Folk Festival will be open to all students and their friends, as well as the general public, with the purpose of serving as the official opening for the week. President Sidney Smith has consented to give an address endorsing the program of the Inter-Cultural Affairs Committee of the SAC, the sponsors of Brotherhood Week on this campus.

The piano which will be used for all numbers in the Folk Festival has been supplied free by the T. Eaton Company.

TCA Rates To Europe Reduced To One-Half If Enough Students Go

Montreal, Feb. 18—(CUP)—Students wishing to fly to Europe this summer will be able to travel at reduced rates, Gilles Trahan, chairman of McGill NFCUS announced this week. Arrangements have been made with Trans-Canada Airlines to charter exclusive student planes which will leave Canada shortly after the academic session and return in good time for the following term.

The original fare of $604 has been decreased to $325. This rate is only slightly above the cost of ship travel.

Plans are being made to establish a central travel bureau where students may obtain passports, exchange money, as well as information concerning the cost of living, hotel and food conditions, and places of special interest in Europe.

In order that this project may be carried out with success it is essential that a sufficient number of students take advantage of this opportunity. Interested persons should contact Gilles Trahan, McGill NFCUS Chairman, 690 Sherbrooke St. W., Montreal.

Punishment's End Is Repentance — Professor McRae

"An inquiry into the grounds of punishment reveals three general theories, that the only basis for punishment is respectively prevention, reform or retribution" pointed out Prof. R. F. McRae at last night's Junior Philosophy Club meeting.

"The intention of the preventative theory is to put the offender where he cannot again commit the crime or to set an example to others by the threat of the punishment," contended McRae. "Members of both the first and second groups of thought contend that punishment will lead to good, that the punishment must be meted out with a view to the future good."

Fit Punishment to Crime

Prof. McRae stated that the basis for the retributive theory was the fitting of the punishment to the crime. Punishment was owing to the offender, and evil must repay evil.

In discussing the inadequacies of the three theories, Prof. McRae pointed out that both the preventative and reform theories depended upon the retributive theory. If an innocent man is framed to set an example to potential criminals, the public will protest, on the ground that the man has done nothing to be punished for. This, said McRae, is supporting the theory of retribution. On the other hand, McRae cited Plato's question "Can it ever be right to harm a man, even in punishment?"

Moral Condemnation

Prof. D. P. Dryer pointed out the need for a theory which combines the best elements of each of the others. The basis of this, he suggested, would be the denial of the right to punish anyone except one who was really guilty of doing a wrong which has previously been proscribed by law.

Dryer pointed out that punishment was essentially a vivid expression of moral condemnation, and that one of the main ends was a get the man to condemn himself and hence repent. On this basis, pardon would be possible.

OUR READERS WRITE

UNIVERSAL MILITARY TRAINING RAISES CONTROVERSY, CRITICISM

The Editor, The Varsity

Dear Sir: I read with great interest your "Cry Havoc" editorial in this morning's Varsity. It was particularly interesting from the point of view of the new interpretation of Monday night's debate on Universal Military Training in which I led the Opposition.

Whether your information regarding the debate was first-hand or otherwise, I am not prepared to say, but from the interpretation given the remarks made during the course of the evening, I'm inclined to judge that the latter would be the case.

In no instance, I think, did any speaker " . . . emphasize that Canada was, beyond doubt, in grave danger of attack from an aggressor nation," as the editorial took such pains to explain.

On the contrary, the whole point of the Opposition, Mr. Editor, was that indeed war was NOT inevitable, that in any case UMT could not prevent war, and that therefore education could better be determined and directed in ways more conducive to world peace. It was pointed out, however, that should a national emergency exist, the solution was not mass armies but rather stress on the scientific and technical aspects of the military.

And, Mr. Editor, is it not rather difficult to obtain a real appraisal of any debate when the press representative was in attendance to hear only the latter two of the main speeches of the evening? The Prime Minister laid great stress on the horrors of war, even in his support of UMT, and furthermore I think no other member of the House was suffering from the delusion that war might not be "somewhat distasteful".

A rather unfortunate editorial!

Harry Green, III Vic.

The Editor, The Varsity:

Re your "Cry Havoc" editorial of February 16, I would like to ask if any newspaper could possibly give anything but "an alarming picture of world events?" The entire debate at Vic which the editorial criticizes was conducted on the lines that war is not inevitable. The opposition even stressed that one way of avoiding a war was by defeating the motion for Universal Military Training.

I personally saw The Varsity reporter enter the chamber during the third of four main speeches. On just what kind of authority do you base the rest of your very often irresponsible and partisan editorials?

Your last sentence was trite and unfair: "Maybe some have yet to learn the grim lesson that war is somewhat distasteful." I estimate that half the persons present were war veterans; I know most of the debaters myself so that estimation cannot be open to very strong criticism. You have a responsibility in editorializing and I feel it is your duty to make a stronger attempt to keep personal prejudices (which, admittedly, we all have) out of your paper.

Richard Gage, I Vic.

The Editor, The Varsity:

I was not able to attend the Victoria College Debating Parliament held on Feb. 14, but if the session was correctly reported, the writing on the wall is painfully clear once more. It is people like the members of the opposition in this Parliament who lead public opinion when they leave college and take their place in the community. It was the same juddle-headed, short-sighted attitude which left us and the other Western democracies in the position of having nothing to fight the Nazis with in 1939 except blind faith in the justice of our cause. It was just such an attitude which made Dunkirk and other humiliating retreats a necessity. It is "to the few" that the short-sighted majority must owe a debt of gratitude for saving them from the results of their short-sightedness.

Mr. Green, the first speaker for the opposition, stated that army life saps initiative, discourages free thinking, promotes wastefulness and is undemocratic. This may have a small element of truth in it: What is more true is that service life either makes or breaks an individual. Those who are broken by it would never make good citizens anyway.

What no one seemed to see was that instead of just a compulsory period of military training a system of national training for all youth could be started. For a two year period at the end of high school all youth could be given a period of training which would make them more efficient and healthier citizens. Persons who need medical treatment for a physical handicap could be given this treatment under qualified supervision. Courses could be given in vocational guidance which would prevent the aimless wandering we see too often in university courses. Girls could be given courses in home nursing, first aid and baby care. And under qualified instructors young men could be given military training which would shorten the training period in time of national emergency. We would have a healthier nation under such a system.

It is of no use depending on our neighbors for protection. Surely we can still remember the critical situation we passed through last summer. The Berlin situation could easily have developed into a third World War. We must not aim at a program that is just sufficient . . . we must become so strong that no one will dare to attack us.

We all agree that war is distasteful. The "ostrich attitude" of The Varsity editorial of Feb. 16 that there is no immediate danger to Canada is nothing more than complete refusal to admit reality. If the USA and Russia go to war, the shortest route between these two countries is over the North Pole across Canada. I am glad to see that Prime Minister St. Laurent can see the realities of the situation even if some people in their ivory towers around this university insist on keeping their heads in the sand.

R. F. Proud, II Pre-Meds.

The Editor, The Varsity,

Dear Sir:

Your editorial "Cry Havoc" of the 16th of February is to the effect that war is not necessarily inevitable (which is true) and that it may be avoided by our showing a peaceful attitude to possible enemies, and stripping ourselves of all preparations for defense (which is not true).

Latvia, Lithuania, and Esthonia, were three little republics which did not prepare for war, and presented to their big neighbour a most peaceful attitude. Today these three democracies are crushed under a hideous tyranny.

Finland prepared for war to the best of its ability. Today Finland is for the most part, free. Poland also prepared for war, and successfully maintained its freedom, defeating the Bolshevik army in 1920, and only in going down when attacked by both the Russians and the Germans in 1939.

Our armed forces protect us from predatory nations just as the police protect us from robbers. Would the author of the editorial advocate abolition of the political force?

In the past few years 10 European nations have come under Russian domination, and even

Rochester Philharmonic

This concert, presented by the Toronto Police Association, confirmed four distinct impressions in my mind: that Erich Leinsdorf is a very fine conductor: that Maple Leaf Gardens is no place for a concert: that the microphone is an invention of the devil; and that Tschaikovsky's Sixth, in spite of a good crisp march-scherzo and a rather appealing second movement (Allegro con Grazioso), certainly is pathetic.

The acoustical experience was unique; it seemed as if one was hearing the orchestra through a fifteen foot wall of cotton wadding. Two microphones, injudiciously placed along the front of the stage, managed to catch a few desks of violins, but left the woodwinds whistling away in the wilderness; the brass could take care of itself. When Kyra Vayne, soprano, sang she was amplified many times, and the effect of all this artificial sound overriding the muffled orchestra was nothing short of uncanny. When not being otherwise obnoxious the loudspeaker urped and burped complacently throughout the pianissimi.

As far as I can judge, the orchestra was quite competent, more remarkable for excellent sectional unison than for individual virtuosity among the players.

Miss Vayne seemed to possess a highly developed sense of drama (her selections were all operatic) but her intonation and her manner of slithering from one note to the next were execrable.

Mr. Leinsdorf, as heard over the radio and on records, has been remarkable for the crisp, clean, and relaxed character of his performances, for accuracy, transparency, and vitality. All of these qualities were in attendance last Wednesday. Visually his conducting was flashier and less regular than I expected. Still, if one ignores the grand rhetorical gesture, his essential conducting style, in the crucial moments, is really marked by extreme economy of motion.

Douglas Valleau.

Calgary Group

The exhibition of the Calgary Group, now on display in the Hart House Art Gallery, is one of the worst professional shows ever to hang there. In one picture only, does the famed western boldness and frankness escape the clutches of convention. I searched for some quality that would distinguish the Calgary Group from the painters of Halifax or Vancouver. I could find none.

The standard of painting ranges from mediocre downwards. Alberta is too vast a land, the prairies are too broad, the mountains too high, the rivers run too swiftly to have their spirits expressed in a traditionalist stereotype. The greatness of the west is yearning to be painted, but has the Calgary Group done it? No, not at all. These painters have chosen to remain inside a conservative pattern, which can be guaranteed to strangle painting anywhere.

Miss Janet Mitchell's "Still Life" is the only picture which tries to express the directness of the West. In her attempt to raise the show to a presentable level, she is ably seconded by Misses Lindoe and Willis. Miss Lindoe has a pleasing sense of rhythm and a knowledge of the uses of color, which most of the other painters lack. Miss Willis successfully invokes the ghost of Emily Carr in "Prosperity, Sechelt, B. C."

Mr. Cliff Robinson has as little regard for the feelings of his subjects as he has for the uses of his medium. However, in fairness to Mr. Robinson it should be noted that he is a colorer and not a painter. No four year old could compare with him, I could not find a place where he had gone over the line.

Among the other painters Mr. Lindoe's nasty color will catch the eye. Mr. Bates' four "Prairie" pictures will discourage the hardiest lover of the West.

Mister Microphone

Ross did everything—but pass. He was the first sophomore to be editor of Torontonensis. In the same semester he was Feature Editor of The Varsity, which included a story a day for many days. In his spare time he was also second year president of the U.C. Lit.

Elected Editor

Elected editor, he never took the job. Instead decided to attend lectures.

A second love of the many-occupationed McLean was (and is) radio. CKEY and McLean met to produce the first Varsity radio program—Campus Call. Acting as director, actor and often writer he, with a handful of radio hopefuls, presented a half-hour show weekly

The next year CBC expressed interest in "Operation McLean"! With "Nervous Grasshopper" Gwynne-Timothy acting for the S.A.C. and the laconic Bill Wadley as workshop director, as well as a weekly column—Dial-log—by publicity director Rasky, radio came of age on the campus. McLean was the spirit behind and in it.

Disc-jockeying all night McLean attended lectures by day in his last year. It was not long before he was public service director at CKEY, the station that had been called "The juke box with commercials". He was directing as many as five shows a week between studies. One of these was McLean-titled "Focus on Forty-Eight — a Magazine for Microphone".

Finds Future

McLean surprised everybody that year — (including McLean) and was BAed.

If you listened to the Varsity Story last night you heard the man called McLean in action. He is now probably the youngest producer in his field at CBC. He produces about 10 shows a week, including "The Theatre Week", "Let's Find Out", and "Young Ideas".

The alliteration-less-named McLean has a new name now, until his future becomes the present, and that is "Mister Microphone McLean".

Gal Hockeyists Will Play Gaels

The Varsity Women's hockey team meets the Gaels tomorrow afternoon at Queen's. This is the same Blue team that walloped McGill 15-0 a week ago today.

Ferne Watson, PHE, scored nine goals last week, and fellow-forward Alison Jeffries, Vic, potted four goals and gained one assist. Another forward on the team is Irene Hain, Meds, one of the top intramural scorers. It will be interesting to see which of these three comes out with the most goals tomorrow.

Last year Queen's defeated Vic who went down there representing Toronto. This year the Toronto team should be able to take the Gaels, if last week's McGill game is any indication.

now the 400 million people of China are being forced rapidly in the same direction. A constant stream of fugitives emerges from these lands; all with the same terrible story of government tyranny, slave camps, midnight arrests, torture and murder. In the light of these things how can anyone whose eyes are not blinded to the facts by his own prejudices get any other than an alarming picture of world events?

How then are we to obtain security? Obviously not by weakening ourselves, so that we may fall an easy victim to the rapicity of the Kremlin. The answer lies in thorough preparation for war. It might be argued that this would only hold it off until the Russians develop their natural resources sufficiently to produce armaments greater than our own. The fallacy of this line of reasoning is, that the dictators in the Kremlin do not have the backing of their own people, and dare not risk a war which would require the united effort of a willing populace. A consideration of the disastrous Russian campaigns in Finland and Poland before Germany attacked Russia should make this point perfectly clear.

We will most certainly have peace if we are prepared for war.

Ker C. Thomson,
M.P.C., U.C.

Ed. Note—There are a number of things we would like to point out to the authors of these letters.

a) Although The Varsity reporter entered the debate room after the first two debaters had spoken, he learned what they had said from very direct sources—the speakers themselves, whom he contacted later in the evening.

b) To Mr. Green and Mr. Gage, and to all the opposition speakers, we owe an apology. We charged the opposition's arguments were based on the assumption that war was inevitable. We were wrong. As pointed out in two of the above letters, some of the speakers did acknowledge that war was not inevitable. Our charge was based on faulty information, and, as such, was erroneous.

c) Mr. Thomson accuses us of suggesting that war may be avoided by "stripping ourselves of all preparations for defense". The editorial contained no such inference. We maintained that universal military training at this time was not desirable. We said so because we believe that if defense measures must be taken, half-trained masses of men, constituting an immense financial burden on the nation, are not the most desirable type of defense. We concur with speakers of the opposition who claimed that defense measures might better take some other form than mass conscription. This attitude certainly does not indicate that we "strip" ourselves of preparations for defense, as Mr. Thomson suggests.

d) Mr. Gage asks "on what kind of authority do you base the rest of your very often irresponsible and partisan editorials?" We reject the "irresponsible" epithet and ask reader Gage to produce evidence of irresponsibility. And if he can, we will be happy to publish an apology, as we have done above. We freely admit that we are "partisan" insofar as we may champion one cause against another. The Varsity is not hiding under false pretenses. At the beginning of the year we said we would take sides on specific issues and we have done so. In issue No. 2 this newspaper asserted "Impartiality or neutrality in the editorial columns would lead only to an insipid, vacuous policy. We will take positive stands on various issues and though we may, at times, provoke your wrath or disapproval, we will do so because we feel it to be in the best interests of the student body." The assertion still stands.

Mr. Gage, if he pauses to think, will realize that editorials in any newspaper must reflect the opinions of the editors and therefore are "prejudiced" in the sense that they are the personal beliefs of the editors. To do otherwise would be hypocritical. Would Mr. Gage have us confine discussion to "harmless" topics like weather or grass? If that is his wish, we suggest he read other papers. He won't find them in The Varsity.

Hoopla Blues To Tilt Tigers Of Rugby Fame

University of Toronto's basketball Blues will play a team representing the Hamilton Tigers Football Club, it was announced late last night by Coach Bob Masterson. The Hamilton aggregation will be led by flashy Frank Filchock, Tigers' outstanding quarterback whose passing and running were indispensable last season. Jack Harper, ORFU's leading scorer, and Jake Jaudier, who between them caught most of Filchock's many passes, will also appear on the Toronto court in next week's cage contest.

The event will take place as the main attraction of an Athletic Association's Sports Night on February 23 next Wednesday.

Filchock hit the news recently when he transferred from the Tigers to the Montreal Alouettes at a reportedly high salary.

John E. "Mac" McCutcheon, head of the intramural sports department, said this would be one of the most interesting games of the year.

ART ex MUSIC ex DRAMA

Sevitzky — T.S.O.

Fabien Sevitzky, Conductor of the Indianapolis Symphony, led the TSO on Tuesday night. He was remarkable for two reasons. He is firstly a showman, but much more remarkable than this, he is a very good conducter. His virtuosity was apparent from the eloquent and exaggerated cues to the orchestra, but the music he created was both sensible and polished.

The "Roman Carnival Overture" by Berlioz opened the program. This was music on the grand style with special effects such as a tambourine being used.

An interesting work which becomes dull after hearing a number of times is Sibelius' Symphony No. 2. It contains many of the orchestral devices of Tschaikowsky and these weary a listener. But the thematic material is not only original but has that strong, sad story of Finnish nationalism woven into its fabric. The emotional intensity maintained throughout by Mr. Sevitzky was excellent.

"Variations on a Theme By Tschaikowsky" by Arensky is an extremely fragile but effective work for string orchestra. Strauss' "Till Eulenspeigel" was performed in a pleasant sumptious manner. At times however, the brass was too noisy.

Jack Ferguson.

If there were a "Most valuable player" trophy in the intramural hockey league it should be awarded jointly to linemates Max Putnam and Jay Watt of Knox. The pair stood one-two in the scoring race, accounting for 23 of Knox's 32 goals.

The Presbyterians walloped rival Wycliffe 9-3 on Tuesday to end their schedule. Centreman Putnam went on a five-goal spree to bring his total to 12, while left-winger Watt netted two, tieng Terry Wardrop of Team A for the runner-up position. Wardrop, who had led the field for almost a month, failed to add to his 11-goal total in his last outing.

Johnny Leishman of Trin and Pharmacist Cooke are deadlocked in fourth place with nine goals apiece.

Behind them with eight goals are Dave Harley of Trin B and Forestry B's Clarke, followed by Tom Crerar of Trin A and aJck Harper, high man for SPS fourths, who have notched seven.

Putnam's five-goal spiurge was not the largest this season, for Wardrop netted six earlier against UC III. Two four-goal efforts were recorded . . . one by Watt and the other by Cooke.

OT were defeated 4-1 yesterday by a fast skating and hard checking UC II team.

The first period saw UC II girls monopolizing the puck and pouring shots at the OT goalie, Donny Kingston. Pat Murton and Mary Thompson scored for the Red and White.

OT rallied in the second period and Joscelyn Alexander, OT star forward, managed to slip the puck in behind UC goalie, Lee Cardue. UC IIs came back in the third period to add two more goals to their tally, scored by Jean Gillan and Joan Hume.

UC defense appeared strong throughout the game, stopping many OT rushes that looked like sure goals.

Yesterday's win pushes UC IIs nearer a playoff position, which will be made secure if PT defeats OT in their next game.

Volleyball

The schedule is not in The Varsity today because the teams in the playoffs will not be completely decided until tonight's games. The playoffs will start Monday.

On Tuesdays and Thursdays there will be intercollegiate try-outs.

Speaking Of Sport

Open letter to Johnny Metras—
Dear John,

Well, John old chap, just a note to prepare you for VW Day out in your London Arena tonight when Masterson's Blues take on your Mustang Cagers.

Maybe you are of the opinion that today, Friday, February 18th, won't be a VW Day (Victory over Western). Maybe then I should disillusion you then, John, maybe.

And John—here's six-foot five-inch Doug Tyndall, one of the reason's I'm picking the Blues over the Mustangs.

Yes, John, I'm quite aware of the fact that your Mustangs beat our Blues 42-37 here in Hart House three weeks ago in the first Toronto-Western hoopla clash of '48-'49. But tonight's game is going to be a very different story, John.

For you see, John, our Blues realize that unless we win tonight the basketball schedule is as good as over for us, even though we have a game with Queen's next week.

So, John, we really have that old "College Try" to get out and win—we want a cage playoff this winter, just like the rugby playoff last fall.

And, John, there's something else. Before your game with us three weeks ago I picked the Blues to win by five points. Well, John, I had the correct margin in the scoring column, only I had the wrong team.

But for tonight, John, I'm going to make a slightly different prediction. After watching the Blues paste Queen's and McGill last weekend in Kingston and Montreal, to nail down second place in the league, I'm calling Toronto to knock off your Mustangs by seven points—seven points—and right in London town, John.

Finally, John, whatever happened to the Mustangs last Saturday when Assumption Purple Raiders edged Western 71-38 in Windsor? My London spy informs me that Arnott and Scott weren't playing against the Raiders but they'll be back for tonight's "game of the year".

That's fine, John, because when our Blues beat you by those seven points tonight we want your Mustangs to be at full strength then there'll be no excuses or alibis.

Well, John, that's all for now, but I'll be seeing you tonight. And, John, try to restrain yourself on your Western's playing bench, or else one of these days you'll blow your top completely.

'Til tonight then, I am

Blue-fully yours,
"Easy" Ed Voight.

PS—Am bringing along a special Purple and White crying towel for you tonight, John.

Intermeds Play Rams At Arena Today At 5pm

After your four o'clock lecture this afternoon drop up to Varsity Arena and relax your gray matter by watching the Intermediates take on the McMaster Rams.

It's bound to be a thrilling game as both teams are fighting desperately to stay in the hunt for the championship. The last time the teams met in Hamilton the Blues dropped a tough 6-4 game, but Fred Sgambati, manager of the squad, seems confident that his boys will reverse that decision this afternoon.

Because the Intermeds were upset Wednesday in London, coach Jovial Jack is now known as Lachrymose Life, and has the tear stains to justify the name.

The chief factor that is keeping the Blues in the running is that the other teams in the group keep insisting on beating each other. The team has beaten OAC and Western once while losing one to McMaster and the Colts. A win this afternoon will avenge their loss in Hamilton while ensuring their chances of remaining in a good position.

A little more fan support than has been forthcoming will no doubt aid the team to beat the Macmen and give them more enthusiasm for the return home game with OAC next Friday. Game time—5 p.m.

Fighters, Fencers Travel To Guelph As Intermed Reps

Those little-publicized campus athletes, the boxers, wrestlers and fencers of the university, journey tomorrow to Guelph to take part in the Intercollegiate intermediate championships.

Toronto, Western, and OAC will participate in the various events. The boxers going along to uphold Varsity's good name are: Betz, Coggins, Wright, Brown, Petkoff, McIlraith, Lee and McLennan.

The wrestlers making the trip are: Lubbock, Trowbridge, Reives, Dick, Laundy, Fisher, Smith and possibly Owston who has been suffering from a slight injury.

The fencers are J. Axler, K. Soga, and R. Thomson, who are coached by well-known fencer Orm Reynolds. The boxing and wrestling coaches are Chesty Martin and Ed Fisher respectively.

Avenge Monday's Defeat; Central Y Finals Tomorrow

Varsity Juniors took YMHA 67-37 last night to win the semi-finals of the Toronto and District Junior Basketball League. They meet Central Y in the first of two final games at Athletic Night tomorrow. The game promises to be a hard-fought ball game if last night's game is any indication of the Juniors' prowess. The Blues were sparked by Braithwaite and Burnstein, who showed the crowd some fine offensive playing.

Burnstein dropped the ball through the hoop for 14 points and Braithwaite was breathing down his neck with a total of 13 marks. Varsity took the lead in the second quarter and held it throughout the game, winning on the round by 28 points.

Glover and Denton were deadly with their set shots while Brown drove through for his lay-up shot.

Rebounds were flying fast and furiously and Braithwaite and Dancy managed to effectively smother them. In this they were assisted by the whirling dirvish Burnstein who seemed to be every place at once.

Cooper of the "Y", who played a fast game for his team was held to 10 points by his opponents who just seemed to sense his every move.

Track Team Wins H.H. Triple Meet Cop Three Firsts

In a triple meet in Hart House yesterday the Varsity indoor track team, with 21½ points, defeated West End YMCA, 8¼, and North Toronto Track Club, 6¼. U of T took firsts in three of the four scheduled events.

The Blues' Bill Kelly covered the 50-yard distance in 5.5 seconds, only one-tenth second short of the record. Norm Williams and Ed Wood, of North Toronto, took second and third spots respectively. In the 600-yard race, John Hryshko (1.18.8) and John Sashwood, of Toronto, finished first and second, with Jerry Brockey, North Toronto, third.

In a thrilling mile grind the lead changed hands all the way to the tape when West End's Paul Poce (4.31.7) nosed out Toronto's George McMullen by three-tenths of a second. Jim Bailey, of North Toronto, copped third.

Results of the 8-lap relay were, Toronto (2.34.2), followed by West End "Y" and North Toronto, in that order.

Women Hooplas Take Western, Meet Rams Sat.

Varsity Women's basketball team edged Western 42-37 last night in a fast exciting game that was close throughout.

Gwen Smith lead the Varsity team with 16 points. Forward Shirley Speck showed good style in her ball handling as she netted 10 points. The entire Varsity team played well as they maintained a constant lead.

Western's Mabel Gillen was the outstanding star of the game, and romped to net 16 points. In addition she set up most of the shots for her teammates. Close behind her with 15 points was Jean Shillington.

The game was very even and at half time the score stood 21-17 for Toronto. Toronto was never much ahead, and Western constantly threatened to catch them. Prominent in the Toronto play was Betsy McFaul. The game was cleanly played from beginning to end.

A good crowd saw the Varsity team defeat Western and encouraged them with cheers, yells, and songs. Western had as many shots as Toronto but couldn't sink their shots. They were not up to the Toronto standard.

At this Saturday's athletic night Varsity Women meet McMaster's hoopsters in a return game, at 7.15 in the main gym. The game should prove interesting since Varsity previously edged McMaster by only one point and the Hamilton girls will be out there fighting for a win over the Blues.

Both teams are in top shape but Toronto has the advanitage as the opponents find it difficult to play on a smaller floor.

Third Place Marlboros Jrs. Meet Top Bees At Gardens

Bill Wade's Varsity Junior hockey club again pay a visit to the Maple Leaf Gardens tomorrow afternoon when they meet the Marlboro Juniors for the last time in the schedule. The Varsity Bees hold top spot in the circuit while the Marlboro club moved into a tie with the Buzzers for third spot after their win last Tuesday.

The two top teams of the Toronto Junior BOHA league will playoff for the Good Humor Cup, and the Varsity team, with one more game after tomorrow, have grabbed a firm hold on the top spot. Who will be the other team in the playoffs cannot be decided as there is only a one point difference between the second place Corner Boys and the two last place teams, the Irish Buzzers and the Marlboro Juniors.

The Marlboro squad need this win and another victory Tuesday night to be the other team in the playoffs. They defeated the smooth St. Mike's icemen last Tuesday after a terrific battle. They are playing for all they're worth now and will give the Bees a good fight.

Vic Hunt, the Marlboro's young goalie, has been displaying good netminding technique and is one of the reasons the Marlboro team do as well as they do. Ron Hurst, Paul Oliver and Irwin also add to the Marlboro's strength and will be on the ice tomorrow to help bring home a win for their club.

The Bees most potent threat is the Holmes, Conboy and Raftis combination which has been running away with the score in the last few games. This combo skate fast and work together well around the net.

Porky MacDougal has been sparking the Blues on many occasions. He plays defence but has led his team on the offensive as well. Porky has one of the hardest shots in the league which is one of the reasons he has so many goals to his credit.

This is the second last game for the Juniors who will finish their schedule next Tuesday at Varsity Arena.

"Years" Star Discusses Fears

By STAN FILLMORE

He's starred in a movie, written a book, and tours the country lecturing on prejudice. He has no hands but smokes cigarettes, writes in an extremely fine hand, and pours drinks for himself. His name is Harold Russell.

"Best Years" Star

You may remember Harold as a surprise hit of the "Best Years of Our Lives" — the handless navy veteran who had his troubles readjusting himself to civilian life. Got it now?

Russell is in Toronto today and is speaking at the University of Toronto under the auspices of Brotherhood Week. This afternoon he addresses a meeting at the Women's Union.

Last night Russell told a press conference in his hotel room his reasons for coming to Toronto. "I am making a plea for racial and religious unity," he said. "But the aim of Brotherhood Week is not limited to one week. We, all of us, should work and strive for this unity 52 weeks of the year. We must set a pattern for all the world to follow."

He said he has spoken to over 1,000,000 college and high school students in the past year. Russell told The Varsity that discrimination in American fraternities is on the decline. "The return of the veterans has speeded up this adjustment," he stated. "Recently, there has been a great clamor against discrimination in fraternities. But the situation is still bad — very bad."

He cited the example of Amherst College. A fraternity there had voted to admit a negro to the local chapter, but the vote was overruled by the national organization of the fraternity. "Such things as this will have to be eradicated, if we are to have complete unity," Russell added.

McGill Shows Way

"It is a wonderful sign, and it makes me very happy to hear that McGill University has chosen a Negro girl as Queen of its Winter Carnival," he said. "It is certainly a step in the right direction."

The handless veteran has been touring United States lecturing for the United Council of Christians and Jews. He said his reception in the southern states had been "pretty fair," but added that he had to speak to segregated audiences. "I haven't spoken in the Deep South yet, but I will be going there soon," he explained.

Demonstrating his dexterity with the mechanical hands he uses in lieu of the real ones, Russell obligingly lit and smoked a cigarette. He signed autographs and drank a glass of water to show how capably he uses his make-shift hands.

When asked about future movie plans, Russell said he was hoping to make another soon. It will be the screen adaptation of the novel "The Go-Getter".

Russell said that his book, an autobiography, will be published next month. He calls it Victory in My Hands.

Russell was asked if he would demonstrate how he ties his shoe laces. Laughingly he held up his foot and explained, "I can't do that yet. See — I've got elastic shoe laces." That laughing acceptance of his hardships is typical of this young man. He meets all questions with a smile, and makes light of his difficulties.

In becoming a burlesque queen, the article in the Queen's Journal says, "a little talent in the right places helps".

No Queen's Cup For Varsity Blues; Lose Close Tilt 5-4

By HAL HOLDEN

Montreal, Feb. 20 — (Staff) — For the first time in two years, Varsity Blues relinquished their hold on the Senior Intercollegiate hockey title Saturday night as they bowed to University of Montreal Carabins 5-4 in Montreal. Victory gave the classy Montrealers their first Queen's Cup since it was first presented and the first Intercollegiate hockey championship in the history of the school.

Gallant Try

Varsity made a gallant bid to keep in the running in one of the best games seen in the Verdun Auditorium this season. The hockey was fast and furious but clean compared to the battle with McGill the night before. Six penalties were spread out through three periods as the boys stuck to hockey.

Despite the gruelling contest with McGill, Varsity skated stride for stride with the Carabins if not quite goal for goal. Although even in this vital department the Blues actually matched the new champs as they had one goal disallowed. Bob Henry fired the puck into the cage in the first period and the red light went on but the referees ruled the buzzer had sounded to end the period before the goal was scored. The Verdun Auditorium is one of the few rinks where the signal ending the period does not automatically prevent the red light from flashing.

Near Miss

Ace Bailey's lads went out like real champions. With less than 10 minutes to play in the game and trailing 4-2, the Blues roared back to pop in two quickies by Cec Turcott and Rich Howson to tie the score. However, the speedy Carabins waited until the last two minutes before Gregoire Giguere counted the winning tally, his third goal of the game. Varsity poured it on in the dying moments in an effort to get back on even terms and had the Carabins reeling but an injury to the Montreal goalie necessitated a delay in the game which was just what the Montrealers needed to re-muster their forces.

Montreal took a 3-1 lead in the first period on goals by Giguere, Flynn and Emblem, while Rich Howson bagged his first of two for the Blues. Harry Boyd registered the only goal of the second period on a pass from Howson to make it 3-2. Giguere counted again to start the torrid third period and then Turcott and Howson kicked in with their markers, to tie it up for Varsity before Giguere fired his hat trick goal.

Offer $1,000 For Best Thesis On Hillman Idea

A prize of $1,000 for a thesis in the field of trade union development, race relations or world peace is being offered by the Sidney Hillman Foundation of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America this year.

To qualify for the award, the thesis must have been accepted as fulfilling the requirements for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy from a recognized university in the United States or Canada. The author may have already been granted such a degree, may be associated with a university or may be engaged in research or teaching that would normally require a Ph.D.

The purpose of the award, according to Jacob S. Potofsky, president of the clothing workers union, is to keep alive an understanding of the role played by Mr. Hillman, president of the union for 32 years, in enlightening labour-management relations, labour's political activities, the fight against discrimination and "his contribution

Spanish Consul Gives Bursaries For Varsity

A chance for University of Toronto students and teachers to study in Spain this summer is opened with the donation of ten scholarships by the Spanish Consul in Canada, Senor J. M. Castro-Rial. The scholarships will consist of free tuition and free room and board for the duration of the courses.

The scholarships will be pricipally for a one month's course at the University of Santander but they may be also applied to courses at the Universities of Madrid, Barcelona, and Malaga where the term is for two months.

Applications for the scholarships are now being received by Professor E. Goggio, of the department of Italian, Spanish, and Portugese.

U of T Symphony Concerts Include Schubert, Dvorak

The University of Toronto Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of Harold Neal, presents its first concerts of the season, Friday and Sunday, Feb. 25 and 27, at 8.20 p.m. in Convocation Hall with Miss Teresa Mulloy, IV Mod. Lang. as concert mistress.

On the program will be Schubert's Rosamunde Overture which was rediscovered in 1867 by Sir Arthur Sullivan and Sir George Grove. The Overture has enjoyed a steady popularity due to its melodiousness and spontaneity of invention. Also included on the program is Mendelssohn's Concerto in E Minor for Violin and Orchestra. First performed in Leipzig, this concerto has proven to be one of the most profound and popular of all violin concertos although often regarded as lower in quality than the Beethoven or Brahms concertos.

Third work will be the Symphony in E Minor by Anton Dvorak, which is known as the "New World Symphony". Two schools of thought are current on this symphony. The first is that Dvorak borrowed freely from American Negro music and so there are at least two spirituals in every five minutes of music. The other maintains that Dvorak remained essentially Bohemian and that this work is an impression of a foreign land —America. Regardless of either view the New World Symphony is the most popular of Dvorak's works.

The final works of the program include an Organ Prelude and a Fugue in F Minor by Bach. The Fugue, which is an indication of Bach's religiousness is also a fine example of contrapuntal writing. Orchestra concert-mistress is Alice Koegner.

Admission is open to the faculty, the university body and friends. Doors open at 7.45 p.m.

Brotherhood

"Hatred", wrote Maurice Maeterlinck, "is the heaviest load that man can bear on this earth."

In this week of brotherhood, sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews, we have a time for thinking out ways and means for dispersing not only the forces of hate, but the concomitant evils of intolerance, disunity, and discrimination.

This is not to be merely a sweet, seven-day ride on clouds of sentimentality. It is actually a time for acknowledging publicly the unselfish work of a group of people whose fight goes on day by day, year by year.

The chief need in this business of brotherhood is an ample measure of just plain common sense. High sounding language and reaching out for the millenium all at once will not produce a thing.

People—races, creeds, and nationalities—have their differences. And these differences are going to remain. They are as natural and unavoidable as the sunrise. In their grossly overt and socially damaging manifestations, they can be and have been dealt with by legislation; but no law can abolish or change a fundamental situation.

We can build on this long established foundation, build with sanitay and with a recognition of the plain fact that rights and privileges of the few or the majority cannot be served by a denial of those same rights to others.

There is room for all in this country, but no room for the pettiness and intolerance that breed danger for all. The simple demand is a broader and continued use of the basic principles of the democracy we profess as an example to all mankind.

Before the atomic bomb disintegrated Hiroshima on August 5, 1945, brotherhood was a compelling moral concept that infused nearly every religion. It was a concept that through the ages had great power to attract the idealistic and the dedicated.

On August 5, 1945, it became more than that. It became an imminent necessity for the survival of mankind. For man, with all his prejudices, his greed, his blindness, has today the capacity for total self-destruction. Only in the concept of brotherhood is their any hope for human life on this planet. The idealist preaching the brotherhood of man is today not the hopeless visionary. He has the only practical salvation for our children and our children's children. All men are brothers. Or, if they are not brothers, then the doom of all alike is sealed.

We have a brief time in which to learn this. A week is not long enough. It is a lesson that we must learn for eternity.

Mr. Wordsworth Gets A Rebuff

One day Mr. Wordsworth was wandering lonely as a cloud. (It was cloudy that day, and the sensitiveness of poets to their environment is well known.) Continuing his morning constitutional, he caught sight of a daisy and his eyes lit up with joy. Farther on he met a little cottage girl and tears ran down his face, dripping from the end of his nose. This all passed, however, when he came upon a field of daffodils. Immediately Mr. Wordsworth felt like dancing, but he paused long enough to glance at the daffodils and estimate their number at ten thousand.

Having laid aside his cane in order to perform his Highland jig, he suddenly beheld a girl at work in the fields.

"Ha," he cried, "here is more promising inspiration" And hurriedly taking out his inkhorn (all the poets had them), he wrote:

"Behold her single in the field,
Yon solitary Highland lass . . ."

Then his inspiration failed him, so, leaning over the fence with his most winning smile, Mr. Wordsworth asked the young girl what she was singing about.

The girl stared at him disdainfully for a moment and then went on with her reaping. Mr. Wordsworth thought he heard the words "old goat", but seeing no animals at all in the vicinity, he hopped, nothing daunted, over the fence and remarked cheerfully that the whole vale had been overflowing with the sound. As the girl paid no attention, he again drew out his inkhorn (all the poets—oops) and jotted down:

"Will no one tell me what she sings?"

"Oh, I didn't know you was an officer," the frightened girl cried.

Mr. Wordsworth assured the poor girl that he was not, but employed the opportunity to remark that when he had been in Arabia, no

Western Still Champs Edge Weakened Blues

By ED VOIGHT

London, Feb. 20 — (Staff) — Sparked by the terrific all-round play of big George Wearring, the Western Mustang cagers nailed down their fourth consecutive post-war Senior Intercollegiate basketball championship as they defeated the Varsity Blues 62-52 before a capacity crowd of over 3,000 people here in the London Arena Friday night.

Wearring was the main cog in the Mustangs' offense as he came up with his best game in his two years of U. of W.O. hoopla.

He threw in 23 points to lead all scorers, and with a great display of rebound play under both hoops, practically beat the Blues single-handed. Of the 20 rebounds that Western picked off the Toronto defensive hoop in the first half, Wearring snagged no less than 18.

Take Early Lead

With Wearring leading the way, the Mustangs built up a six-point lead at the seven-minute mark of the first period, which by the end of the first chukker they had increased to a 19-10 advantage. That first quarter lead turned out to be the margin of victory for Western, as the Blues kept pace with the Metrasmen from that point on. The score at the half was 38-30, and at the end of the third quarter, 51-40, as the Blues, severely crippled by this stage of the game, just couldn't overtake the Mustangs.

Varsity suffered the first of a series of tough breaks in the last seconds of the first period, when little Eddie Brennan twisted his ankle under the Western hoop. He didn't get back into the game until the last minute of play in the first half.

McManus, Pettinger Out

Then early in the third quarter, McManus fouled out of the game. Two minutes later, Glen Pettinger followed McManus out, but his reason was a sprained ankle, and it finished Pettinger for the night.

At the start of the fourth quarter, Brennan went out with five personals, and three minutes later, Nick Volpe also fouled out. It was not till Volpe went out that Wally Zeaton made an appearance in the game, as his cracked ribs severely handicapped his actions. All these setbacks, and still the Blues lost by the comparatively small margin of 10 points.

With Wearring, Phibbs, who also came up with a strong all-round effort, and Thomas pacing their offense, the Mustangs solved the Blues 2-1-2 zone defense pattern, constantly had Varsity guards out of position around the Toronto hoop, and in order to stop the Western players' shots, the Blues drew many a personal foul. In fact, it was in the foul-shooting department that the Mustangs earned their margin of victory.

Blues Get 33 Fouls

The Blues drew down 33 personal fouls that gave Western 38 free throws, on 26 of which were the Mustangs successful. Toronto only sank 12 out of 24, and thus, Western chalked up a 14-point advantage in the free-throw columns. All of which means that, as Western won by 10 points, that the Blues actually threw in two more field goals than the Metrasmen.

Bill Stockman was the best Blueboy on the floor. He played the whole game, fought hard defensively, and threw in nine points as well.

Summary:

TORONTO—Stockman, 9; Tyndall, 9; Volpe, 5; Gray, 10; LaChance, 1; Pettinger, 8; McManus, 4; Adams, 1; Zeaton, 1; Brennan, 4. Total, 52.

WESTERN—Scott, 1; Mathews, 1; Thomas, 8; Arnott, 7; Ford, 7; Wearring, 23; Phibbs, 15. Total, 62.

Jumping Jack

JACK GRAY

Was a busy chap over the weekend in London and Windsor, especially after four of his cage cohorts were sidelined. He emerged as Varsity's top scorer in the Western tilt.

Water-Polo Seniors Defeat Hamilton 7-4

Varsity defeated Hamilton Aquatic Club intermediate squad in the water-polo exhibition after the swim meet Saturday night in Hart House by a 7-4 score.

Varsity held a 4-2 lead at the half-way mark, and outscored the Hamiltonians 3-2 in the second session. Top marksmen for the Blues were Warren Clayson and Norm Mortimer with two each, while Hugh Peacock, Larry Rosen, and Phil Rosen added singletons.

Line-ups:
Hamilton—Larson, Whiteman, McCabe, Park, Campbell, Newington, Orr, Gretton, Meldrum.
Varsity: Newman, Leacock, P. Rosen, Hubbard, L. Rosen, Maslen, Mortimer, Clayson, Lydell.

Holwood Hoopsters Overwhelm '73' Team

Strangely enough, only a handful of spectators saw the mighty Holwood hoop squad crush another U.C. residence team 36-9 Saturday night in Hart House.

"Colonel" Kettle, Bill "St. Laurent" Davis, and Big Bob McPhedran were Holwood standouts. Bruce Macdonald also played on the winning squad.

Blues Needed A Doctor To Win

In case you're wondering why the Varsity Blues were literally snowed under by the Assumption Raiders 74-25 last Saturday night out in Windsor when the same Toronto team beat the same Assumption crew 51-43 four weeks ago, there are four or five reasons that should explain it.

In the first place, the Blues two highest scorers, Eddie Brennan and Glen Pettinger were both taking in the game via television while doctoring twisted ankles. Wally Zeaton was sidelined because of cracked ribs that pained him severely every time he stretched. Tony Adams also was on the sidelines with a sprained ankle that will probably keep him out of action for the rest of the year.

All this plus the fact that two new players were in the game for Toronto. Both Barney Maher and manager George Cass, unfamiliar with the Blues' plays, were pressed into the lineup by Masterson.

Blues Upset By Raiders; Thomas Stars

Windsor, Feb. 20 —(Staff)—The weakened Varsity Blues proved no match for the Assumption Purple Raiders here Saturday night as the Raiders pasted the visiting Toronto crew 74-25 before 2000 people in the Assumption's new fieldhouse.

The Raiders got most of their points from fast breaks as the Blues, worn out from the Western game the night before and the long train ride here to the Bordertown, just didn't have it physically to keep pace with Freddy Thomas and crew.

Thomas topped off a terrific all-round performance by potting 25 points. Running mate Woody Campbell also had a good night, sank 14 points to be runner-up to Thomas.

Take Eearly Lead

Assumption jumped into an early lead in the opening minutes of the game, and at the half, were away out in front, 41-14. The Raiders kept up their fast-breaking and smooth passing plays in the second half to run away from the Blues in the scoring columns.

Doug Tyndall was the pick of the Blues with 13 points. Jack Gray played well, was runner-up to Tyndall with six points.

Summary:
Toronto: Volpe, 3; Maher, LaChance, Stockman, 1; Gray, 6; McManus, 2; Cass, Tyndall, 13—Total, 25.
Assumption: Campbell, 14; O'Hara, 8; Thomas, 25; Kohlman, 9; Fisher, Marchand, 8; McEwen, Angus, 1; Miles, Carpenter, 9—Total, 74.

Tolerance, Unity Need For Peace —President Smith

Brotherhood Week on the University of Toronto campus was officially opened by President Sidney Smith at the Fall Festival program in Convocation Hall Sunday night "'University' comes from the word 'universitas' meaning 'all of us,'" declared Dr. Smith. "In the republic of the mind, there are no barriers, no boundaries, no tariffs, no quotas, nor even vetoes."

Everyone's Job

"We have marvelled and talked about the Canadian war effort, but this was attained by a common effort for a common goals," said the president. "To work for peace, a common effort and a common goal to come out of a common will is still needed." Working for mutual understanding and tolerance is the way to work for peace, Dr. Smith stated.

"Prejudice is being down on something you are not up on," said President Smith. Congratulating the SAC and its Inter-Cultural Affairs Committee on its initiation of Brotherhood Week at the university, Dr. Smith pointed out the importance of education in dissipating suspicion and prejudice.

He hoped that the Brotherhood Week activities would be successful, "not for the sake of the Inter-Cultural Affairs Committee, but for the sake of a stronger University, a finer Canada, a world of decency and order."

Canadian Mosaic Program

Gay Ukrainian dancing, gymnastics and songs, colorful Japanese dances, the inspiring spirituals of the Toronto Negro choir, and varied national selections by the All-Varsity Mixed Chorus, classical Spanish dances and an Urdu (Indian) song featured the Folk Festival program presented by the SAC Inter-Cultural Affairs Committee.

Today's Brotherhood Week program includes a Harold Russell lecture and movies. On Tuesday, an interdenominational forum will be held in West Hall, U.C. On Wednesday, "Dignity of Man" is the topic of an address by Dr. L. Lynch of St. Michael's. Thursday, the full-length film, Gregory Peck-Dorothy McGuire "Gentleman's Agreement," will be shown at a place yet to be announced, and a home-and-home debate between University of Toronto and Laval University, and Friday, a panel discussion on "Is Legislation an Effective Means of Combatting Prejudice" is to be held in the UC Junior Common Room. A Cabaret Dance in the Drill Hall Saturday night will conclude the Week's activities.

Colts Defeat Intermediates In 79-44 Win

London, Feb. 20 — (Staff) — In the preliminary game of Friday's basketball double-header here in the Arena, the Western Colts put on a torrid second-half drive to rack up their most convincing win of the season as they hog-tied the Varsity Seconds 79-44.

The Colts were leading by only 31-23 at the half, but by the end of the third quarter had increased their lead to 58-29. For the first seven minutes of play in that third period, the Colts held the Toronto team to a solitary field goal while throwing in hoops themselves from all over the floor.

Western's passing attack was too good for Barry's boys, and with big Harry Wade and Chris Ellis operating smoothly in the bucket slot, the Colts outplayed the Seconds completely to capture their fourth win in as many games of Intercollegiate play. Varsity has won only one game and lost three.

Centreman Wade was the best player on the floor, and emerged as the game's high scorer with 22 points. The 16 points that he hooped in the first half kept the Colts in the lead throughout the first two periods.

Ellis and Gord Davidson also went well for the Colts, each snagging 13 points. Guard Bill Robertson played a strong game defensively and popped in eight points as well.

Art Anderson's 13 points were tops for Toronto, with Tony Adams and Andy Andrews runner-ups with eight each.

Guards Doug Wigle and Ted Luck tried hard for Toronto, constantly found themselves the only Toronto defenders back to face three or four Western players, as the Colts' fast-breaks often caught Varsity forwards away out of position with their checks down the floor unguarded.

Summary:

TORONTO—Wigle, 4; Stevenson, 2; Andrews, 8; Cole, 1; Anderson, 13; Luck, 2; Adams, 8; Maher, 1; Furlong, 5; Henderson. Total, 44.

WESTERN—Davidson, 13; Yuhasz, 7; Ellis, 13; Wade, 22; Hunt, 6; Fitzgerald, 5; Robertson, 8; Beck; Horne, 5. Total, 79.

Heads In The Clouds

And A Glider In The Basement

By HELEN K. TRACY

"Come, Josephine, in my flying machine, Singing up . . . . she goes . . . ."

These lines may have had their heyday of popularity some 30 years ago, but they would be appropriate again today for the fourth year students in aeronautical engineering.

Canada's Most Modern

The "flying machine" in question here is, however, no 1915 model, but the most advanced glider that has been designed and built in Canada. It is being constructed in the basement of the Electrical Building as part of the practical work for fourth year students.

The building of this glider is in line with our policy of giving the students practical experience as well as theoretical work, says head of the department of aeronautical engineering, Prof. T. R. Loudon, who is in charge of the project. Work on the glider was begun three years ago, and will be finished this May. It was designed by Mr. W. Czerwinski, an aeronautical engineer who came to Canada from Poland during the war, now a lecturer in aeronautical engineering at Varsity. The plans were checked by Prof. Loudon and Prof. B. Etkin with the help of the fourth year students.

A Four Year Effort

Besides working on the designing, drawing, and calculating for the glider, the students have helped in its actual building, assisting Mr. L. Racey and Mr. W. Kubinga, who are in charge of construction. "In this way they turned their drawings into reality," says Prof. Etkin. In the three years during which it has been in progress, the fourth year classes of '47, '48, and '49 have had a hand in the project.

The glider is constructed of laminated spruce frames with birch plywood covering, or, more technically, "skinning". It has 45-foot span, fully cantilevered wings which, Prof. Etkin explains for the benefit of artsmen, means there are no struts supporting them.

An interesting and rather alarming detail of the glider is that it has room for only one person, which means the first flight in it for anyone must be solo. This first flight may be prepared for, however, by extensive practice in operating the controls while being towed by a car along a runway. Once in the air, though, the new pilot is on his own.

Though the engineers might like to take Josephine for a ride in their new flying machine after its launching in May, it is destined for a less frivolous end. As the glider is without an engine and at the mercy of air currents when in flight, it is ideal for the study of the effects of these currents on the flight of aircraft. The university will keep it for research on this subject, and will equip it with instruments.

It might, however, occur to some enterprising student that, since the glider can circle in the air for long periods of time it might provide the ideal solution to the problem of how to see the east-west football play-offs next fall, if tickets are scarce. But it is doubtful if it will be available for that purpose.

Prizes Given To Help Boost Punnett Nite

A few people are going to be very happy Tuesday night when they walk away from Varsity Arena with one of the dozen prizes that have been offered to boost "Jack Punnett" night.

Included in the prizes are two wrist watches, a suit of clothes, 200 gallons of gasoline, and tons of coal. The hockey features of the night will show Varsity against St. Mike's and Mariboros against Corner Boys.

Everyone, and that includes players, officials, and pass-hawks, will pay their 50 cents for this night. All the proceeds will go to Jack Punnett—Varsity arena won't even take a cut.

Punnett is the Corner Boy hockey player who was afflicted with sclerosis last year. He is now taking treatments twice a week, at $25 each.

ART - MUSIC - DRAMA

Inter-Varsity Drama Festival

On Saturday last we were able to see what the outlying districts are doing when Toronto played host to McMaster's Dramatic Society and to Western's Players Guild. The visiting firemen were pitted against UC's 'Overlaid', now under UDC sponsorship, to decide the champion of the western half of the Inter-varsity Drama League. Well, once again you had the big fellow vs. the little fellows and the result was what you'd expect. Since I've already said my piece about the spurious kind of competition which characterizes drama festivals in other reviews I'll try to say a thing or two about the other phase of festivals which I find difficult to accept as particularly valuable. On this run I'd like to pour a little vitriol on the troubled waters of adjudicatorial pronouncement, as it appeared to me Saturday night.

The adjudicator, like the critic, is only human in spite of his audience which likes to think of him as something, anything, else. The adjudicator is one against whom we can vent our spleen because his is the thankless task of vocalizing the ills which we would accept if only we were allowed to keep quiet about them. Hence, the adjudicator is faced with the job of putting forward opinions to an audience, one third at least of which is going to seethe with hostility when he points out the flaws of a particular piece. Nowhere is this more true than in a university festival. He is there to rub salt into the wounds of the supporters of a play who are in the same frame of mind as they are when they watch their football team ("They may be a bunch of stumble-bums but they're ours, all ours!") and to adjudicate is to flay these supporters until they snarl. And so, our man merits respect in direct proportion to his agreement with the pre-formed opinions of those who have come to see their team lick yours. All of which is totally outside the bounds of the theatre.

And this was what was on their minds on Saturday night. Miss Ashwell demonstrated a sort of pitying embarrassment which tends to make her appraisal a little fuzzy around the edges. She seemed determined at all costs to be kind. Thus, inexperience came across as 'stiffness' or 'adolescent exuberance'. Now this isn't to suggest that Miss Ashwell should have been ruthless—I think she showed consummate tact in her opinions—it is to suggest that the kind of thing she had to say is difficult to discuss in terms of its usefulness. What good is it to say that So-and-so wasn't very good when you know he wasn't and I know he wasn't and in most cases, he knows he wasn't? Unless you can go on to suggest a lightning cure for inexperience—something I've yet to see put forth—who's going to be any the wiser? And inexperience lies at the bottom of every scale of relative merit in a drama festival. By refusing to call a spade a spade, by evading the real cause and pointing out the lack of achievement of an effect which is beyond the actor's range, you take the 'festive' out of 'festival' and everyone goes home mad.

In the way of production we had Professor Bagnani to tell us what we liked and what we didn't like and Mr. Bagnani's plea is for realism and more realism. About 'Benedict' he liked the authenticity of the English boarding-house atmosphere but took offense at the hybridization of the English tone in matters of verbal detail. Now, Mr. Bagnani was absolutely right; the only difficulty is that those who hadn't sensed that for themselves were hardly likely to accept his word. Another strike against the unfortunate adjudicator.

But Mr. Bagnani on 'Overlaid' seemed to me to be a little off-base. He wanted a couch in the farm kitchen; fair enough except that as it stood it was a farm kitchen for my money (in fact, given an audience on its toes, a pair of green curtains would do the trick). Mr. Bagnani found that the iron heated too quickly; so it did, but if you can accept the fact that a stage iron is an iron at all, surely it doesn't much matter about its rate of resistance. But to me the least valid point was his desire that Pop should spit in the stove. Now Mr. Bagnani certainly knows his Ontario farmer and Mr. Walker did, or could have suggested tobacco-chewing by that movement of his jaws; but not all Ontario farmers chew tobacco—some of them have loose dentures. And Mr. Bagnani's suggestion might have carried with it a vulgarity that would make Pop's interest in the opera somewhat difficult to accept. About "The Coiner" (Western), Mr. Bagnani found himself wrestling with the problem of dating the period of the play—a problem which did not strike me as particularly significant.

Now this isn't to be interpreted as an attack on Professor Bagnani whose opinions I have no desire to minimize. But I think that had he been allowed to discuss the general dramatic or literary quality of the pieces we would have benefited thereby. Mr. Bagnani on production seems to want the theatre to do our imagining for us—as do the movies. Perhaps he means this, perhaps he doesn't believe that after a certain point, to which the doctors and the technicians are expected to take us, we are on our own. But I do not think he wants this; I think he was forced to give us this impression because as an adjudicator he was strapped into a particularly narrow slant because he was told to speak about 'production'. That neither of the adjudicators had anything to say about the plays as plays is not to be construed as an inability of either of them to do so. It seems to suggest that we are to concern ourselves more with whether this cough, or that lamp is convincing and not to the state of mind in which the body of a work may leave us.

Thus I found the festival atmosphere standing in the way of the real value of the evening: the broadening of our dramatic horizon. But it did not quite do so for I enjoyed the visitors' work and I would like to see them come back again. Only couldn't they just come and put on their shows? I don't have to go to the theatre to decide which university is the largest: great heavens, I can look that up.

A Letter To Three Wives

One wife has married her wealthy employer following some of the slickest negotiations since the New York deal between the Dutch and the Indians. Their wedded life is no more than strictly a business proposition.

Another wife, a radio writer, brings most of the bacon into the household of her rather perturbed husband who prefers Brahms and tweed to the commercial existence enforced by this soap-opera librettist.

The third wife is haunted by her rural upbringing, suspects her husband of watching for hayseed in everything she does, and turns their marriage into a mild form of pride and prejudice . . . except that her husband in reality isn't proud.

All three wives fear the powers over their husbands exerted by the local "All-Around Perfect-Woman." This fear turns to anxious forboding when they receive a letter from the A.A.P.W. coyly informing them that she plans to leave the community and is taking, as a token of fond rermembrance, one of their husbands.

Three long flashbacks in which the moviegoer is given a frank picture of the marriages of each, follows the pointed opening exposition. The flashbacks are suffixed with a final, and equally pointed resolution. And it is this form, just as neat and finished as that of a classical symphony, which this reviewer found particularly pleasing. The producers don't leave a single string dangling in what could have been a slushy film.

We could linger lovingly at this point, like a wizened old music professor, and squint happily about the well-rounded form of "A Letter," but we must pass on to praise the excellent acting by Craine, Sothern, Darnell (surprise!), and especially Darnell's wonderfully hard-boiled and hard-loving husband, Paul Douglas. A naive and understated prediction: Mr. Douglas will go a long way! The bit-players provide the proper amount of spice for the leading performances, too.

Above all, we liked the adult tone pervading the movie. The filmers have abandoned reticence in treating the private lives of three wives, yet they have avoided brutality. They have handled a plot which could easily have been weighed down with some ominous Hollywood psychology concerning the nature of suspicion—with a mature sense of humor and wisdom.

From the time the three wives rip open that fateful envelope to the moment the director lets the cat out of the bag, "A Letter To Three Wives" remains a good story very well told. Whether it earns an Academy Award or not, we feel certain at least one Oscar will sneak a friendly wink over its shoulder at the people who made this movie.

A column for your exclusive benefit, containing nothing of interest to either frosh or soph, and designed to further acquaint you with the myriad joys and delights which can be yours on the occasion of the combined 4T9-5T0 class party this Saturday night.

Your executives, after much spiritual torment, have finally decided to waive all thoughts of splashy post-term executive parties, instead will devote the tremendous resources of the combined treasuries to this one, final, apocalyptic convulsion. To be staged in bohemian Burwash Hall, tastefully decorated for the occasion in a motif featuring illegitimate Gothic, a gray ex-and-interior (if we can work it), and Badgerton Ryerson by special request, the party is being heralded as the Victorian version of such social souffles as the Mardi Gras and the Beaux-Arts Festival, and is calculated to make such institutions as Skule Nite about as risque as a Puritan Morality Play.

Vic Ninety-Niners should remember that the party is absolutely free, and carries in addition a guarantee that all taggers, however worthy the cause, shall be forbidden access to the grounds. Vital statistics again: Music by Don Rumgay's Orchestra, vocalist Rita Ryan. Book Review

Voyage To The Moon

It may surprise you, as it did me, to learn that among the gifts which Solomon offered to the Queen of Sheba was "a vessel whence she could traverse the air, which Solomon had made by his wisdom which God had given him." It is to be regretted that the principle upon which Solomon constructed his flying machine did not survive him in order to confound any sceptics who may doubt that this amazing monarch really anticipated the brothers Wright. However, the factual basis of the story is of less interest than its relation to other legends of human flight. Like the well-known Greek legend of Daedalus and Icarus, it is the expression of a persistent and universal human desire which can be traced back in literature, not only to the flying "vessel" of Solomon and the fiery chariot of Elijah, but, in the Far East, to the earliest records of Chinese history, and, in the West, to the daring, if legendary, exploits of Bladud, tenth king of Britain and father of King Lear.

Marjorie Hope Nicolson's Voyages to the Moon (Macmillan: $4.75) is an expansion of the Alexander Lectures which she gave here two years ago. Those who were fortunate enough to hear this eminent scholar and professor of the Graduate School of Columbia University will already be aware that this book is packed with fascinating information from the realms of fact and fiction concerning the cosmic voyage as it appears in English literature of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries—or, at least, in such literature, both English and foreign, with which an educated Englishman of the period would likely have been familiar.

Miss Nicolson's intention is to show how closely the histories of literature, astronomy and aviation are interwoven in those stories of interstellar flight which, though dating back to Lucian and coming down to H. G. Wells, C. S. Lewis and Buck Rogers, nevertheless enjoyed their greatest vogue in the two centuries which followed upon Galileo's invention of the telescope and his report upon the topography of the moon.

The authors of these stories undoubtedly came under a number of purely literary influences, including some of the Platonic myths, Cicero's Somnium Ciceronis, Plutarch's De Facie in Orbe Lunare, and even passages in the writings of Rabelais and Cervantes; but their true inspiration was born out of the impact of the discoveries and speculations of contemporary astronomy upon imaginations still excited by the wonders of terrestrial discovery, and it seems quite appropriate that one of the first tales in this genre should have been written by an outstanding scientist and astronomer, Johann Kepler.

The influence of Kepler's Somnium shows itself throughout the subsequent literature of the cosmic voyage. His book is "ribbed" by that deadly satirist of Hudibras fame, Samuel Butler, inspires a mystical poem by the Cambridge Platonist, Henry More, becomes the victim of another satirist, John Donne, and then re-echoes, Miss Nicolson believes, in Milton's description of Hell in the second book of Paradise Lost and in Satan's journey through Chaos.

Voyages to the Moon is a model of organization, but Miss Nicolson willingly shares with a certain John Wilkins the credit for its form. This gentleman, besides being Oliver Cromwell's brother-in-law, was a scientist of some stature, and, in 1638, published his Discovery of a New World in the Moon in which he divided into four categories the means by which men might hope to fly in the air; "1. By Spirits or Angels. 2. By the help of fowls. 3. By wings fastened immediately to the body. 4. By a flying chariot." Miss Nicolson has made of his division a most satisfactory method of arganizing the great quantity of data which she has accumulated over many years and her only modification of his scheme is in the addition of a chapter called, Variations on a Theme, in which, among other the adventures of Lewis Carroll's Alice are related to the genre of the cosmic voyage, and an Epilogue which includes a brief resume of recent, more scientific but generally less imaginative, versions of the interplanetary journey.

Despite the efficient arrangement of the matter of the book there is nothing either pedestrian or pedantic about it, for its author has, herself, a dislike of writing which "smells of the lamp". She writes in the informal, unstudied style of a born raconteur who, unlike so many persistent raconteurs, has actually something to say which is not only witty and diverting, but also erudite, significant and sometimes even disturbing. For though she sees, in her study of man's attempts to fly and of his dream of setting foot one day upon the moon and the planets, evidences of his vaulting spirit and insatiable desire to bring more and more of the macrocosm under his domination, she reminds us repeatedly that Swinburne's refrain, "Glory to Man in the highest, for Man is the Master of things", can become — perhaps has already become—a dangerous idea for men to live by. In the fable of Icarus there is strongly implied the Greek conception of Hybris. Perhaps the monstrous power over which man now seeks control—the power that laid waste Hiroshima—may yet strike him down. Perhaps the wax of our wings has already begun to melt.

Movie Review

A Song Is Born

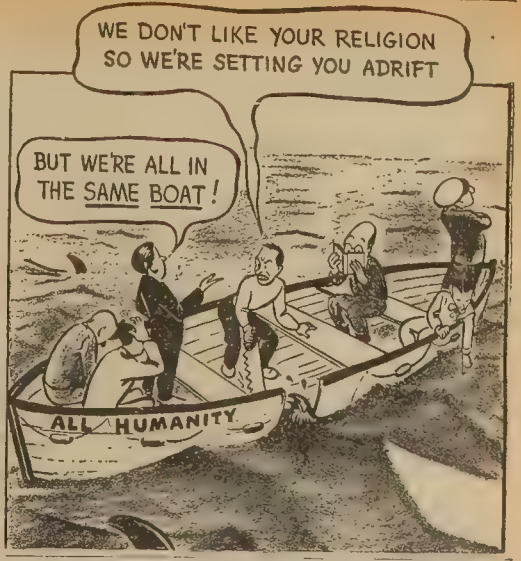
Apparently one of Hollywood's more profitable formulae is gathering an illustrious, if slightly heterogeneous mixture of talent, and dishing out the resultant product in a lavish Technicolor parcel. The current picture held over at the Imperial, "A Song is Born", falls into this category, and therein lies its weakness.

Whoa, I hasten to assure you that "A Song is Born" is good entertainment. In fact, you will probably enjoy it most of the way. The gripe is that considering all the money and talent poured into it, "A Song is Born" could have become a way above average comedy-musical.

Since the mixture is of one part Danny Kaye to nine parts jazz musicians, perhaps two approaches should be taken to the film. For Danny Kaye addicts who recall "Walter Mitty" fondly, this new appearance is extremely disappointing. Not only does Kaye not perform any of his hilarious specialities of the "Anatole of Paris" variety, but any personable actor of the "mild appearance-but-he's-a-gay-dog - when he-gets-going" school could have taken the hero role without damage to the film.

The jazz portions of the film are generous but badly-integrated. High point is the Benny Goodman-Lionel Hampton-Mel Powell session of "Stealing Apples", with a Hampton-Louis Armstrong vibraphone-trumpet session also providing kicks. Otherwise such men as Tommy Dorsey and Charlie Barnet play their usual trademark-pieces rousing little excitement except to those who get a bang out of seeing name band leaders for the sake of seeing name band leaders.

Getting away from the music side, the group of professors in this remake of "Ball of Fire" include such character stalwarts as Hugh Herbert, Felix Bressart and J. Edward Bombeg. Sadly, the "waste" opinion also prevails in their case; they could have been so funny. Blonde Virginia Mayo, who belongs, I contend, to the Hayworth - Turner Oomph-Ping-Ruff category, does her usual Kaye supporting stint with no great strain to her thespian gamut—but in her case, as the boys in the backroom say, who cares?



Summing up, "A Song is Born" doesn't quite realize all the potentialities of its collection of talent, but for a pleasant evening at the cinema with a jolie jeune femme, you could do much worse.

Filchock Men Tackle Blues In Cage Game

The senior Blue hoop squad will meet up with some brand new opposition this coming Wednesday night at the Hart House Sports Night. Frank Filchock and some of his former football teammates will journey to Toronto as a basketball team representing the Hamilton Tigers Football Club.

This team is entered in the Hamilton city league, and it has reached the playoffs in this loop. In addition to Filchock, who was outstanding as playing coach for the football Tigers, the team's lineup includes Jack Harper, ORFU's leading scorer last season, and Jake Gaudier, who were on the receiving end of many of Frankie's passes.

Filchock recently disclosed that he had accepted an offer from the Montreal Alouettes, and will be playing football for them this coming season. A high salary seems to have been the deciding factor in Frankie's decision to change teams.

The basketball game will be the major attraction of Wednesday's Sports Night. Sports department officials feel that this contest will be one of the most interesting games of the year.

played a smooth game throughout. In particular, Elva Rampton showed strong and sure defence playing feeding passes to her forwards and generally controlling the puck from the blue line.

Jean Rose, goalie for the Blues, stopped some crucial goals at the end of the game, having only one goal scored on her for the two games played for the All-Varsity Women's Hockey Team.

Refs Partial

doughnut-shaped blue felt disc, leather lined on the centre, which measures about six inches in diameter. The hole has a radius of about two inches.

The idea of the game is to stab your stick into the donut-hole, and charge down the floor with the disc. Five players and a goalie are the only obstacles. If you feel checken-hearted you can pass the puck. It's always an easy way out. Then your teammate struggles to get his stick into the hole while a couple of opponents bodycheck him and stand on his feet.

Only One Offside

The centre line is the only line on the playing surface. Passing is permitted the length of the floor. Only way you can break an offside rule is to carry the puck over the centre line when a team mate is over the line already.

The Varsity players, garbed in UC-PHE sweaters, learned all these things from the referee-coach. Goalie Davies did the biggest bit of learning for the evening when he found a way of preventing Aces forwards from scoring on him. He would fall back on the net knocking it out of position and then chuckle as a shot whistled past where the net should have been.

tional in the nets for the Blues and but for his netminding artistry Varsity would have been behind by two goals at least. On one occasion his stick slid out to the blueline when he was making a save. The fighting Carabins grabbed the puck and bore down on Hutz before he could get back into the net but the blond dentist checked the puck carrier with his feet and fell on the disc about 15 feet in front of the net.

After the game the sportsmanlike Montrealers paid the brilliant Varsity netminder a well-deserved tribute as they chaired him and carried him off the ice along with Giguere, their winning goal-getter.

For Carabin Coach Arthur Therrien, the title marked the end of his second year as mentor of the Montrealers. But after a look at some of the hockey players he has developed it isn't surprising that the Carabins are top dogs in the Intercollegiate loop. As coach of Verdun Maple Leafs in the Montreal Junior League, Therrien tutored such players as Maurice Richard, Butch Bouchard and Paul Bibeault.

Blues Praised

Therrien was eager to say a few kind words for the Blues. "My boys enjoy playing against Toronto", he said, "the games are clean and they play good hockey. We've always had a very good reception in Toronto, too," he said.

Although the game squelched the Blues' title hopes, they still have two more games to play. Wednesday they meet Queen's in Kingston and March 4 when they play hosts to McGill in the final game of the season.

Skule Nite

The Engineers came through with a very effective trick opening Friday night to open the annual Skule Nite show with a bang. Unfortunately, the rest of the show didn't come through with the earlier promise held out by the opening number.

The performance opened in a manner that was novel even for a college show. The audience was treated to movie scenes taken from campus life, with appropriate humorous dialogue. Unfortunately the dialogue was so loud and fuzzy that this reviewer missed many of the funnier lines. The movie turned to the inside of the Engineering building to show Professor Angus McSporran pointing out the capabilities of his new "time" machine. The scene then switched to the stage to show the time machine in all the glory of its phosphorescent greese contermeterfresh and flamisforshot (to put it in the professor's own words.)

The effects in the show were exceptionally good and settings were almost professional, but the show dragged considerably after the first twenty minutes.

The best scene in the show was the one in which Pat Suddick, the Time Traveller, was projected back to London during a blitz in 1942. The scene hit a nostalgic note as a quartette in the pub brought back the atmosphere of London during the war. The Scottie, played by Bruce Mairs added just the right touch of humor and the barroom quartette was just enough off-key to sound realistic. The high point of the show was the "Lili Marlene" number sung by three Picadilly "commandos" wearing raincoats and berets. Their soft, plaintive voices against a background of blue lights was most effective.

The Egyptian dancing girls in the Roman scene were good and their routine, although not perfect, was adequate, and suggestive of Roman slave girls.

All in all, the show had many special effects which were extremely eye-catching, but the script, based on an interesting theme, was very loose, and with the exception of Suddick, who appeared quite natural, most of the cast didn't quite catch the air of spontaneity which the audience expected.

Music for the finale was very rousing and well done. Unfortunately the final scene was rather flat and didn't complement the music.

LOVE THY NEIGHBOR, BUT . . .

When Goalie Paul Hutzulak ran out of goalsticks Saturday night in Montreal the enemy Carabin camp came to his rescue with one of their own. Immediately after Varsity scored two quick goals to tie the score at 4-4. At this point Carabin Coach Arthur Therrien was beginning to fear that his sporting generosity concealed a jinx in the form of Hutzulak's new stick, and would have given anything to get it back.

Women Rap Gaels On Ice, 'Mac' In Hoopla

Alison Jeffries Scores 3 As Bluettes Triumph 10-1

Kingston, Feb. 20 — (Staff) — The Varsity Bluettes swept to a 10-1 victory over the Queen's girls during the week-end. This was the second straight overwhelming victory for the Blues in the initial year of their post-war appearance into the Intercollegiate Women's Hockey schedule.

At Queen's last week, the Gaels downed MacDonald College 7-2 while Varsity trimmed McGill 15-0 here at home. Theoretically this leaves Varsity on top of the league although they will not meet MacDonald College this year, while Queen's has two games in hand next week with McGill and a second meet with MacDonald.

Meet Tough Opposition

The Varsity girls met tough opposition from the tricolor who did their best to bottle up the fast travelling forwards Alison Jeffries and Ferne Watson. It was Alison who started the scoring of the Blues after a minute of play when she sailed in on the Gaels' goalie Peg Costello alone to make the tally unassisted.

Queen's then began to put on the pressure and tied up the score after a scramble around the net at the eight minute mark. With two minutes left in the first period, Alison Jeffries passed out from the corner to Alice Jamieson who popped in the second goal to give the Blues the lead again which they never relinquished.

Score Five In Second

The second period saw Irma Bullock and Ferne Watson combine to beat the Gaels twice within minutes. Ferne took the puck from Irma and, drawing the goalie out, scored the third tally with a beautiful play. Watson and Bullock went in a minute later to chalk up the fourth marker on a screen shot by Irma Bullock. Two minutes later Irene Hain and Jeffries sailed in on the Gaels defense, centring the puck from the corner to Alison Jeffries who knocked up the score again. The line of Jeffries, Hain and Jamieson combined in the closing minutes of the second period to end it with a double hat-trick when Hain scored at the fourteen minute mark from the other two on her line and Jamieson, 45 seconds later, netted the seventh goal.

Watson, Macklin Score

Ferne Watson started the third period off with one of her unassisted efforts which is a treat to see. Travelling in on the left side Ferne placed it in the unprotected right-hand corner. Although one short when Watson was serving a penalty, the Blues maintained the pressure keeping the balance of play in the Queen's end. At the six minute mark Jane Macklin, who had recovered the puck inside the opposition's blue line, shot a sizzler to score the ninth goal.

The Gaels' defence player Alice King made a spectacular rush from behind her own net only to be outguessed by the goalie, Jean Rose. Alison Jeffries ended the Blues' scoring just the way she started it with an unassisted effort. Grabbing the puck near her own blue line she steamed in and around the defence, beating the goalie with a lower right corner shot. With barely a minute left to play the Gaels pulled their goalie in a futile attempt to score but the visitors kept up the attack, bottling the tricolor in their own end.

King Stars for Gaels

Although the lopsided score did represent the general one-sided play, the Gaels put up a strong defensive game, slowing down the star centre forwards Alison Jeffries and Ferne Watson to three and two goals respectively. Alice King was outstanding for the losers, blocking and taking the Varsity attackers out of the scoring zone.

Barb Maxwell and Pam MacDonald played well for Queen's on defence with Barb Watson, Helen McGrath and Ursula Trimble maintaining a spirited offence when possible. Goalie Peg Costello deserves mention for some of the hard shots she stopped although she was well protected by her defence.

Blues Show Top Style

Alison Jeffries, three goals and three assists, Irene Hain, one goal and two assists, and Alison Jamieson, two goals and one assist, played top-notch hockey both as a line and as individuals. Ferne Watson, two goals and one assist, Irma Bullock, one goal and one assist, and Barb Weatherhead, one assist, pulled off some lovely attacks, with the defence Anna Staples and Jean Myers, playing a strong covering game at the enemy's blue line.

Jane Macklin and Elva Rampton, playing defence for the first line,

Ferne Watson, who is tied with Alison Jeffries for points in the scoring race for the All-Varsity team, scored twice at Kingston on Saturday and picked up an assist. Bottled up on many occasions, both these top scorers gained unassisted goals on the Queen's goalie.

Speck And Norris Shine As Blues Ram Rams 23-12

Saturday night the women's Intercollegiate basketball team defeated McMaster 23-12. The first half was very slow with neither team displaying their usual fast top-notch form. The result was a half-time score of 8-2 for the Blues.

The last part of the game was perked up due to the efforts of Mac's Shirley Norris and Toronto's Shirley Speck. Norris really turned on the heat, getting eight points for her team and doing some great back-checking for a gal of five foot three. Speck came through with three spectacular baskets, giving her a total of nine, highest individual scorer of the game.

The defence on both teams looked a little tired as they didn't seem to exert themselves jumping for the rebounds except for Varsity's Percus Hughes, and Hamilton's Enica Thorne who worked hard under the baskets.

Next Friday and Saturday is the big Intercollegiate meet with McGill, Queen's, Western and Varsity competing for the Bronze Baby. If Toronto gets back the form she had against Western last Thursday night, she'll be able to take off the Queen's tunic and deck out that baby in Blue and White.

Girl Skiers Finish 2nd, Trail Yanks

Led by Pat Ellard, the Varsity girls' ski team finished in second place behind Middlebury, (Vermont) College at the second annual McGill Winter Carnival ski meet held Friday at St. Sauveur. McGill placed third in the four team competition.

On the male side of the picture the scene wasn't so bright. None of the Blue skiers finished in the first ten in either the slalom or downhill events and as a result the team finished away down in the team standings, last to be quite truthful. However, it was rugged competition that they were up against.

Winning Dartmouth had Colin Stewart as their ace Alpine racer and the member of the 1949 U. S. Olympic team lived up to advance notices by capturing first place in the slalom. Ralph Townshend, another member of the U. S. team was also a competitor as well as the flashy Tor Arneburg, Scandinavian Dartouth, winner of the four-event exchange student now attending Ekimeister Trophy at the Dartmouth Winter Carnival last week.

Middlebury College, last year's winner of the Intercollegiate Ski Union meet had to be content with second place at St. Sauveur, finishing ahead of McGill. Other schools included Laval, U. of Montreal, New Hampshire and Maine.

Take Playoff Lead

CENTRAL 'Y' DROP BLUE JRS. 44-37

By BOB DNIEPER

Athletic Night turned out to be a poor evening for the Junior Blue Basketeers as they were sunk 44-37 by a driving Central YMCA crowd in the last period of play. Varsity was leading the Y-men 29-25 at three-quarter time, but a nine-teen point splurge by the Centrals turned the balance.

This was the first game of a two game final series to decide the championship of the Toronto and District Basketball Junior Division. The next go will be at the Central Y gym on Thursday.

The Varsity team has shown startling reversals of form during the year, as witness the semi-final series when YMHA heat them by one point in the first game, only to be smothered in the second by a tilt of almost forty points. At the first of the season Central Y was fully thirty points better than Varsity, but the Blues improved to such an extent that they are now rated even.

In the first quarter Varsity held Central to a measly three points, one basket and a foul, while themselves netting twelve. In the second frame just the opposite was true. Varsity got the measly three and Central hooped eleven.

Play was even, with the lead fluctuating point by point from one team to the other until the fatal fourth, when the Y-ers put on a sustained drive that carried them to a seven counter margin of victory.

Braithewaite and Dancy, Varsity big guns, were watched carefully, and their quick-break tactics were nullified by a strong Central defence. Most of Varsity's points came from long-shots when the opposing defence could not be pierced. Barry Lowes used the first team for most of the game and only five men carried the scoring load.

"Sporty" Braithewaite scored 11, and was dangerous on attack throughout. He got good support from Al Dancy and Frank Denton. Burnstein and Al Brown also played well.

Horace Wilson and Bill Huycke were the Central whirlwinds with Ed Maynerich and Tom Orr showing great defensive power.

Lineups — Varsity— Braithewaite, 11; Hamilton; Bonsell; Dancy, 5; Glover, Carruthers, 1; Freeman; Bernstein, 7; K. Brown; Carr; Denton, 7; Al Brown, 6.

Central — Huycke, 9; Fowler, 3; V. Ridding; R. Ridding, 1; Robertson; Pyper; Thomas, 4; Orr, 4; Wilson, 11; Maynerich, 6; Howard 6; Smith.

Officials — Bill Zenner and Ron McComb.

Intermeds Take McM. In Ice Tilt

By JOHN KENNEDY

After two dull periods of hockey Friday afternoon at Varsity Arena the Varsity Intermediates rapped in four goals in the third term to beat the Rams from McMaster by a 5-2 score.

Varsity came out fast in the last period and went hog-wild, succeeding in bottling up the Rams in their own end. The mild weather made for terrible ice in the first two periods and consequently the play was very sloppy with the players taking several spills. But the last period made up for the lack of hockey in the earlier part of the game as the ice got much faster.

Howson got his first of two goals at 1.51 iin the first with Turner and Paterson getting assists. Howson was playing defence Friday instead of his usual left wing position. Howson teamed with Joe Kane and looked quite at home. Incidentally, Kane played his best game of the season, smashing Rams at the blue line frequently and also leading the occasional rush, getting an assist on Moore's goal in the last period.

Bucky Harris of McMaster got the only score in the penalty-ridden second with "Fibber" McGee gaining an assist. Two Varsity men were off at the time and the goal came after a two-man break. Dinty Moore opened the scoring in the action-packed third with McKillop and Kane drawing assists.

Pat McLoughlin got the prettiest goal of the game when he stick-handled through the whole Mac team, fought the careening puck, and made no mistakes when he got in on goalie Shepperd. Griff Pearson got the next goal unassisted when he got the draw on a face-off beside the Rams' nets.

Howson sank the last Varsity goal with a blazing shot from just inside the opposition line. The Mac goalie hasn't seen that shot yet. The last score of the game was a McMaster effort with Missen getting the score assisted by Headon.

Varsity: Goal, Foote; defence, Morrison, Waldron; centre, Pearson; wings, Moore, McKillop; subs., Kane, Howson, Turner, Dies, Paterson, McLoughlin, Fingland, Bell.
McMaster: Goal, Shepperd; defence, Wood, Jerome; centre, Piasecki; wings, McGee, Harris; subs., Crofoot, Morgan, Scott, Montgomery, Bell, Thompson, Missen, Headon.
Officials—Scott, Wade.

Summary

Carabin Winger Denies Signing With Valleyfield

Montreal, Feb. 19— Andre Charest, starry centre of the Intercollegiate Champion University of Montreal Carabins, today denied reports that he had signed a contract with Valleyfield Braves of the Quebec Senior Hockey League. The denial was in the form of a signed statement given to the Canadian Press which first published reports of his signing.

A contract with the Braves would make him ineligible for Intercollegiate competition and might have a hearing on games played since such a contract was signed.

Sensational

PAUL HUTZULAK

Checked in with two spectacular efforts Friday and Saturday night. Hutzulak's performance Saturday as the Blues lost to U. of M. Carabins earned him so much respect from the new champs that they carried him shoulder high off the ice along with their own hero.

Hutzulak Hot As Blues Win Over McGill

By HAL HOLDEN

Montreal, Feb. 20—(Staff)—Before a crowd of 8,500 Ace Bailey's hockey Blues shaded McGill Redmen 5-3 in the Forum here Friday.

The Blues are now safely settled in second place ahead of McGill and still retain a mathematical possibility of tieing the first-place U. of Montreal Carabins for the title.

Goalie Paul Hutzulak was the hero of the Blues win as he was in rare form to turn aside the thrusts of the Redmen. The large ice surface made for a fast bruising game, one of the best the Blues have played this year.

The game was the feature event of Friday night's McGill Winter Carnival program. Tempers were at the boiling point during most of the game and finally a mild free-for-all flared up in the third period as big Doug Heron, McGill's rugged rearguard and Varsity's Gord Ecclestone tossed gloves aside and waded in with flying fists.

Before this happened, two McGill players, Cy Biegler and Phil Henry had to be helped off the ice after receiving injuries in the rough contest. Biegler was carried off on a stretcher but hospital authorities reported he was suffering more from exhaustion than anything else. It was that kind of a hockey game.

Varsity played inspired hockey throughout the entire game to gain the victory. The Blues had to be good for McGill, despite the absence of Gelineau in goal, were flying too, but most of their scoring sorties were stopped by Paul Hutzulak.

The Blues went a goal ahead in the first period and were never headed after that although the Redmen did manage to knot the count in the second stanza. Bill Spence got credit for Varsity's first goal as Sanderson of McGill deflected a rebound into his own net while attempting to clear. McGill tied it up on a goal by Rocky Robillard, but Rich Howson and Ernie Frey netted counters close together before the period ended to put the Blues back in front.

Each team scored twice in the final frame. Sanderson and Sinclair potted goals for McGill while Bud Hayes and Frey flashed the red light for Varsity. It was the hard-working Frey's second tally of the game.

The McGill defense was not as strong as in the Redmen's last appearance in Toronto when they defeated the Blues 6-2. But even so, Varsity forwards outskated and outshot the homesters. Tony Dobell, replacing Gelineau in goal for McGill was called upon to make 36 tops while Hutzulak kicked out 29 pucks for the Blues. He had lots of help from Dan McDougall and Bob Cooper on the Blue defense while Spence, Turcott and Boyd led the attack up front.

VARSITY—Goal, Hutzulak; defense, Hayes, Ecclestone; centre, Turcott; wings, Spence, Henry; alternates, McDougald, Frey, Fox.

Blue Fencers, Boxers Win

Guelph, Feb. 20—(Staff)—In the Intermediate Intercollegiate boxing, wrestling and fencing tournaments held in Guelph Saturday, Varsity emerged with one championship and tied for another. Toronto, Western and OAC were the teams entered.

The Toronto fencers won their title on points, as all three entries won an equal number of bouts. Ken Soga and Dick Thomson tied for third place in the individual honors. This combination of points enabled Varsity to win the meet for the second straight year. Western was second and OAC third.

Ghetti, of OAC, tricky left-handed fencer, was the individual champ, retaining his title won a year ago. Harnden, of Western, came second. Axler was the third mand on the Toronto team.

Boxers Tie

The Varsity boxers gained a tie with Western, each getting 15 points. OAC came third with 9. Four points were awarded for a win and one for qualifying for the finals.

The best bout of the whole tournament was the 155-pound final between Yost of Western and Pete Petkoff, the Ajax slugger. Both men fought with the same rugged, offensive style with Petkoff gaining the decision. Another good fight was the 125-pound affair between J. Betz of Varsity and Marks of Western. The two were very evenly matched with Marks' superior weight no doubt giving him the advantage.

Boxing Results:
125—Marks, Western, beat Betz, Toronto (decision).
132—Tom, Western, beat Abel, Western (decision).
140—Wright, Toronto, beat Armstrong, OAC (decision).
147—Bowers, OAC, beat Brown, Toronto (decision).
155—Petkoff, Toronto, beat Yost, Western (decision).
165—Hutchison, Western, beat McIlraith, Toronto (decision).
175—Lee, Toronto, beat Rice, Western (decision).
Heavy—LaRochelle, Western, beat Parker, OAC (decision).

The Toronto wrestlers didn't fare so well as their manly-art colleagues, gaining only the third and last spot with 10 points. Western with 21 points and OAC with 19 were first and second. Harry Lubbock (125) was the sale Varsity man to pin an opponent in the finals, thus giving his team six of their 10 points. Trowbridge, Reives, Dick and Fisher each got one point for reaching the finals. The best bout from the average spectator's standpoint was at the 155-pound level between Dick of Varsity and Western's Yukay. The London man got the decision after a very fas match.

Barry Reives of Toronto was outlucked when it seemed that he had Curtis of Western pinned, only to have Curtis reverse his position and apply the same hold to the surprised Toronto man.

Wrestling Results:
125—Lubbock, Toronto, beat Ellenberger, OAC (fall in second round).
135—Plester, OAC, beat Trowbridge, Toronto (fall in first).
145—Curtis, Western, beat Reives, Toronto (fall in third).
155—Yukay, Western, beat Dick, Toronto (decision).
165—Biggar, OAC, beat Pierce, Western (decision).
175—Tatham, Western, beat Bennett, OAC (decision).
190—Steckle, OAC, beat Fisher, Toronto (fall in third).
Heavy—Ort, Western, beat Fansey, OAC (two falls).

Junior Bees Lose To Dukes Still On Top

League-leading Varsity Junior Bees dropped a decision to third-place Marlboros Saturday by a score of 8-4 in Maple Leaf Gardens. The win puts Marlboros in undisputed possession of third slot and pushes St. Michael's into the cellar. Varsity is still on top of the heap, by two points, closely followed by Corner Boys.

Varsity was ahead 3-1 at the end of the second period, and on the basis of play up to then, held a commanding lead. But the last stanza brought a catastrophe upon them in the form of seven Marlboro goals. Varsity tried hard and scored one more, but the tide was not stemmed.

Big gun for Marlboros was Miller, who put in four counters, two of which were unassisted, in the last period. Conboy and Raftis played well, but poor defensive work nullified their efforts.

Line-ups:
Marlboros: Goal, Hunt; defence, Marr, Cooper; centre, Barber; wings, Fyles, Miller; subs., Furlong, Wheldrake, Boniface, Stoyan, Oliver, Adams, Hurst.
Varsity: Goal, Leuty; defence, Prentgast, Clement; centre, Holmes; wings, Raftis, Conboy; subs., Arrowsmith, MacDougall, Hyde, McIntyre, Walters, Sinclair, Vernon.

Scoring Summary
First Period
1—Varsity, Sinclair (Walters) .. 11:48
2—Varsity, Raftis (MacDougall) 19:53
Second Period
3—Marlboros—Hurst (Fyles) ... 15:50

Refs Partial To Varsity In Floor Hockey Contest

By BILL KOSOWAN

The referee at Saturday night's floor hockey game between the Broadview YMCA Aces and Varsity should have been paid double.

As well as keeping track of the scoring and checking which saw the Aces win 11-3, he had to stop the game when the occasion demanded to give the Varsitees tips on playing the sport. Only a couple of the locals had ever played floor hockey before while the Broadview squad was composed of athletes who have for some time been championing the cause of floor hockey in Toronto.

Gives Fatherly Talk

When the referee saw a Blue player clipping an Ace across the shin with his stick he would stop play, take the offender aside and patiently explain that the four-foot square-edged stick was not a weapon but an instrument for pushing the puck down the floor. The puck in floor hockey is a

West End Bests Blues In "A" Night Aquatics

West-End Y.M.C.A. were the visitors and the victors in the swim meet on Saturday night at Hart House. The West-Enders captured seven of the nine events to beat the Blues with a 49-26 score.

Big gun for the invaders was Gibson, who carried off the 220 and 440 yds. free style events. In the quarter-mile swim, he almost lapped Varsity's John McEwen, covering the distance in 5:16.6 minutes which is 15.8 seconds under the intercollegiate record.

Sig Wigle, Larry Rosen and Ross Anderson got the Blue squad off to a good start with a win in the 300-yard medley relay. The other Varsity victory came in the diving when Ken Fulley beat out the Y-star, Fred Hodges, who represented Britain in the 1936 Olympics.

Y-coach Chris McCathy is no stranger to the Hart House pool. It was here that he set his interfaculty and intercollegiate records in the 100-yard back stroke. This intercollegiate mark made in 1934 still stands, but the interfaculty mark made in 1939 fell to Sig Wigle last month. Chris is a brother of Winston McCathy, in memory of whom the McCathy Trophy was donated.

Swim Results:
300-Yard Medley Relay—1, Varsity; 2, West End 'Y'. Time—3:15.8.
220 Free Style—1, Gibson (WEY); 2, James (WEY); 3, Teskey (V). Time—2:25.
50-Yd. Free Style—1, Brown (WEY); 2, Horne (WEY); 3, Fydell (V). Time—26.
Diving—1, Tully (V); 2, Hodges (WEY); 3, Wortley (V).
100 Free Style—1, Finn (WEY); 2, Horne (WEY); 3, Arnold (V) Anderson (V). Tie. Time—59.0.
100 Back Stroke—1, McIlroy (WEY); 2, Wigle (V); 3, Fydell (V). Time—1:07.6.
200 Breast Stroke—1, Czolcelis (WEY); 2, L. Rosen (V); 3, Smith (V). Time—2.40.4.
440 Free Style—1, Gibson (WEY); 2, McEwen (V); 3, Hubbard (V). Time—5:16.6
2/6 Sprint Relay—1, West End 'Y'; 2, Varsity. Time—1:44.6.

VET CONQUERS INJURIES; FIGHTS INTOLERANCE

Must Abolish Intolerance Says Russell

Harold Russell, double amputee in World War II and star of MGM's "The Best of Our Lives", appealed yesterday to an overflow student audience to eliminate discrimination and prejudice from their lives.

Speaking in the Women's Union Theatre, Russell emphasized the danger and folly of negative attitudes towards groups of people different from the majority. Calling on the students to take the lead in racial and religious tolerance, he said, "You are the most important people in the world today, for you will determine the future actions and thinking of your country."

Endangers Freedom

Russell said that racial and religious prejudice were the gravest dangers of a democracy. To demonstrate to peoples of other countries that our way of living was the best way, he said, we would have to prove to them that true freedom actually exists here.

Comparatively speaking, he said, students were people who thought clearly about these issues. Russell was himself a student in an American university before he joined the U.S. Navy.

Russell related incidents of his experience with veterans of World War II. "There is and can be no discrimination and no prejudice in a war situation when men's lives are involved," he said.

Through extensive training in the use of the metal hooks which replace his hands, Harold Russell is able to write, smoke, manipulate plates and cutlery at meals and pick up objects like the glass of water he holds in the picture on this page.

Russell was brought to the U of T campus through the combined efforts of the Humanist Club and the Inter-Cultural Affairs Committee, sponsors of Brotherhood Week here.

Nominations for members of the various Hart House committees are now being accepted. The nominations opened Friday, February 18, but nominees are still considerably lower than the number of vacancies.

The debates committee, with eight members to be elected, have had 7 nominations submitted. The house and music committees, each with 8 members to be elected, had 3 nominations submitted apiece. For the library and art committees 1 person had been nominated; 8 members have to be elected to each. Three nominations were submitted for the chess committee; 5 are to be elected. No nominations have been received for the camera, table tennis, and squash racquets committees.

Nomination forms may be obtained at the Warden's Office, Hart House. No names will be accepted after 6:00 p.m., Wednesday, February 23. Thursday, March 3 will be election day. Polling hours: 11.00 a.m. to 2.15 p.m. and 4.00 p.m. to 6.00 p.m.

Says U of T Ungrateful; Balfour Raps Editorials

DAVID BALFOUR

Controller Balfour yesterday lashed out at The Varsity and charged "the University of Toronto is biting the hand that feeds it."

Speaking to a meeting of the City Council yesterday afternoon, the controller attacked an editorial appearing in The Varsity issue of February 8 and asserted "After we grant them two million dollars they object to being investigated to assure that they are being taught the democratic way of life.

Wants Right Teachers

"If we are interested in the U of T to the extent of two million dollars," he said, "I would ask the Board of Governors to make sure that only the right kind of professors teach our children."

Controller Balfour was referring to an editorial commenting on the recent city grant to the University.

The editorial in question lauded the city's gift but criticized the controller who was reported to have said he would ask for an investigation of staff and students "to assure they're being taught the democratic way of life."

Editorial In Question

The editorial said in part "Controller Balfour, who delights in casting rose-colored glances at this institution, is reported to have said he would ask for an investigation of professors and students 'to assure they're being taught the democratic way of life'. Like other misguided individuals recently, Controller Balfour feels this university is 'pretty red'."

"Our joy would be short-lived indeed if the city council's generous offer were contingent upon an 'investigation' of staff and students. And if the 'democratic way of life' of Controller Balfour were to be used as the basis for such an investigation we shudder to think of the consequences. Fortunately, Controller Balfour's remark can be dismissed as idle chatter, not worthy of serious consideration. It does not detract from the city's magnificent contribution to this university."

President Sent Letter

The controller claimed he had received a letter from President Sidney Smith deploring the editorial.

Balfour also criticized the university for allowing Tim Buck to address students last week. "It is a reflection on our democratic way of life," he said, "when we allow these people to teach our children." Lashing out at the student body he asserted "We want Canada for Canadians. Anyone else can go back where he came from."

Controller Balfour took time to rap another editorial in The Varsity last week which commended students at the University of Western

Open Canadian Art Exhibit In Vic Alumni Hall Today

The work of artists ranging from Emily Carr to Edwin Cooke IV Art and Archaeology student, will be included in the exhibition of Canadian paintings scheduled to open in Victoria College tomorrow. The forty-odd oils and water colours which will be on display for the next month in Alumni Hall are from the private collection of Mr. Douglas Duncan of the Victoria College Art Committee.

It is expected that this exhibit will be the first of a series to be held every month or every six weeks continuing into next year. "We are hoping, in our modest way, to have exhibitions which are bigger and more frequent than those at Trinity and St. Hilda's," explained Duncan. "We are not planning to compete in any way with Hart House. The wall space in Alumni Hall is very attractive for the purpose."

The hall, which has recently been redecorated as a co-ed common room for Victoria, has the advantage of permitting both men and women students to wander in and out and to view the paintings. The college has also installed a double row of fixtures to hold the pictures. "Even if only a small number of students are particularly interested," Duncan said, "it will justify our efforts."

When the Duncan collection is exhausted other exhibitions will be arranged with artists themselves, or with out-of-town exhibitors and regular exhibits in Toronto which might be brought to Victoria College for a final showing.

The Dean and Council of Victoria College will hold a reception for the artists, interested friends and members of the alumni. Members of the staff will be shown what is being attempted in the new common room. It is hoped there will be a formal opening for students Friday.

Tickets On Sale Today For All-Varsity Dance

A second All-Varsity dance will be held in Hart House, March 4th. House Committee officials announced yesterday that tickets for the event will go on sale today between 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. in the Hart House Debates Room.

Although a spring dance has never before been a feature of the university season, members of the Committee said they felt it was a necessity created by the large number of students enrolled this year. Entertainment will consist of Bert Niosi's orchestra, Norm Jewison's French cabaret, an Aquacade and three other orchestras. Dress will be informal.

Toronto Editors To Discuss "Pact"

J. B. McGeachy, Associate Editor of The Globe and Mail, and Leslie Morris, Editor of The Canadian Tribune, will speak to an open meeting of the Students' Peace Council on "The Implications of the North Atlantic Pact" Thursday afternoon at a place to be announced.

Mr. McGeachy, who was born in Scotland, came to Canada as a boy. He is a graduate of the University of Toronto. After some years' experience on Western Canadian newspapers, he was a correspondent in the Ottawa Press Gallery and in Washington. From 1940 to 1946 McGeachy was chief commentator for the BBC Overseas Service from London.

Mr. Morris was born in Wales in 1904, where he attended the public schools and was employed from boyhood as an industrial worker. He has edited labor newspapers in Canada for over 20 years.

Why Racial Prejudice? To Be Discussion Topic

Professor W. A. McCullough of the Oriental languages department of University College will be chairman at a round-table style discussion to-day on the question "Why Racial Prejudice?"

To be held at 4 p.m. in West Hall, U.C., the inter-denominational forum sponsored by the Inter-Cultural Affairs Committee of the SAC is designed to illustrate one of the chief problems dealt with in Brotherhood Week activities. Student speakers Wally Fram, III Law, Mary Nowack, IV St. Michael's and Jack Bothwell, I Divinity, Trinity College, will represent Hillel, the Newman Club and the S.C.M. respectively.

The round-table type of discussion is modelled on that of the University of Chicago radio round-table, with provocative questions directed to the speakers by the chairman. Open discussion will follow.

The Hand Bites Back

On the front page of today's issue appears a story which quotes Mr. David Balfour, a controller in this city, as saying that this University and The Varsity in particular, "was biting the hand that feeds it."

We were accused of this perpetration because in a recent editorial we took Controller Balfour to task for making statements about matters which he knew very little about, a not too uncommon failing of Controller Balfour.

At yesterday's council meeting the controller read excerpts from the editorial to council members. He neglected to read that portion of the editorial which praised the city for its magnificent gift to this University, but read only the portion criticizing himself. Controller Balfour didn't think The Varsity had any right to criticize him because he had been one of the main supporters of the $2,000,000 grant to the University.

Our criticism was based on a statement made recently by Controller Balfour in which he asserted he would ask for an investigation of staff and students of this University "to assure they're being taught the democratic way of life." We implied that Controller Balfour was ill-equipped to conduct such an investigation and that, as a municipal office-holder, he had no authority to make such an assertion. We still think so.

Controller Balfour's conception of "the democratic way of life" is such that he becomes angry when students at this University can listen to an address by Communist Tim Buck. How much more irate would he be if he realized that every day students here are being taught among other things, Marx's doctrines and the structure of the Russian government?

President Smith, in his annual report earlier this year, said "A true university is a community of scholars eager to learn, to search, and to teach, in which . . . teachers and taught advance together in the search for truth." The president quoted A. J. Scott, of Owens College, Manchester, who wrote: "He who learns from one who has learned all he has to teach, drinks the 'dark mantle of a stagnant pool'." Only last Sunday, addressing a concert at Convocation Hall, President Smith said: "In the republic of the mind, there are no barriers, no boundaries, no tariffs, no quotas, nor even vetoes." It is this type of liberal thought which must prevail at a university if it is to survive. But apparently Controller Balfour thinks otherwise.

If a university has to function on Controller Balfour's type of "freedom", if the thought of its undergraduates is to be stifled and subjected to the narrowness of such men, then that university should close its doors because it has already ceased to function.

The Cat's Fairy Tale With a Moral

Once upon a time there was an ant. This ant was a lazy ant. However, the aforementioned ant had a mother, who for practical purposes we will call "momma ant". The little baby ant didn't have a father, but being an ant he didn't seem to care. To avoid complications we will call the hero of our story Alvin—Alvin the ant.

Hated Work

Now as it happened, Alvin didn't like to work, and what is more important, he didn't like to go to school. Momma ant kept telling Alvin that, if he didn't go to lectures like all good ants should, he wouldn't get his B.A. (Bachelor of Ants) degree. Alvin would rather spend his time at a picnic or get into somebody's pants. All day long he would play bridge in the Junior Ants Room.

One day as Alvin and his mother were working at their home, which most people couldn't tell from a hole in the ground, mostly because it was a hole in the ground, a beautiful butterfly flitted gently above them. Alvin was moved by the beauty and the grace of the butterfly and said, "I wish I was as free as a butterfly."

Momma ant cast a scornful glance at her young son and gently spanked him with her fifth leg. "Don't you pay any attention to that loafer up there. She is a co-ed and only goes to college to look pretty for all the male butterflies. All she wants is to find a husband with a lot of lettuce so she can settle down and raise a lot of little catterpillars."

Little Alvin sighed and continued his work. At the time he was pushing a matchstick, and thought this to be a very silly occupation any way. He wanted to fly away like the beautiful butterfly. Work he thought was a useless thing. He didn't want to worry about the future. But momma insisted that they work to prepare for a "rainy day."

Time passed and soon winter came. Alvin and his ant mother went underground into their little hole in the hill that they called home. Alvin tried and tried to forget the butterfly, but only declared, "I'm an ant that can't."

Finally spring came. The ground became warm and Alvin felt all worm inside. He was looking forward to seeing the beautiful butterfly flitting about. He pushed open the lid of his house, breathed the air and felt good all over—all over including all six legs.

Alvin saw something lying frozen beside the little ant hill. Lo and behold! He cried out, "It's her. It's the beautiful butterfly, and she's dead."

Momma ant saw all this and was glad in a way. She started to search about for a moral.

But just then a little girl who was picking daisies came on the scene. She saw the pretty little butterfly, stiff and dead. She picked it up in her little soft hands. Tears coursed down her rozy cheeks.

Her watery eyes caught sight of the ants staring at her. Before Alvin and his mother had a chance to move, she cried out, "You dirty little ants you," and stepped on them. They were crushed. Dead.

The moral is: "It just goes to show you."

When Will Frost Be Out?

Suddenly, it occurred to me that this would be the best time to ask Mr. Corbett, as man to man, just when "F Day" is due. We took a step nearer. "Psst . . . when is the fence going up around the front campus, Ruddy?" . . . "Can't tell you that, son. You see, it all depends upon how soon all the frost is out."

Blood Donors Are Sought By Red Cross

The Canadian Red Cross Blood Transfusion Service will begin its week-long campaign of enrolling student blood donors today. The Transfusion Service will be in Teefy Hall, St. Michael's College, between the hours of 9 and 12 noon, it was learned yesterday.

The enrolment in Teefy Hall today will be for St. Mike's students. Other colleges and faculties will be visited throughout the week. Applications will be taken from Trinity and St. Hilda's students tomorrow between 12 and 2 p.m. On Thursday the service will take applications from the students at University College between 11 and 1 p.m. and at Victoria College between 10.30 and 1.30.

The same program is being started at McGill University, the Red Cross official said. It was introduced at the University of British Columbia and the University of Alberta two years ago.

The Transfusion Service will be taking applications for donors only this week. In about two weeks' time the actual donating will take place. All those who enroll will be notified a week in advance of the time they are to give blood.

The clinics at 50 Bloor St. East will be open all day. Anyone between the ages of 18 and 65 may may enroll.

New techniques for donating blood have been established where the donors need not refrain from eating beforehand.

At all times there is a doctor and nurse in attendance at the clinic. After giving the blood, the donors are requested to lie down for 10 or 15 minutes. They are given coffee and tea to drink.

Any donors who still retain their donor cards from former years are requested to bring them to the clinic, when they come to give blood. The new donations will be credited on these cards.

When the present survey has been completed, Canada will be the only country in the world with a national transfusion service, the official stated.

National Theatre Needed In Canada Is LPP Decision

LPP leader Tim Buck's plan for development of a "national" culture in Canada, outlined in his speech last week, was discussed at an LPP club forum yesterday.

Mae Inwood, IV Vic, supported Mr. Buck: "Hollywood producers choose themes merely on the basis of their sensational appeal. If we develop a conscious Canadian culture we will be able to put pressure on them to produce superior movies. But to develop a truly democratic culture it will be necessary to develop a national theatre in which young Canadians can be trained," she said.

Murray Pashler, III Vic, declared development of a national culture would be dangerous. He concluded, "All true culture is international."

Pashler also said control of culture "from the top" would not be desirable, if the recent Russian film "Ivan the Terrible" is an example.

Wil Acker, IV UC, replied, "There is a difference between a national culture and a nationalist one such as that developed in Nazi Germany. A national culture is a people's culture."

A suggestion by Sol Blackman, IV UC, that Communists will develop a Canadian culture by constructing an economy suitable to one led to a discussion of Tim Buck's plans for the Canadian economy. One speaker said it is impossible for Canada to make her economy independent of the United States.

Will Acker replied: "Buck's thesis was this: every country must develop along a steadily expanding industrial economy. The U.S. has tried to subordinate all other economies to her own. American leaders would make Canada an economic hinterland."

Spring Is Coming

One month from yesterday, spring will be here, says the calendar, and the campus should look like this picture taken from Hart House Tower. But judging from the weather spring has come a little earlier this year. Perhaps a month from now, deep snow will blanket the campus. By then, Skulemen will be getting ready for their final exams, and artsmen will be buried in last minute essays, in preparation for those May bogies.

When "The Fence" Goes Up It's Time To Settle Down

By HERB K. WOOD

The other day we were quietly eating our lunch in the Hart House dry-lunch Haven when a friend sidled up and put us straight on when to start studying for the spring pen manoeuvres.

"When you see them putting the fence around the front campus, look out! The exams are just around the corner." Taken aback with this important bit of information, our dill pickle and mock chicken sandwich dropped from our fingers and we swallowed hastily.

"Say . . . thanks for the gen, Ralph, but how soon is that? Who puts it up?" "Dunno, it varies every year . . . well, gotta go, keep your eyes peeled . . . be seeing ya."

Who Fences The Campus?

Naturally we took this information right to heart, forgot all about the lunch and started out immediately to find the man or men responsible. It took us quite a while and before finding our man, we thought more than once of that sandwich left on the table. Wonder what dessert was?

In back of Simcoe Hall is a large hut and in there we found our man—Ruddy Corbett. Dressed in baggy tweeds with overcoat and fedora and smoking a cigar, Ruddy readily admitted he was the man for whom we were looking. We also found out that he is grounds superintendent. This job includes landscaping all the University grounds and rented properties, plus supplying transportation for everything from a record player to welding equipment.

Precursor of Doom Located

Ruddy seated himself behind a huge square desk of World War I vintage, cluttered with papers, on one corner of which reposed an enamelled tea pot. A squat wood stove, trademarked "Oxford Camp," located in the centre of the shack, was throwing out a great heat. On top of the stove rested a blackened aluminum kettle. You understand, this serves as the men's lunch room as well as Mr. Corbett's office.

"You couldn't have come at a better time," he said. "We've been rushed off our feet for the last 10 years, especially during the war, and now things are just slowing up." We thought it fortunate too, inasmuch as 10 years is quite a bit of living to spend waiting for an interview.

At Varsity For 17 Years

Ruddy's been here for 17 years and in that time has learned quite a bit about human nature. "I've run across quite a few characters but one thing I've learned is never to judge a man by his looks," he said. By the way, during World War I, Ruddy quit in his sophomore year at O.A.C. to join the Army.

We learned too that it takes three trucks and an average of between 45-50 men in the summer to 10 in the winter to keep up with the work. Further, every hour of the working day is accounted for on a pad conveniently located in front of him on the desk. Just about this time, we both became aware of the heat and stood up to take off our overcoats.

According to Mr. Corbett, nowhere on the campus has a tree been singled out to immortalize young love. Nowhere can you see such an epitaph as H. C., IV S.P.S.,

Ignore Fifth Party Charges Solon Low May Organize Club

Ottawa, Feb. 18—(CUP)—Solon Low, Social Credit M.P. from Alberta, criticized Carleton College recently for ignoring the Social Credit party at a meeting of its Model Parliament. Instead, a Communist organizer was invited to take part in the four-cornered debate.

Low charged that those responsible for the session of the parliament were "derelict in their duty to the student body" for failure to present the views of the Social Credit party of Canada along with those of other political groups.

Those taking part in the Model Parliament at Carleton were Ralph Maybank, Liberal M.P. for Winnipeg South Centre; Angus MacInnes, CCF M.P. for Vancouver East; Roland Michener, former member of the Progressive Conservative cabinet in Ontario, and now special assistant to George Drew, and Mark Frank, LPP organizer in Eastern Ontario.

"This calling in by Carleton College of a Communist speaker and ignoring our party is more than strange," Mr. Low commented. "The Labor-Progressive or Communist Party which was represented at the debate in Carleton College only had a single member ever elected to the House. The university authorities must know that he is now in jail after being convicted of espionage charges. Yet they didn't see fit to ask a representative of our group to take part, although we have very definite views on most of the major national issues of this country."

Commenting on the absence of a Social Credit speaker at the Model Parliament at Carleton College, Professor Frank MacKinnon, Professor of political science at the college, said there was no question of deliberate omission of a Social Credit representative in the debate. It just happens, he said, that there is as yet no Social Credit Party in the Student Parliament. "The arrangement was," Professor MacKinnon explained, "that each student party invited a guest speaker to their Model Parliament." Carleton College's LPP Club is a one-man club. Its defender in the Model Parliament, Mark Frank, was repeatedly interrupted by cat-calls, howls and challenging questions.

Solon Low later said that since the only way to have speakers from his party invited to participate is to have the invitation issued by its followers among the students, he will attempt to contact young men and women at the college who hold Social Credit views and have them organize a group.

Claims Socialism Gets Labor's Help; No Other Option

"The road which socialism follows is labor's line of march," said Stan Coleridge, IV General, in a speech to the CCF Club yesterday. Labour learns to back the political party which supports its ideals by trial and error, and supports socialism only when it realizes that older parties are not free to fight for what it wants.

It is dangerous for the socialist party and a strong labor party to gravitate together, said Coleridge, because the socialist creed must appeal to a wider group. The fact that in Ontario many CCF leaders are also labour leaders exaggerates the connection between the two organizations in the public eye, and causes the familiar accusation that labor is CCF dominated and vice versa. Actually, the CCF executive is formed from a good cross section of society.

'Inside External Affairs' IRC Program For Ottawa

Fifty-seven members of the International Relations Club are leaving Toronto by bus and car at 5.30 Friday morning for a week-end visit to the External Affairs Department and other points of interest in Ottawa. This week-end will climax the activities for the year, said Ed Cosford, club president.

The main purpose of the trip is to give IRC members a look at the inner workings of one of the most interesting government departments. The Hon. L. B. Pearson, honorary president of IRC, has been very kind in helping to arrange the visit and his department has gone out of their way to see that the students will see everything possible.

The program starts Friday afternoon with a meeting with the Permanent Under-secretary, Mr. Escott Reid, who will outline the general work of the External Affairs. The group will then split up for a tour of the sections such as Protocol, European, Commonwealth and Economics. At five the heads of the political divisions will speak and then the party will have supper in the Parliamentary restaurant which is a special concession. If Parliament is sitting the party will look in on the debate that night.

Saturday will finish the tour of the External Affairs with a speech by the Minister, L. B. Pearson. The

Reports Closed Meeting, Univ. of Alberta Paper Blamed by Student Body

Edmonton, Feb 21—(CUP)—The University of Alberta Students' Council has objected to the invasion of a closed campus meeting by The Gateway, student newspaper, and has censured The Gateway for a "violation of journalistic ethics."

The meeting referred to was a recent Social Credit study group. Announced as a meeting closed to The Gateway, the Socred party group caucus was attended by three representatives of the newspaper unknown to the students present. Notes were taken and a story printed.

The Students' Council passed a motion disapproving The Gateway's action and ordered the paper refrain from such conduct in future, saying, "The tactics used by our publication in this incident are considered by Council to be a violation of journalistic ethics."

In an editorial, The Gateway agreed with the Council to a certain extent, but said that in the particular instance, "It was a question of the end justifying the means."

The Gateway felt, it declared, that students had a right to know what was going on in campus politics, and for this reason covered the meeting and printed the information obtained, which it considered "significant."

The Other 51

Those who have worked for the past six or eight weeks, and, in some cases, much longer, in the promotion of Brotherhood Week on the campus have been subject to serious criticism from a number of well-intentioned people.

The fact that this criticism has come, in the main, from people who are genuinely interested in the problems of racial and religious tolerance which are the business of the SAC's Inter-Cultural Affairs Committee makes it worthy of discussion, and the best time for this discussion is during Brotherhood Week itself.

There are people who object to the idea of a special week. They feel, naturally enough, that the question of discrimination is too big for annual treatment. What they do not see is this: arrangements for a concentrated week of co-ordinated activities take weeks and even months to carry out. Then, too, as Professor George Tatham pointed out in an address last month, concentrated activity such as that in Brotherhood Week forces the matter simultaneously to the attention of ALL the students on the campus. It has also the value of aligning workers and executives from all campus groups and faculties in community effort to "put the Week across".

The Week is designed to stimulate thought during the other 51 weeks of the year.

Lawyer Becomes Authoress Uses Masculine Pseudonym

By PAULA ZUMSTEIN

Joanna Jansen, a graduate of Victoria College, is an authoress as well as a lawyer. In the literary field Miss Jansen published her first book last year, a mystery story entitled "Death and Lilacs". "People react more favorably to mystery stories written by men," said Miss Jansen, and for that reason she adopted the pseudonym, "Fred Bayard".

JOANNA JANSEN

Born In Holland

Miss Jansen moved to Canada from Holland with her family while she was still very young and at present is living in Newmarket. She was interested in writing while a student at Victoria College and still has many ideas for short stories, mysteries and novels. Encouraged by the success of her first book Miss Jansen is now working on a new mystery novel. "Death and Lilacs" is set in New York to make an appeal to the reading public of the United States. "It's tough for a Canadian to crack the American market," Miss Jansen said, "and it seems that you have to make your name on the other side before Canadian publishers will even read your manuscripts." Working with her secretary and critic, Mrs. Margaret Campbell, Miss Jansen wrote "Death and Lilacs" in eight months. Although she has never visited New York and ignorance of the city morgue necessitated a long distance call to the police there, Miss Jansen said that, by studying maps, she probably knows New York better than most New Yorkers.

Toronto Lawyer

Writing however is only one of Miss Jansen's hobbies. During the day she is the legal adviser for three National Trade Corporations, and claims that these two professions mix very well. "Law gave me a man's attitude about things and the ability to think a problem through logically," said Miss Jansen. "Very few women can write a bang-bang mystery, you know; mostly they go in more for character studies," she added.

Loves Horses

Law and writing, however, are not Miss Jansen's only interests. Her favorite hobby is palamino horses, one of which she rode last fall in the Winter Fair. Since it has been sold she is now looking for another one to ride on weekends in Newmarket. Although she would like to travel particularly to Europe or South America, Miss Jansen has another dream for an ideal life, which includes her beloved horses—a full-time writing career, living on her own ranch breeding palaminos.

Distaff Side

By ANNE BURTON and MARGOT MURRAY

February is the time of term when collegians begin to worry about the six essays they have left to write before exams. The library — you discover where it is by the middle of your second year — is crammed with worried students, all writing immortal essays. The atmosphere breathes heavy learning and carbon dioxide. The desks are banked with musty tomes and crumpled paper. And most of the busy people look as though they should have a sign, Genius At Work, hanging around their necks.

At the librarians' desk a wall of piled books confronts a horn-rimmed, briefcase-carrying line-up which stands patiently awaiting the unexplored regions of af resh supply of reference books. Over the library is spread the polite rustlings of 98 leaves and the subdued scratchings of 98 pens. Occasionally some intent individual tiptoes in squeaky shoes up the aisle — nervous and red-faced lest anyone catch him in the act. Even the clock moves noiselessly and the door eases shut without a sound. Here under this blanket of quiet, 98 essays are being written and reworded and revised and finally copied out — indecipherable and ill-phrased, but immortal (small wonder that the professors' lot is not a happy one!)

It is the scene of industry and order of which every college principal dreams.

A scene of industry and order, that is; all except for the two sweet young things who sit chattering at the back of the library to the distraction of everyone for desks around. Girls like this just don't don't seem to understand that the library is reserved for worried students writing immortal essays. To them it's just a place where they can read that morning's Varsity. Or talk about the latest in home permanents and hand lotion. Or (perhaps!) eagerly discuss topics of minor consideration, such as Men. . . . How about snaffling a cup of coffee with us, girls? This library is getting stuffy — and we want to get in on this too!

Avocations Become More Than A Hobby

Verb Called Art, Necessary Explains Ruth F. Shaw

Most English teachers look askance when Ruth Faison Shaw suggests that art has another property of speech other than that of a noun, a much more important part. The verb art is a word which denotes progress, the reaction to things which are inside us. That something is often inexpressible except through the act of doing.

We are all aware of the means of teaching children, of leting them take in knowledge and assimilation but we do not allow for the self-expression of the child, she explained. It is this stage of growth that is so important to the child and that form of creation is art.

Starts School

Miss Shaw a native of North Carolina, has been visiting Toronto under the auspices of the Fine Art Department of Eaton's College Street, and will be entertained by Miss Marion B. Ferguson, Dean of UC women, at dinner tonight. After dinner, she will talk with the resident women of University College.

Her travels started in 1914 when she joined the Y.W.C.A. Three years later, teaching "History of Location" in Constantinople, she would show American people around the city. It wasn't until 1923 that her dreams were realized when she opened her school in Rome for English speaking children. Much of her theory of child teaching through self-expression was put into practice. The originating of Finger Painting as the medium became a widely discussed topic especially when she was invited to lecture at the Sorbonne and start experimental classes at the Trocadero school.

Finds Formula

Much of the difficulty in her work was in obtaining a material like paint but without its harmful effects. With the help of Marconi and others, an earth pigment was made which did not stain the children's hands or clothes. An interesting formula was found by a priest while searching for a formula in the Vatican Library. Evidently the formula was a concoction prescribed for Cleopatra's hives. Later Miss Shaw found that many famous painters such as Raphael used an earth pigment in oil or egg white as paints.

The other implement needed for her work is a tough, very tough paper with a clay glaze. The glazed surface is the side on which the paint is applied. Direction for how much paint to use is simple if you just imagine that you are scooping out ice cream when your mother is not watching.

Having Fun

The element of simplicity and fun which was prevalent throughout Miss Shaw's address is the fundamental basis for her Finger Painting and its appeal both to children and adults. Psychologists and doctors have been astonished with the results she has obtained with children and, much to Ruth Shaw's joy, have admitted that it was 'scientifically sound!'

Her method of expression allows children to express themselves without incurring hindrances of technical details. The difficulty with which children meet when they attempt to write their thoughts is overcome through the use of dictaphones. The compositions thus created have the simplicity and sense of climax. A sense of balance which Miss Shaw maintains everyone possesses is inherent in all children and the freedom and rhythmical method of painting shows in this Finger Painting.

Acadian Women Display Initiative During Coed Week

Crowning a "Co-ed King" and editing their own Co-ed issue of the "Acadia Athenaeum" were outstanding events in the annual Co-ed week held recently at Acadia, New Brunswick.

The purpose of this week, which brought "petticoat government" to the campus was to let the so-called "weaker sex" demonstrate their ability to take the initiative in every Acadian activity.

The co-ed king, one of four candidates for the post, was elected by all the co-eds in the University and was crowned at the reception held at the end of the week, when the co-eds escorted their "dates" to the dance.

The Co-ed issue of the campus paper, which was produced by an all-girl staff, contained editorials on the position occupied by women both in the university and in the world in general. Additional features were columns on Men's Fashions, how men "improved" during the co-ed week, and a campus survey to ascertain whether Acadian men measured up to the standards set by the girls.

The N.F.C.U.S. obtained a 33 per cent reduction on sports equipment which universities buy from Spalding and Co.

VIC'S CORNER

For the past several months this corner has been bringing to you the news and events currently on the fire at Vic. Today we find that things are beginning to slow down, a sure sign that the examination pulse is beginning to quicken. Throughout the year each of us may have been particularly impressed by one particular event or occasion, which varied depending upon the individual interest.

However, next week there is an event which is vitally important to all of us at Vic. We can only be referring to one thing . . . the Spring Elections.

Now those of you who shrug your shoulders and say . . . "Oh that doesn't concern me. I'm not running, nor are any of my friends," should stop to consider how far from the truth you stray. Counting the V.C.U. Executive, the Classes and Societies there are something like 125 positions to be filled during the next two voting days. The holders of Victoria's highest awards, the Men and Women's Sticks, will be chosen.

And these are the people who directed and worked to put on that wonderful Dance of Distinction, the Dramatic Club plays and Music Club events, the enjoyable evenings at the French Club. They look after the operation of the Tuck Shop, the Common Rooms, the sale of tickets and the publishing of Acta Victoriana. The hockey, football, track and other athletic teams were all guided by these people whose successors will be running for office. NO MATTER WHO YOU ARE OR WHAT YOU ARE YOU CANNOT SHRUG YOUR SHOULDERS AND SAY THAT THE ELECTIONS DO NOT CONCERN YOU VERY PERSONALLY.

At Vic we can truly say, and with a great deal of pride, that we have responsible student government.

The implications of this very high privilege cannot be overstressed. As a member of the Union to which you pay $7 in incidental fees you are entitled to see that the right people are placed in the positions that will spend this money. For a great number, this means actual participation. To those who are the bystanders there is the very vital task of being keenly interested in that which takes place in the political arena.

During the past few years at Vic the turnouts at the Spring elections have been very encouraging. But, if you will pardon the use of that well worn adage, there is always room for improvement. When the time comes to cast your votes, you should not only be there to exercise your privilege, but also you should be prepared to vote wisely and with discrimination. The great obstacle of high enrollment prevents us from knowing personally all those persons running, but an active curiosity can soon discover many things.

The Bulletin Boards in Vic will give you many leads. There are the Campaign speeches, and the posters. Watch The Varsity for election announcements.

The reflection of whether or not Student Government is apathetic and cliquish, as some critics would lead us to believe, will be mirrored in the poll of student opinion one week from this Friday. Every individual in Vic, where possible, should make it a very definite point expressing his or her opinion.

Remember, one week from this Friday, the V.C.U. Elections take place in Vic. VOTE AS YOU LIKE, BUT VOTE!

60 YEARS OF ACCOMPLISHMENT

1889 1949

In early days the "horse power", operated by teams of horses hitched to its arms and walking in a circle, supplied the power to operate the threshing machine and other farm machines. Today tractors and engines supply the power to operate most farm machines. Nickel Steel and Nickel Cast Iron are used for important parts of tractors and other farm machines to give extra strength, toughness and wear resistance, and to eliminate breakdowns.

Canadian Nickel sold Abroad brings in U.S. Dollars

Since more than ninety per cent of the Nickel produced in Canada is sold to the United States and other countries, it brings a constant flow of dollars back to Canada. In fact, Canada's Nickel industry is one of our chief sources of U.S. dollars so essential at the present time to maintain our foreign trade and make available products not produced in this country.

These dollars help pay the wages of the 14,000 Nickel employees, and help provide the dollars which make it possible to pay millions in freight to Canadian railways, to buy timber, steel, coal, machinery and supplies amounting to many millions each year.

These millions, flowing into all industries through the length and breadth of Canada, help create jobs for Canadians.

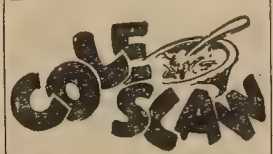
Trinity Recital

The Sunday evening concert at Trinity consisted of a recital by the Argentinian pianist Miss Elizabeth Westercamp, recently arrived in this country.

The recital was, like Gaul, divided into three parts but, unlike Gaul had four encores which might be treated as a fourth section. The artist began with an Andantino and Allegro by the early Italian composer Rossi and continued with Prelude, Chorale and Fugue by Cesar Franck. From the start her clear, incisive style and the depth and clarity of her feeling became apparent but it was not until the second part, Chopin's Sonata opus 58, that we became aware of her virtuosity. The first movement was particularly interesting for the modulations and technical ingenuity of its framework, while the second lives in my mind for the interweaving of religious themes on a secular base.

It was at this stage that I became aware of grunting noises which I took at first for the snores of some unworthy member of the audience; after a little scrutiny, however, they were found to emanate from the pianoforte itself. Every time the artist withdrew her foot from the loud pedal this little grunt arose and, as the pedalling was frequent, so were the grunts. I was transfixed with horror and my mind was possessed with the vision of some gnome straight from the pages of a Sigrid Undset novel who was bent on Scandinavian skulduggery inside the instrument.

By the time I had overcome this affliction of this spirit the third section, Spanish works and an Etude by Scriabine was underway. Granados, Albeniz and Turina who were represented made a welcome introduction for many to the Spanish Musical Renaissance and a happy reminder to those who are perhaps a little apt to overlook this interesting and impressive movement.



Each of the encores was received with more applause than the preceding until in the final one (de Falla's Ritual Fire Dance) the audience were noticeably affected by the 'ekstasis' of the pianist and gave her an ovation the like of which has not been witnessed at a Trinity concert in a very long time

Claims Socialism

Asked whether the CCF leaders who are labor men have not the greatest voice in the party, Mr. Coleridge said that it is unwise to let them. Actually these men are often too busy with their union activities to attend CCF executive meetings, and their influence is not felt as much as it should be. As to the place of labor in a socialist regime, it was explained, under the present set-up the role of labor is defensive.

This week, we understand, is National Brotherhood Week, the one week each years given over to a general stocktaking of the known methods of practising bigotry, prejudice and intolerance. This is the week for being properly shocked at excesses that are given free play for the other fifty-one. This is also the week when all thinking sensitive people must shudder convulsively at the necessity for a national reminder of this sort. National Brotherhood Week, for our part, curdles us to our marrow and makes us itch to throttle the heaving hypocrites on their throbbing podiums. We wonder how much more difficult it would be to do things that would make National Brotherhood Weeks, pleas for tolerance and the other trappings of a watchful paternalism unnecessary? Much more difficult, we suppose, than the loud and noble proclamation of National Brotherhood Week.

"Jack Punnett Nite" Tonight At Varsity

Speaking Of Sport

By ED VOIGHT

Another Open Letter to Johnny Metras:

Dear John:

Er, John, about that slight matter of some 17 points, er, the less said about that the better. Maybe, we should teach the Blues to read The Varsity's highly inestimable sports pages, maybe.

At any rate, your Mustangs won by 10 points—needless to say, John, we don't have to remind you that we picked the Blues by seven (Aach—quick, James, the arsenic, if you please.)

We find ourself in a somewhat similar predicament to Western's publicity director, one Neil MacCarl, who predicted in truly expert fashion that the Blues would lose by at least 15 points. Mr. MacCarl, moreover, promised to eat his Van Kirk at high noon last Saturday if his prediction proved inaccurate.

We can't help wondering how Neil's digestive system is working just about now. He was sporting such a sharp lid, too.

Nevertheless, John, we still haven't given up on our Blues. When Masterson lost Brennan and Pettinger with sprained ankles, even though Brennan did get back into the game after missing a whole quarter, much of the steam went out of the Toronto offense. Something comparable to your losing Phibbs and Thomas.

Was wondering, John, if you had observed that the Blues actually sank 20 field goals, while the Mustangs swooshed in only 18. But we must admit, John, that Western's foul-shooting record was slightly less than terrific, to say the least.

Oh, why oh why, should the Blues pick the night when Wearring sank 11 out of 12 free throws and Phibbs sank seven out of eight tries? What do you feed those guys? Carrot juice, maybe?

So, that's the end of Varsity-Western Senior Intercollegiate activities till next fall. Am looking forward to picking the Mustangs up out of the sod in Varsity Stadium next October.

Very, very, Blue-fully yours,
Uneasy Ed Voight.

P.S.—And John, have changed the color scheme in that special Purple and White crying towel to Blue and White. Need we mention why?

Ankles Out

Shown above is Glen Pettinger, stellar Blue hoopster who suffered a badly twisted ankle in the game with Western last week-end. It is hoped that he will be ready to start with the Blues against Hamilton's basketball playing gridders.

Arena Is Scene Of Benefit Game

Tonight is the night that has been set aside to honor one of Toronto's really outstanding young athletes. Jack Parkinson Punnett, all around sportsman and top flight competitor with the Corner Boys A.C. Junior "B" hockey entry, will be the man of the hour at the Varsity Arena as St. Michael's face Varsity Juniors and Corner Boys tackle Marlboros.

Thirty prizes with a total of over $500 will be offered to the sports fans and well wishers of the lad who was stricken last fall with multiple sclerosis and has been waging a winning battle for health for nearly seven months. Wrist watches, suits of clothes, 200 gallons of gasoline, tons of coal, a Parker 51 set, radios, fishing reels and countless other valuable prizes will change owners when Alderman Allan H. Lamport dips his hands into the stubs. CKEY's crack announcer Stu Kenney will be on hand to M.C. the proceedings.

Manager Ross Workman, of the Varsity Arena, has arranged for several female members of the local figure skating club to skate around distributing the prizes to the lucky winners. Ross is in charge of the financial end of the night and has worked hard with Saul and Lou Goldberg, sponsors of Jack's old club, to make the night the big success it deserves to be.

Junior hockey fans will be glad to hear that Jack is improving rapidly and is very anxious to be present in person tonight. However, friends are doubtful as to whether or not his condition will permit such exertion as it would doubtlessly retard progress towards his complete recovery.

Through the efforts of Ross Workman all the facilities of the Varsity arena have been donated free of charge by the board of directors of the university. Ticket-takers, sellers, ushers, attendants and an OHA referee in the person of Perc Allen have all donated their services for the evening. All proceeds of the evening will be added to the private donations extended by well wishers and used to defray the cost of medical expenses.

"Even the players pay tonight," said Saul Goldberg. That goes for all the pass holders and sundry will go for the fifty cent admission. Reserved seats are still available and the phone number of the Varsity Arena is MIdway 4066. The first game is scheduled for 7:30 and will feature the St. Mike's Buzzers and the Varsity Bees. Prizes will be drawn for between the games and as a special teasrer for the football fans, two autographed Argonaut Rowing Club footballs will be given out.

Contributions to the "Jack Punnett Fund" should be addressed to Ross Workman, treasurer, Varsity Arena. Tickets can also be had from Corner House Grill and numerous sporting goods stores throughout the city.

Archery

Today's meeting of the Archery club is not only important but beneficial. It will take the form of a tournament and . . . ah . . . no, we won't tell you that there's going to be a prize and that Miss Slack will be looking for archers to make up the team that will go to McMaster on March 9.

Women's Hockey

Physio Therapy defeated OT 3-1 yesterday quite easily. The score would have been higher in favor of Physio if it weren't for OT's goalie, Donna Kingston, who battled many a shot fired at her.

Jeanne Cossar fought hard at centre and picked up an assist on Physio's first goal by Shirley Norwich. The other two were shot into the net by Betty Coo. OT didn't put up any drive until the last period when Barb Craine went in alone to chalk up their only point. However, the spurt was short-lived and the puck remained in Physio's zone to the end of the game.

Tigers Preparing For Blue Cagers

One team that is not underrating the University of Toronto Senior Basketball Blues is the Hamilton Tigers Football Club which will meet the Blues in Hart House tomorrow night—as a basketball team. The Tigers, Frank Filchock and his pass receivers included, play in the Hamilton city league and they're good. They reached the playoffs—only to lose an important game by default.

To prepare for the Sports Nite feature tomorrow the Tigers have been putting extra effort into their practices. In fact, when speaking to The Varsity by telephone last night, Filchock showed audible signs of fatigue. He was too tired to make predictions.

The case for the Blues still seems fairly weak. Top scorers Eddie Brennan and Glen Pettinger are doubtful starters — both are doctoring twisted ankles. Tony Adams is out for the year, another twisted ankle, and Wally Zeaton is still troubled by his cracked ribs. Coach Bob Masterson might very well call on his football squad for replacements.

George Goodrow, Tigers coach, will bring with him tomorrow the following ten men: Jake Gaudier, John Harper, Alfie Crooker, Joey Pal, Stan Wolkowski, George Festeryka, Johnny Ojenck, Doug Smith, Red Hickey and Frank Filchock. Harper, ORFU leading scorer is also a threat on the ball floor.

Wednesday night is not the average sports promoter's idea of a good time of the week for drawing the crowds but this affair promises to set Athletic Director Warren Stevens and Treasurer J. P. Loosemore a-smiling.

PITCHING SPORTSHOES

By BILLY ROSS

Although squelching rumors is not our full time dodge, a rather important one which has its origin in the sports column of one of the big downtown dailies wants us to credit the story that triple threat football star, Bruce Cummings is about to quit school at the end of the year. Bruce, who is in his third skule year, was reached yesterday by phone and has denied the report, pointing out the foolishness of terminating his engineering studies with only one year to go for his degree.

Senior UC took up the option on the first spot in the group III major b-ball running by registering an impressive 38-18 win over the SPS seconds yesterday at Hart House. The red and white quintet rang up a four point lead at the half and went on to stretch the margin as they outhooped the skulemen 25-8 in the final frame.

Cohen was top man for the winners with seven counters to his credit, Slim Tisdale followed with a sextet and Goldberg contributed five to the UC total. McPhedran got four and Cooper, Bockneck and Penny all netted three while Simbrow and Montayne added two each.

For the Engineers, Chorestecki and Marshall were at the fore with four per. Penhorwood hooped three. McHenry two and Dickenson wound up the Skule total with a single.

The UC and Victoria College fourth teams tangled on the major floor yesterday with the UCers taking their second tilt of the day. Vic made a strong comeback in the latter half in an effort to overcome a seventeen point debenture and outscored the winners 27-16, losing by a 39-33 decision.

Gibson of UC came up with a sterling twenty point performance to highlight the scoring list. Shapiro and Davis counted five and Wineburg augmented the UC cause with two points. Walters with nine, Drewitt with six and Bann with two were the only Vic hoopsters that didn't get the word. Hiney, Horvath, Kilgour and Field all got together and came up with a uniform four points apiece.

There will be a final meeting for those going at 4:15 p.m. today in Room 1, Trinity College, to complete arrangements.

VARSITY SPORTS

Emblem And Sinclair Are Leading Marksmen

Right-winger Reggie Sinclair gave a forceful demonstration last Wednesday that Jack Gelineau was not the only bright feather in the Redskins' cap. He racked up five goals and two assists for the best individual effort this season as McGill nosed out the tail-end Gaels 9-7.

Sinclair collected a goal and an assist on Friday against the Blues to vault into second place in the scoring race. His 22-point total puts him only three back of the leader, Georges Emblem of the Carabins, while the 16 goals to his credit give him a wide lead in that department.

Deadlocked in third spot are a pair of Montrealers, Gregoire Giguere and Andre Charest, with 21 points apiece. Giguere with three goals was the main cog in the Carabin machine whose 5-4 triumph over Varsity assured them of the Queen's cup.

Tops for the Blues is left-winger Bill Spence who follows with 19 points made up of seven goals and 12 assists.

Queen's high scorer Don Murray, voted as Queen's most valuable player last year, looks like a sure bet to repeat this year. Murray scored four times and assisted once against McGill to give him a sixth place total of 17 points.

Leading defenseman is big Doug Heron of McGill whom the Varsity fans love so dearly. Heron has two goals and six assists for an eight-point total.

McGill Downs SPS Debaters

The motion "Resolved that engineering can flourish best under a free enterprise economy" was upheld by a decisive vote after the McGill-SPS debate yesterday.

Speakers for the affirmative were Ned Young and Don Ward, both in fourth year engineering at McGill. As first speaker, Young pointed out that engineers were forced by free enterprise competition to develop new products. He challenged the opposition to name a better socio-economic system under which the profession might find fuller development.

Dependent On Whims

Speaking for the negative, Ray Webster, IV Engineering and Business, charged that engineering, under a free enterprise economy, catered to the whims of the average consumer. The consumer, who controls the rise and fall of demand, is usually ignorant of the fine points and true aims of the engineering profession.

Webster charged further that capitalist economy had demonstrated its inability in the past to finance adequate education in engineering. He cited the DVA grants, without which, he said, a sufficient number of students would not be able to prepare themselves to enter the profession. "In the big post-war first year classes we had as many as 1,800 students," he declared. "This year's class financed chiefly through private means, has only about 500 members." This, he said, would not prove sufficient.

Don Ward, McGill, second speaker for the affirmative, compared conditions in the engineering profession under free enterprise with those realized under "planned economies". He quoted passages from a book of the Russian engineer, Kravchenko, to the effect that government red-tape in Russia under the communists hindered the progress of the profession.

Hindrance To Progress

Wallace Chalmers, speaking for the negative, expressed the opinion that free enterprise had resulted, in our society, in monopolies and cartels which tended to restrict production and the development of engineering in all its branches. Control of patents by industrial corporations was, he said, a hindrance to progress in engineering.

A similar debate took place yesterday at McGill, with SPS men Blair Ferguson, IV Engineering and Business, and R. Bruce Mairs, III SPS, representing Toronto. McGill speakers Eric Value and Lou Gottheil, who took the negative, were the victors.

Families More Democratic States Moberly Lecturer

"As life becomes more complex, we must realize that the family is central in the life of the individual," said Mrs. Evelyn Millis Duvall, Executive Secretary of the National Council on Family Relations in her address on "Today's Approach to Family Life", the first lecture of the J. Vera Moberly Lectureship, yesterday.

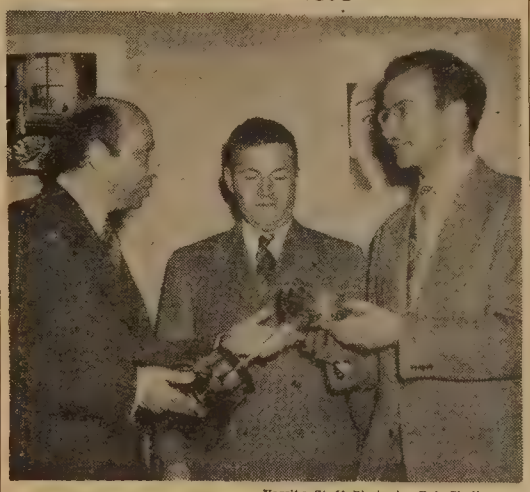
During recent decades, increasing industrialization, urbanization and secularization of family life has produced a throwing off of external controls. We no longer have accepted ideas of right and wrong, but a confused acceptance of a great variety of behaviour, she continued.

Families of today are smaller, more urban, more flexible, more democratic. As our contacts become more complex we become more anonymous in the world and our actions depend on our inner character formations, produced by our early family experiences.

Our families, with their close ties of intimacy and affection, produce in the individual a sense of orientation basic to our development. Our various professions are but supplements and aids to the health and welfare of the family. The home is the living laboratory in which the findings of professional workers are put into actual practice in everyday life.

Mrs. Duvall stressed the need for education for family life, and for programmes of co-operative research among the various professions which will plumb the depths of personality development and intricacies of family relationships as we have investigated the properties of the atom.

Ask Canadian Students Share Trip To Europe With American Visitors



NFCUS President, Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, received a letter from USNSA, the American Students' Federation, offering Canadian students an opportunity to go to Europe on the Dutch student ships, sailing next summer.

Robert L. West, International Vice-President of USNSA, requested that NFCUS co-operate with them to make allowance for Canadian students in the summer schedules. The ships will be sailing from Quebec and Rotterdam. An American brochure on the various Student tours offered is available now.

Gwynne-Timothy has called a meeting of the Action Committee of NFCUS to meet here March 5 to discuss the American proposal.

A wire has been dispatched to get full information on proposed costs, sailing dates and accommodation available.

White Camera, Old Blanket Photograph World's Great

By PETER WADE

He startles staid photographers by using a white camera with a red focussing cloth. He is recognized as one of the outstanding portrait photographers in the world. "I do not have my camera black because black is such a dull colour, all camers are black," replied Yousuf Karsh. He had come straight from New York to act as one of the judges of the Hart House annual photographic salon.

When asked how he happened to get launched into such a renowned career he replied that at first he knew only that he wanted to create something. Gradually this developed into an intense ambition to photograph the great men and women of the world—to record them historically. He had set himself a very difficult task, because these people, many in the flurry of state affairs, are too busy and preoccupied to provide ready material for a portrait. Two such men he had to contend with were Winston Churchill whom Karsh had only two minutes to photograph, and General De Gaulle whose schedule was so overcrowded that only 30 seconds could be spared. It was the portrait of Winston Churchill, however, that rocketed the name Karsh to fame. It has been exhibited in every country of the world except Germany, he believes. Up to that time surprisingly enough, 90 percent of his subjects had been women.

Cigarless Churchill

Mr. Karsh admitted that when photographing Mr. Churchill he had performed that courageous act of removing the ever-present cigar from that statesman's teeth. Mr. Churchill stood dumbfounded while the shutter clicked to record that historic moment. Later he remarked, "Well, you can certainly make a roaring lion stand still to be photographed."

On one occasion Mr. Karsh visited a home in which he could find no suitable wall. "The walls are not of the right colour," he confided to his subject—in fact they were dirty.

"Well I'll soon fix that," said the wealthy man. "We'll change the walls!" and without hesitation called his painters who happened to be in the house, to paint the room the required colour.

Unfortunately after much waiting to let the walls dry, the two men both developed headaches from the fumes and were forced to adjourn to another room. In a case like this Mr. Karsh has several trusty grey army blankets which can very often do the job nicely.

Nine States, 10 Days

Since he is so busy with trips to the States and all over the country—not long ago he visited nine states in 10 days—people desiring portraits are often forced to wait as long as nine months or a year before an appointment can be arranged. Although his studio is equipped to handle more, he has to limit the sittings to one a day, for he finds that at the end of an absorbing period both he and his subject are physically worn out.

When he went to photograph G. B. Shaw, he came up against a barrier in the form of Mr. Shaw's secretary who specified specifically that there was to be no artificial light, a miniature camera was to be used (Karsh uses a bulky 8x10 model), and that only five minutes could be spared. During the argument, Mr. Shaw came in and reiterated the terms. Tactfully Mr. Karsh upset his equilibrium and caused the great man to remark, "So you're an Armenian. Good! I have many friends among the Armenians, but to keep them strong and healthy they should be exterminated every little while." . . . The sitting continued for an hour and a half.

Mr. Karsh has definite ideas on the subject of softness vs. sharpness. He feels that photography is a medium to portray the truth and as such it deals with clear, sharp details when diffusing is

Personal Prejudice Prime Hate Factor Finds Round-Table

By J. A. KNIGHT

Personal prejudice is the factor which contributes most to racial prejudice was the conclusion of the inter-denominational forum held in West Hall, UC, under the sponsorship of the Inter-Cultural Affairs Committee of the SAC. A Catholic, a Jewish and a Protestant student took part in the discussion.

Discuss Causes

The discussion on the question "Why Racial Prejudice?" was under the chairmanship of Prof. W. S. McCullough of the Oriental languages department of UC. Student speakers were Jack Bothwell, I Divinity, Trinity; Mary Nowack, IV St. Mike's, and Wally Fram, III Law.

The causes of racial and religious prejudice were discussed under the headings: (1) Economic and Social factors, (2) Political factors, (3) Religious factors, and (4) Personal factors.

Under the heading of Economic and Social factors, Bothwell said our economic system, consisting of "each person pushing himself forward regardless of others is conducive to prejudice." Fram said that our economic system necessitates that one racial strain must control the rest and practice prejudice in order to retain its supremacy. "Even certain strains are barred in our own country", he said. "It is difficult for Jews and Italians to gain a foothold in the Engineering field".

Racial Stigma

Miss Mary Nowack substantiated Fram's statements, stating that her work among the Poles proved that many people with foreign-sounding names have a difficult time getting jobs. Miss Nowack said that the misconception of a Jewish stranglehold on business cannot be proven in fact. She suggested that the Jews are acting as scapegoats for some other animosity.

Racism, A Political Tool

On the subject of Political factors, Fram condemned the use of racism as a political tool, citing Hitler's anti-Semitism as an example. He said that minority groups, including Jews, enjoy a greater amount of freedom in Soviet Russia than in any other country. Miss Nowack suggested that minority groups in the Soviet receive the same amount of freedom as the rest of the population, but that since no one receives any freedom to speak of, these groups are worse off there than they are here.

On the subject of Religious factors in Racial and Religious Prejudice, Fram said that all large religious groups foment prejudice in that each group believes that it alone worships God in the only intelligent way and that all other types of worship are wrong.

Religion Unites Race

Bothwell disagreed with this statement. He said that there are many different racial groups in all of the larger religious groups, and that the same religion tends to be a uniting factor among the different race groups.

Answering a question from the floor, the forum agreed that inter-racial, inter-cultural and inter-religious marriages are highly desirable, but that the partners to such a marriage would have to be exceptionally strong if the marriage were to succeed.

Man's Tolerance Subject Of Talk By Dr. L. E. Lynch

Today's Brotherhood Week feature will be the talk at 4:15 in Cartwright Hall, St. Hilda's, on "The Dignity of Man".

The speaker, Dr. L. E. M. Lynch of the St. Michael's College philosophy department, has been with the college continuously since his entrance as a student in 1932 except for a break in the war years, 1942-46, and a year's teaching in Montreal.

Dr. Lynch's thesis in his talk will be the theory that Man, since he was created by God, has a dignity so great as to compel utmost respect and charity. This necessarily entails tolerance. The speaker will outline the stand taken on the question by the great philosophers. His appeal for racial and religious tolerance is on grounds of reason rather than sentiment.

"Man's spirituality is the mark of his kinship with God," said Dr. Lynch in an interview yesterday. "What I hope to point out in the talk on Wednesday is that the human being's ultimate dignity results from his being stamped with the image of God. His brotherhood with the others of his kind is also a result of each man's relation to his Creator."

Dr. Lynch received his B.A. from St. Michael's in 1936, and his M.A. a year later. Later, he obtained his doctor's degree and a licentiateship of the Institute of Mediaeval Studies.

Attorney-General

The Honorable Leslie Blackwell, Attorney-General of Ontario, will address the student body at 1 p.m. in West Hall of University College today. Mr. Blackwell will be a leading contender for the leadership of the Progressive Conservatives in Ontario at the forthcoming April convention.

Latest House Committee Promotes Table Tennis

The newest Hart House committee is the recently formed Table Tennis Committee. The new club has a membership of sixty, headed by a five-man executive which is a regular committee of Hart House.

Tournaments have been held during the year, and at present play is continuing to decide the individual club championship. The winner will receive a cup donated by Hart House. The committee has also sponsored teams representing the university in the Senior and Intermediate divisions of the Toronto Table Tennis League. Both these teams are now in the play-offs of their respective leagues.

Elections

The closing week in February usually ushers in a student activity that receives too little attention from the undergraduate body. The activity is student elections.

Unless students take an active interest in the forthcoming elections they will have little basis for complaints next year. Each year members of the student body voice complaints of one type or another against some of their elected representatives and the files of The Varsity indicate that many of the complaints have been aired year after year.

Many of the changes sought in student organizations over the years have failed to materialize simply because there was little student support or interest. And each year the same brick wall of apathy is apparent when election time rolls around.

If student activities are to be encouraged—and they should be—then they should merit student interest, especially within the next two weeks. Negligence at the polls can easily result in the election of second-rate officers.

Before election day you should examine the records of all the candidates. In some cases it may be difficult but there is no reason why you can not make an intelligent selection based on at least a partial knowledge of the candidates' records.

ART ∞ MUSIC ∞ DRAMA

Earl Dick

The recital given by Earl Dick, tenor, at the Conservatory Concert Hall, Monday night, was, we understand his final appearance as a student with the Senior School of the Royal Conservatory and we would have been pleased to report an unqualified success. Certainly there was much that could be commended. The program was varied and exacting and free from anything flashy, facile or hackneyed. Mr. Dick's platform manner is pleasant; his diction is excellent in English, German and Italian, though less distinguished in French; he has a feeling for the differences in character and style of the various genres represented on his program; and his presentation showed intelligence, sensitivity and imagination. It is therefore the more to be regretted that his voice is not yet ready to cope adequately with so demanding a program.

In his earlier groups, to be sure, his tone was agreeable and though his voice is light, it was capable of reflecting such contrasts in mood as were required by the two Dowland songs "Come Again" and "Sorrow, Sorrow Stay". These and the four Schubert lieder from the "Winterreise" cycle were the most generally successful offering. The sombre mood of "The Raven" was particularly well projected. The aria from "Cosi fan tutte", however, though sung with flexibility and good Mozart style, was marred by thin, forced upper tones. By the time the singer reached his group of Debussy and Duparc his voice seemed tired and lacked clarity and color. He showed courage in attempting the exciting, but difficult "Seven Sonnets of Michelangelo" of Benjamin Britten but his work was uneven in quality and the pleasure we felt in his effective pianissimo in Sonnet XXX was dissipated by the tendency to shout in the more dramatic sonnets. Mr. Dick will have more success with these when his production rests upon a firmer foundation.

Carol Wright's accompaniments were intense, if sometimes overly demonstrative. Mannerisms which may possibly be forgiven in a solo pianist can become rather distracting when they grace an accompanist.

The Cat's —Own— Gallup Poll

The Oper Opinion Poll Survey (OOPS for short), headed by publicity-conscious Elmer Oper, has made a series of samplings to find out what campus students think about things. You will notice the survey has a definite plan; then when you do notice it, please tell us, as we are unable to find out. The first section of the poll will deal with things other than other things and we hereby tabulate the results: (Mr. Oper informs us that "poll" is not the word for it. It should be the National Unitary Test Sample, or NUTS.)

Question—Do you thing you will pass?

Yes ..... ¼%
No ..... ½%
No opinion 99¼%

This seems to indicate something, but we have not found out what, except that 100% of the students will either pass or fail, although the heavy snows in the north (around the economics building) may affect the net result.

Do you have any views about opinions?

Have views 35%
Have no views 35%
Don't know if they have views 35%

From this it would appear that—that—that our arithmetic is a bit off, but it is only a matter of 5% and not enough to elect anybody. So we guess that some people have views, depending on whether they live on a hill and the size of their windows.

Will you vote for Joe Potts next year?

Who is Joe Potts? . 99 44/100%
No 6/100%
Don't know ..... ½%

This shows conclusively that Truman has been elected.

Do you attend lectures regularly?

Yes 5%
No 94%

What are lectures?—Hank Wescott.

The executive board of OOPS, discussing this survey (NUTS) decided to put a brief before President Smith to have lectures continued next year, as the results of this poll were inconclusive and would have to be repeated.

Where do you hang out?

Library—3 (This can be discounted as the three affirmative votes were Mr. Wallace, librarian, and two full time assistants).

KCR men's room 5,045
KCR ladies' room 4,389
Other places ..... Negligible

This just goes to show.

Bees Edge Mikemen 2-1 At Jack Punnett Night

PITCHING SPORTSHOES

By BILLY ROSS

Records mean little to the speedsters who are competing in the interfaculty open track meet, held each and every Tuesday night at the Hart House track. The 50-yard hurdle record was the latest to fall as all four of the first four finishers were inside the old time of 6.90.

Bill Farlinger of Vic was the winner of the 50 hurdles as he hopped over the course in 6.13, an appreciable slash off the old record. Two seconds behind was Ron Baird of Meds while Bill Kelly, St. Mike's, and John Sobko, UC, finished third and fourth respectively.

St. Michael's Paul Forestell took top honors in the 440 which was also run last night. Paul chalked up a 54.6 for the event and was followed by Johnny Hryshko, UC, whose time was 54.75. George McMullen of St. Mike's finished in the show spot and John Dashwood, Trinity, was fourth.

Senior SPS blanked the Forestry A's yesterday 8-0 in an interfac ice duel played at Varsity Arena. The Blue and Gold pucksters will enter the semi-finals on the strength of this encounter in which they netted three in the first and five in the second period.

Steed, Short, Veenis, MacDonald, Schultz, McKay, Wiacek and Watson divided the Engineers' scoring total.

Junior Vic's major league cage quintet cinched the highspot in group 2 yesterday when they outclassed the second place Junior U.C. squad at Hart House by a comfortable 44-36 margin. The Vicmen have five wins and a tie to their credit while UC boasts four wins and two losses.

Torrance dropped in 11 points to lead the winners while Rodgers with nine and Ludwig with eight were runnerups. Rumble got six and Fenning five while Dobbie's three and Devereux's two rounded up the Vic scoring.

Gibson led the Red and White cagers with 11. Badner with eight, Kennedy with five and Barber, who got four, were the main UC scorers.

The Varsity Junior Bees edged the St. Mike's junior "B" entry last night at Varsity Arena by a slim 2-1 margin before a capacity crowd who came to honor Jack Punnett, prominent young Toronto athlete who was stricken last fall with multiple sclerosis.

The Wade-coached Bees had their hands full in one of the fastest, best-played games of the year. Fox tallied first for the winners in the only scoring play of the first period when he beat McLellan unassisted. The Mikemen countered in the succeeding frame when Rod Roy set up teammate Bob Sabourin in front of the Varsity net.

The Varsity punch line of Rafus, Conboy and Holmes was responsible for the contest-clinching goal which was netted in the final stanza by Raftis, the assist going to Conboy.

After the game 30 prizes with a total value of over $500 were scattered throughout the crowd via the draw method. Stu Kenney of CKEY was present to do the MC honors and Allan H. Lamport, city alderman, was on hand to draw the better part of the stubs for the lucky winners. A bevy of lovely ice skating queens flitted about the ice locating winners and presenting them with their prizes and the prize of a leather windbreaker was drawn by the manager of the Corner Boys hockey team.

done—in most cases to hide defects in the print—the photograph is transferred to another form of art.

Whatever leisure time he is able to find at home he devotes to tennis and is an excellent player. Mr. Karsh said that at one time he had to decide whether to make photography or tennis his occupation. "I think it turned out best that way," he smiled.

Shortly after returning to Ottawa, he will make a three-month trip to Europe where he hopes to realize his ambition to photograph the Pope. Among other distinguished people he intends to photograph on the trip are the King, again, and the Princess Elizabeth and her son. If he does arrange a sitting with the Pope, there remain only two men whose portraits he greatly desires to make. The composer Sibelius, and Stalin. The latter has been the object of many attempts, all unsuccessful. "Too many commissars," he said.

When asked for his opinion of the Hart House exhibition, Mr. Karsh said he found the standard very high. A little more imagination would help to make more interesting photographs, he added. Amateurs have much greater scope along these lines than professionals who have not much time to experiment.

HART HOUSE ELECTIONS
Thurs 3rd March

U.C. It's this way...

It's always easy to tell who's writing the weekly column. ... If it's amusin' — blame it on Hal. ... If it's about a W.U.A. meeting — blame it on Joyce.

We won't keep you guessing long this week. ... Ladies, we wish to announce that a W.U.A. meeting will be held six days from today (on Tuesday, March 1st, that is) in the Women's Union Theatre 'round about four p.m.

Nominations for next year's executive will be held—probably the last executive the W.U.A. will have—for with Amalgamation approved by men and women of the college (well, a few of them anyway)—a new society will likely come into being next year. But be thinking about whom you want for president, literary, athletic and social directors, treasurer, secretary, NFCUS representative and year presidents. And once you've thought about it, for heaven's sake be there to nominate her!

The committee of Paula Zumstein, Jane Hill, Garry Clarke, Don Evans and Bob Sutherland recommended to frame a constitution for an amalgamated society, must be approved at this meeting, so it can set to work on its all-important job.

Then there will be the presentation of W.U.A. awards, made to graduating women who have contributed a great deal to student life at our college. The awards this year are to go to Helen Ferguson, Mary Alice Burton, Ruth Boettger, Virginia Tory, Rae Evans, Marg McHardy and Opal Miller.

Robinette and Portia Debates are fast coming to an end. Some year year winners have been decided from among the 26 teams in the Robinette debates. Geller and Bloom are winners in first year; Sopha and Carter in second year. Evans and Clarke, Cohl and Fram still have to try for third year winners. Left in fourth-year tryouts are Noble and Dixon, Brody and Rosenthal.

As for the Portia Debates, year winners haven't yet been decided, but that's understandable with 30 teams entered in the competition. Nora Beacock, literary director, has been working overtime in finishing off the tryouts. Edith White and Ginny Tory have been faithful judges in the noon-hour debates.

Congratulations are in order for the U.C. Players' Guild for copping the championship in the western half of the Inter-Varsity Drama League. Their play, "Overlaid", by Robertson Davies, was directed by Don Davis—so hats off to Don, the entire cast and the others who work so hard to make the production a success, but never get seen.

Applications for editor and business manager of the UNDERGRAD are being received at the Lit office (western end of J.C.R., in case you still don't know where it is) up to March 1st. Both men and women are eligible for these positions which provide a great deal of experience and training for future careers.

Tid-bits: The regular Music Club record hour is, as usual, Friday at 4:30 in the Long Common Room in the Union. ... There'll be a Red Cross worker in the rotunda tomorrow from 11 to 1 to sign up anyone wishing to volunteer to give blood to the Red Cross Blood Bank. ... On March 12th there's an International Indoor Track Meet at the Armouries in Hamilton and for anyone wishing to participate, the University of Toronto will pay bus fare, meals and entry fee. The Intramural office in Hart House is the place to get further information.

Seems to be something else we must mention. ... Ah yes, nominations for positions on the Lit executive also take place six days from today—Tuesday, March 1st, that is. Oops! We're repeating ourselves. But we know nominating will be heavy. Can't blame the men for fighting for those positions ... look at the rewards ... a redhead, your picture in the rotunda, and so ad infinitum.

See you here next week.

Seconds Hoop Victors Juniors Bow To Rams

Barry Lowes' Varsity intermediate basketeers won a close checking, hard fought decision over the McMaster Rams in Hamilton last night by a 57-55 score while the Varsity juniors dropped a 58-44 decision to the McMaster seconds.

The intermediate fracas was a close contest all the way as the McMaster quintet overcame a 28-26 halftime score against them to sneak up and take over the lead temporarily from the Ints at the three-quarter mark in the game.

Luck was tops for the intermediates with a fine 20-point showing for his night's work. Art Anderson took second spot in the Blues' scoring parade with 13 points and Barney Maher hooped in nine markers for the Blues. McMullen was the best man on the floor for the Rams as he racked up a 16-point total and put on a nice display of ball handling.

The junior squad found the little Rams too much to handle and the foremost of their troubles was Fitzgibbons who sank 22 points for the Ram lambs.

Burnstien was the top contributor to the junior cause as he rolled up an 11-point total for the game. Dancey turned in nine points and Braithwaite and Denton netted eight apiece.

The Intermediates will face Central "Y" tonight as part of the Sports Nite celebration. They will be without the services of Henderson and Luck, who will jump to the seniors for tonight's contest.

A goal by Ferne Watson half a minute before the final gong gave PHE I a 3-2 win over the fighting PHE II's. This playoff game was fast and furious throughout and a spectator judging by the play would have found it hard to tell which team was the firsts.

Special orchids for sensational netminding go to Mary MacPherson, the seconds' goalie for allowing only three of the many hard, high shots to beat her. Watson lifted in two of these and Alice Jamieson, one.

June Bell and 'Muggs' Fox got the two points for the seconds as well as making the firsts' defense work hard.

Football Stars Turned Cagers At Sports Nite

Playing coach George Goodrow's Hamilton Tiger cagers will appear at Hart House in a Sports Nite hoop exhibition with the Varsity senior Blues. The Bengals boast a roster that is designed to quicken the pulse of both football and basketball fan alike. Big grid names like Frank Filchock, Joey Pal and Jake Gaudier, to mention a few, will be on hand to prove their versatility and pit their basketball talents against those of the Blues.

The first game will feature the Central "Y" senior squad and the Intermediate Blues. The Ints are fresh from their contest with McMaster last night and will find tough going with the top-flight "Y" quintet.

Bob Masterson's seniors are practically on the proverbial ropes due to the old injury bug which has hit them with unusual force. Bob has only six of his top ten performers ready to go tonight as Eddie Brennan, Willy Zeaton and Glen Pettinger will not be used for this game and Adam Smaller is still on the injured list. Luck and Henderson will get the call up from the seconds to face the Hamiltonians.

Football fans will be in a position to see what promises to be the outstanding combination in the Big Four next and by that we mean Frank Filchock and Jack Harper. Harper is last year's O.R.F.U. scoring champion and he will be aided and abetted on the hoop floor by such other names as George Festeryka, Doug Smith, Johnny Onjenck, Stan Wolkowski and Alfie Crooker.

Puck Blues Move To Queen's Today

Back from their two-game jaunt to Montreal, the hockey Blues hit the road again today as they move into Kingston for a game tonight with winless Queen's. After tonight's contest the Blueshirts don't skate out onto the ice in anger again until they wind up the schedule against McGill here on March 4.

In order to definitely assure themselves of second place in the Senior Intercollegiate standings Varsity needs to win one more game while McGill lose one. The Redmen are presently two points behind the Blues. Both teams have two more tussles left. McGill tackle the champion U. of Montreal Carabins and then Varsity while the Blues have their game tonight with the Gaels before ringing down the curtain with McGill. Should the Redmen drop their fourth game of the year to Montreal and the Blues win their fourth from Queen's, Ace Bailey's outfit can't be toppled out of second place.

Tonight's game will be the last of the season for Queen's and the Tricolor is still seeking its first win of the year. Although boasting some classy forwards led by Don Murray, their most valuable player last year and just about a cinch for the honor again this year, Queen's are woefully weak on defense.

Campus Survey Is Preparatory Step In Social Program

"The first thing that the 'Canadian Committee on Cultural Relations' tackled was the problem of making a complete survey of everything that is being done to eliminate tension, conflict and racial discrimination," Professor Hendry, its chairman, said in an interview yesterday.

A document has been prepared and will be reviewed at a meeting to be held shortly. This is just the preparatory step before the program committee examines the report of the survey and takes action on it.

Two Possible Actions

Professor Hendry said that two kinds of action are needed to combat racial intolerance — research and social action. He said a combination of both is needed. If one is done without the other, the whole project will fail.

"We have a tremendous opportunity to work through universities and schools," he said.

"The faculty and students have a very real obligation to work together—to work on the social climate of the college community. Education must be realistic—down to earth. The subject matter is too far removed from reality in schools; we must have a greater acquaintance with the real problem".

Spotty Effort

He said that "valiant steps" are being taken—here and there, but they are very spotty. "There doesn't seem to be anyone to pull all of our knowledge together.

"For the atomic bomb, we collect the best brains to co-ordinate and work together. Can we do the same in the social sciences? Do we need the urgency of war to get things co-ordinated and done?"

Speaking of legislation, Professor Hendry said, "We certainly do need it. We must create a floor below which no one is permitted to go in his poverty or his prejudice. But legislation must be accompanied by education".

Against Assimilation

He said that he does not believe in assimilation, but he does believe in elimination of segregation —because "segregation limits the free movement and communication of people".

"The blind are trying to lead the blind". He said that it is essential to make available more and better facilities for the development of more concrete, objective and co-ordinated systems of social sciences in order to make any real progress.

Varsity Debaters Win One, Lose One On Trip To USA

The Hart House debating team, of Al Noble, IV Poli. Sci., and Ed Eberle, III Poli. Sci., visited five United States universities last week, in a series of exhibition debates. The universities were Michigan, Wisconsin, Notre Dame, Illinois and Chicago. The topic for debate was: Resolved that the United Nations should be revised into a federal world government.

None of the debates were judged, said Eberle. This has been the usual practice in American debates, he said, and is continued for tournaments, but in other debates, it is being discontinued. At Michigan and Notre Dame, no vote was taken after the debates.

At Wisconsin and Illinois, the audience shift-of-opinion ballot was used. In this method, the audience's attitude to the question for debate is tested both before and after the debate. At Wisconsin the Toronto team was defeated; at Illinois, they were victorious.

At Chicago, the Hart House debaters participated in a panel debate—a more informal type of discussion which has been used in—

Dominion-Wide Survey Will Determine Costs Of College Education

Between two and three hundred students at the University of Toronto will be asked questions concerning the cost of their education during the next week. These questions are included in a survey being conducted by Elliott-Haynes Limited for the Life Insurance Association of Canada who are making a study of the cost of a college education.

The information obtained will be tabulated and grouped to enable insurance companies to set rates for people wanting to buy insurance to send their children to college.

"Terry"

Teresa Mulloy, IV St. Mike's, violin soloist with the University of Toronto Symphony will perform Friday and Sunday.

Solo Violin of Symphony Plans Teaching Career In Music And Languages

Two years as concert mistress and this year as violin soloist with the University of Toronto Symphony Orchestra is the record of Teresa Mulloy, IV Modern Languages, St. Michael's.

The dark-haired, blue-eyed Teresa, known as "Terry" to her friends plans a teaching career. "I want to play the violin, of course' she said, "and probably will teach French and German as well as music."

Coming from a family of five girls ("who all play the piano to varying degrees") Teresa emphasized that "No, darn it, there are no brothers!"

"I started taking lessons when I was seven. I studied at Loretto Abbey for four years and played in the Loretto String Orchestra." "Next," she said, "I began studying at the Conservatory and while at Lawrence Park C.I. I played with the Lawrence Symphony Orchestra. I got my ATCM two years ago but then stopped taking lessons until just before Christmas this year."

Will Play Mendelssohn

"I am playing the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto in E Minor" Teresa informed us. "Heifetz played it for his debut when he was six but look how many years it has taken me."

"Sometimes," continued Teresa, "I play with the Harvey Perrin Choir." "Mr. Perrin", she added, "used to lead the Lawrence Orchestra and now inspects music in secondary schools." Besides all this playing, practising and lectures

SAC Hears Request To Take Union Plan To Ontario Gov't.

Plans for the proposed Students' Memorial Union have now reached a point where further work is impossible until the project has some definite financial support, S.A.C. President Gordon Gwynne-Timothy told council members last night.

Go to Governors

Gwynne-Timothy requested Council authorization to obtain permission from President Smith to have an SAC group go before the Board of Governors and explain what has been done to date and ask permission to take the plans to the Ontario government.

Hope for Government Aid

Gwynne-Timothy explained it may be possible to gain provincial financial support for the project. "The next step will be to approach students on the campus and see what financial support we will be able to get from them," he said.

"Our trip to see the University of Wisconsin Student Union and the study we made of the set-up there has convinced us that a student union can be financed and maintained on a student levy basis," Gwynne-Timothy declared.

The SAC approved Gwynne-Timothy's request and directed him, SAC Chairman Phil Ashmore, Sec.-Treas. E. A. Macdonald, and Ruth Comfort, II O.T., to contact President Smith and the Board of Governors.

Presents Wisconsin Report

Gwynne-Timothy also presented for consideration the report drawn up by the group that visited the University of Wisconsin last week. "It has been written to serve as a skeleton plan for discussion in regard to specific problems and action, and is intended to be used as a guide by future SAC's," he explained.

The report deals with the Wisconsin student union on three levels: financing, activities and relation between the governing body of the union and the governing body of the students.

The most interesting part of the report deals with the many varied activities carried on at the Wisconsin Union. The union, which was originally conceived in 1919, was completed in 1939 when the theatre wing was built.

The Varsity Policy Discussed

During the evening's discussion the editorial policy of The Varsity with regard to recent opinions expressed by Controller Balfour was brought up. "If there is any reason for condemning The Varsity editorials it is because they give Controller Balfour fodder, publicity and votes," declared Doug Love.

Varsity Editor Mark Harrison pointed out to Council members that it was not necessary for the SAC to endorse The Varsity's editorial opinion. He explained that

Forum Optimistic, Hope Still High For Europeans

The future of Europe is bright and people on this side of the Atlantic can be optimistic. This was the opinion expressed by three graduate speakers at a discussion group in the Graduate Union on Tuesday night.

"The world of 1939 is dying but many aspects of it are just as well not perpetuated," stated John Hadwin, graduate in Economics. The re-orientation is toward economic recovery through regaining former markets and repaying the new world if only on the barter basis, he said. Mr. Hadwin saw the Marshall Plan as most important in its psychological effect. He pointed out that the devestated countries find an element of security in the fact that help is coming. Optimism is justified in view of the fact that England nearly balanced her account last year, and Italy has achieved so much stability that she is no longer in the headlines, he continued. "The Netherlands, Denmark and the Scandinavian countries were living better than England soon after the war, and their recovery has progressed since," he said.

Social Conditions Bad

Susan Cockrane, graduate of OCE, described the social conditions she saw in France and Italy last summer as very depressing. Miss Cockrane saw hope in the stabilizing effect of the Scandinavian countries and the fact there are still thinking people in Europe. "The French are still intellectually astute despite the blows they received during the war," she said.

Youth Hopeful

Audrey Tobias, graduate in Political Economy, found the people in Eastern Europe working harder than in the west and with more hope. "The people, emerging from an old feudalistic system are encouraged by what they've already accomplished through the new ideas of socialism," she said.

Miss Tobias noted the contrast of the discouragement in Italy and

Bell Contributions Subject Of Talk By Dr. M.J. Kelly

"Postwar Industrial Research" will be the subject of an address by Dr. M. J. Kelly to a joint meeting of the Royal Canadian Institute and the American Institute of Electrical Engineering in Convocation Hall on Saturday, Feb. 26th.

The application of new scientific principles by postwar industrial research and their relation to man's activities in peace and war will be explained. Stress will be put on co-operative programs carried out by expertly grouped teams of specialists, from the fields of science and engineering and the contributions of the Bell Telephone Laboratories will be used as illustrations.

Dr. Kelly joined the staff of the Bell Telephone Laboratories in 1925 and has occupied various positions from research physicist to his present post of executive vice-president. He is a member of many organizations, among them the Franklin Institute National Academy of Science, and the American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

The Book Shop

The New Look At Varsity

By TED ROSS

This is the first of a series of three architectural criticisms of the new building on the campus

The University of Toronto at last has a building of the contemporary school of design. The new bookshop, from the drawing boards of Rownthwaite, Cameron, Murray and Fairfield, an aspiring young firm, represents our first competent example of the modern approach to architecture. Observed by thousands of students every day—I hope, sympathetically — it will probably assist a large slice of the public in understanding this important and interesting branch of the applied arts, architecture.

Poor Choice of Site

The choice of a site was, of course, a most lamentable one, and one in which the architects had no influence. Presumably the book shop is to vanish with the opening of the new library, but "temporary" structures of stone and steel with copper flashing have had in the past an unfortunate talent for longevity. Sproat and Rolph agreed to the location of Hart House with the promise that the observatory would be torn down to provide an impressive open space before their building. Since 1914 that peculiar little renaissance tower has been renovated, repaired and restored with monotonous regularity, and since 1948 the congestion has been increased with the addition of the book shop.

Intellectual Appeal

It is an example of the geometric, rather than organic, approach to architecture; and has as a result, an intellectual rather than emotional appeal to the senses. The surfaces of the building are generally plain, with the eaves, window frames and watertable neatly defining its graceful proportions. It rests pleasantly on its site, overlooking the campus with the inviting terrace in front. Its character suggests just what it is, an efficient but friendly commercial establishment. The plan—disposition of rooms—fulfils its function much more directly than a traditional building could.

Space, the fundamental clay for the architect's modelling, is nicely if not excitingly handled. How much more dramatic it would have been if the ceiling of the public area had jumped up about four feet above the remainder, letting in the light through a line of clerestory windows above the counter, and clarifying the somewhat awkward way the two vestibules jut out of the main mass. However, the way each plane is painted a gay colour is very interesting. It's a pity that panel of boldly-textured board-and-batten on the southwest corner was painted a soft turquoise color. During the summer when it had a ground coat of white, the play of light and shade on it was delightful.

Fat Columns Preferred

The window divisions are well-proportioned but in my opinion they don't make much of the sleek curtain character of glass. I think the mullions should be lighter, the columns behind revealed, and the divisions equal. The columns themselves are almost childishly inept. I have heard one of the members of the firm say he liked fat columns—they look more substantial. To look substantial in the sense he means (as for masonry, relying for stability on compressive strength alone) they would have to be about two feet in diameter. A three-inch diameter column would have been adequate using steel, and how much more tenuous and graceful it would have been. As they are, the columns look like plumbing stacks.

Intriguing Colors

Interior details are nicely handled. There are some intriguing lighting fixtures in the receiving room but unfortunately the public

Our Stand

Tuesday's issue of a downtown newspaper carried a report that Controller David Balfour told city council The Varsity "was expressing Communist views".

The allegation is based, we think, on the fact that this newspaper has, from time to time, carried stories about campus meetings of the LPP club. Only last week a student meeting addressed by Tim Buck, national Communist leader, was given coverage in The Varsity. This, to Controller Balfour, implies that we are "expressing Communist views."

Any individual with a normal amount of common sense will realize that an honest newspaper does not "express views" in its news columns. An honest newspaper will, as far as it can, carry impartial, unprejudiced news stories which are concerned only with facts, not opinions of the reporter. This we have tried to do to the best of our ability.

Most students, we feel, will discount the accusation but there may be some who are confused. To them we owe an explanation.

The Varsity does not wish to be a medium for the dissemination of Communist propaganda. But the fact remains that any campus organization that is accredited by this university and by the law of the land—whether it be communist, conservative, or middle-of-the-road, deserves fair treatment in this newspaper. There may be times when our coverage of campus events may be inadequate, but, depending upon space requirements, we have attempted to do the best we can. And this coverage must—and does—include meetings of the LPP club.

This newspaper is financed by every student who pays fees to the Students' Administrative Council and students here represent every type of creed, race, colour, or political conviction. Because of this, it is our responsibility to neglect no single group.

We have no sympathy with Communism. For that matter, we haven't too much sympathy with some other organizations whose activities are reported in The Varsity. But we would be hypocrites if we allowed personal prejudice to interfere with an honest presentation of news on this campus.

The Varsity, over a period of many years, has built up a reputation for honesty and fairness. And we have no intention of destroying that reputation by retreating in the face of wild accusations and thoughtless charges.

Orchids To Orgy

"We were in a class all our own," Mr. Don Orgy proudly announced.

On receiving special commendation for his daring shots last year from Hart House Tower, Orgy replied that experience had taught him what students liked to see.

"In that tower sequence," he added, "the presentation was of special importance. Having seen the view to the north on Monday, to the west on Tuesday, to the east on Wednesday, the students naturally looked forward to a southern view the next day. I then raised campus excitement to fever pitch by holding it back until Monday."

Aims High

Orgy declared that, in his view, good photography consisted in getting as high above the ground as possible, but that this year he had decided to bring art down to the Pass Course level. He had already detailed Staff Photographer Bopschley on another drilling sequence, this time at ground level. This was to be a sequence of five shots—the first of which had already been enthusiastically received—the "Beehive?" on (Eng. or Hist. Option) Philosophers' Walk. (Mr. Orgy declined to divulge from what point the fifth shot was to be taken—he smiled mysteriously.)

Cents of Humor

Staff Photographer Henry G. Waistcoat, who was present during the Cat's interview, told of some of the "little general's" practical jokes. On several occasions he had put nebulous grey blurs 4" by 4½" on the Farcity front page and given them titles, such as, "Waldon Takes Winning Pass", or, "Maestro." The jokes were invariably completely successful, for none of the students ever realized the hoax. Orgy was helpless with laughter. He had also dressed up Jason (in the Hart House quad) with scarf, ear-muffs and a cigarette, and reported humorously below it, "mysteriously bundled for harsh weather, the (bronze) statue is reported to have mumbled through half-frozen lips: "You can't take Toronto weather for granite."

Waistcoat added that Future Editor H. K. Razberry was going to follow the picture up with an interview, "Jason Jars Junior Jerk."

Proud Winner

Orgy asked us if we would like to see the cup which Farcity had won. He immediately produced it from his camera case. What an ideal place to carry it, we said. Yes, he replied, but it meant carrying his lunch under his arm for a few days.

He concluded the interview saying that he would always try to keep Farcity photos on the level of art not of popular appeal. Any photographer can obtain that.

"There is a lot of hard work in being a photo editor—although you do meet a lot of interesting people. I am still hoping to meet that 'Armoury' character."

Farcity may well be proud.

Broken Limbs, Torn Muscles, Repaired By Physical Therapist's Deft Hands

By NAN McKENZIE

Like a wandering troubador, travel a continent taking your means of livelihood along with you. There's a course at Toronto that prepares you for such a life if you have the inclination.

It does sound like a fairy tale and even if you're a freshman, you have had five months to discover here at the University that all fairy tales have a hopelessly mundane and logical explanation. The existence in North America of a larger demand for physical therapists than the universities are now supplying has created this state of affairs (for the p.t.'s). In the States they are crying for Canadian "physios" and if you like to travel it would be possible to go from Seattle to San Francisco, spending time now at one hospital or sanitorium, now at another.

People You Meet

The people you meet in need of physical therapy are just as interesting, just as much a cross-section of life as you would find in any medical or convalescent institution. Those with back deformities due to neurological disease or accident, those with helpless limbs crippled by polio or muscles made effete by cerebral palsy—you get all types, for sickness strikes everywhere.

Cure Broken Limbs

These girls are preparing for a career devoted to the humans whose physical activity has been impaired through accident, birth or disease. Shrivelled limbs are massaged by careful fingers to teach forgotten movements to inactive muscles. Little children are lowered securely into the soothing medium of warm water where stiffened muscles can be relaxed and painstakingly coaxed into action. Young war veterans with legs that will never move again of their own accord because of severed spinal nerve connections, learn to use their other assets and develop powerful shoulder and back muscles under instructions from a cheerful but firm voice. "You try to do this and I'll help you," they are told and after patient months those same shoulder and back muscles are being used to swing those legs along.

Exercises Important

The 60 students of physical therapy pass much of their three years in practical work at sanitoriums and hospitals. Electrotherapy and remedial exercises are things they learn as the most important aspects of their course. In three years they learn as much of the muscles of the human body as the medics do in their six years. To restore the rotary movements to the thumb of a paralyzed hand, a physical therapist must know where every muscle is, where it comes from and where it goes.

Although the students take enough arts subjects to get a B.A. on finishing their course, the course of physical therapy is a diploma course. However, they participate in every university function in an effort to be on the same standing as undergraduates of degree courses. Some day they hope to be given degrees instead of diplomas for although the training of a "degree course" would equip them no better for their work than a diploma course, the letters behind their name does give them better standing in the eyes of a degree-minded world.

Large Athletic Enrolment

There is practically no university activity that the p.t.'s do not engage in. They have two girls' teams entered in every athletic event where most of the colleges with much larger feminine enrolment than the small therapist course, enter one team at the most. They won the 1948 interfaculty basketball with both teams in the finals.

Recovery Slow

The "Physios" are told in their first introduction to the course that

Candidates For Trophy End Robinette Debates With Finals Next Week

Year champions in the Robinette Debates have been decided and with the semi-finals taking place today and tomorrow, finalists will emerge to try for the Robinette Trophy next week. This final debate will probably be held Wednesday.

Winners in first year were Jack Geller and Bert Bloom and in second year, Harold Carter and Elmer Sopha. Wally Fram and Murray Cohl have been judged the best debaters among the third year entries while Al Noble and Alec Dixon are fourth year champions.

There were 26 teams entered in the competition.

Blood Transfusion Service Desires University Donors

Functions that are part of student activity during Brotherhood Week is the drive put on by the Red Cross to sign up blood donors. The method has been that the four Arts Colleges have set aside certain days in which the Red Cross representative visits the respective college. She will give information concerning all aspects of the new Red Cross Blood Donor Drive and will sign volunteers to donate blood. This does not mean that donations are taken at once but simply that the student will be willing to be called at a future date.

Provide Worker

The Blood Transfusion Service of the Red Cross Society has agreed to send a volunteer Red Cross worker and suitable advertisements to any other college group, faculty or organization on the campus if it so desires, at any convenient time throughout this National Brotherhood Week, to register the students who wish to enrol as blood donors. The Red Cross has pointed out that in order to supply whole blood and plasma free of charge to any hospital patient requiring a transfusion it will be necessary to obtain 3,500 donors a month in Toronto. This will require an enrolment of between 20,000 and 30,000 donors who will give their blood twice a year.

Two Colleges Today

University College and Victoria College will be having their day for enrolment today. University College will have the time from 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. today. The Rotunda in University College will be the place for the University College students to sign up for donations. Victoria College has the hours between 10:30 and 1:30 at Victoria College.

Socialism Ignores Demands of Public Asserts Blackwell

All the gains made in recent years toward a high degree of political and economic democracy in Canada would come to an end if a socialist government were to come into power, declared Attorney-General of Ontario, Leslie Blackwell, at an open meeting of the Progressive Conservative Club yesterday.

Made Great Strides

"We have developed a high degree of political democracy and have made great strides toward economic democracy in the government of Ontario," Mr. Blackwell said. "It is better to let the present system stand, and let the evolutionary process work, than to centralize government under the bureaucrats."

Blackwell said the democratic institutions in which we live are subject to a variety of interests and points of view. "It is a struggle between conservatism and socialism," he stated. "Resolving that to Ontario, the present position seems to be that there are two parties representing conservatism—the Progressive Conservatives and the Liberals."

"On the other side there are two parties representing socialism," Blackwell continued. "These are the party calling itself the Labor Progressive Party, but which openly admits it is the Ontario branch of the Communist party, and the C.C.F."

Electorate Ultimate Judge

Whether Canada retains the conservative viewpoint or accepts the precepts of socialism, depends on which system the people, who vote, feel will provide the greatest benefits, the minister added.

Contrasting the systems under conservatism and what it would be under the socialists, Blackwell asserted the present enterprise is the result of individuals and groups of individuals banding together for the purpose of giving the public a product or service. "The public desire is the absolute test of enterprise," he said.

Public Wants Disregarded

"If these services are nationalized, this process of production based on public demand would be entirely reversed," Blackwell declared. "Then the whole scheme would be planned and executed by the government from the ivory tower of Ottawa."

"Such a scheme under a socialist government would require plans," he said. "Plans for what is to be produced and in what numbers. Instead of creating a demand for a product, the people would be told what they could have."

Blackwell stated a socialist government in Canada could not operate for long because the electorate would soon discover their wants were being denied. "If a community is delivered over to these people who are conceited enough to believe they can plan and run our affairs, the balance would rapidly right itself," Blackwell stated.

Carleton College Formulates Plans For Socred Club

Ottawa, Feb. 20—(CUP) — Social Credit Leader Solon Low recently announced that he would be going to Carleton College to personally organize for his party among the student body.

Mr. Low said he knew there were Social Crediters among the student body, and as leader, he would see to it that they formally organized themselves into a club.

At the same time Professor Frank MacKinnon of Carleton's Political Science Department said it was very likely Mr. Low would be invited to present the Social Credit viewpoint before the student body in the near future.

Carleton's next Model Parliament will be held in March and by that time Mr. Low expects to have Social Crediters of the college organized into a club so they will be able to invite him to debate.

Mr. Low and Professor MacKinnon got together last night in "a friendly exchange of views" reported Mr. Low, "and I believe that out of the public interest which this mild controversy has created, only good will come."

"There are some 1,600 students here at Carleton," he said, "and among them there is only one Labor Progressive."

Merits Of Advertising Debate Topic Tonight

An inter-Varsity debate between Laval and the University of Toronto will be held in the Junior Common Room of University College tonight at 8:00 p.m. The motion before the house will be "Resolved that Advertising is Detrimental to Society".

This will be a home-and-home debate, with two students from Toronto going to Laval University and two from Laval coming to Toronto.

Alex McRae and Sue Decker, III St. Mike's, will support the motion in the debate here tonight. Roy and Martha LeFambois of Laval will take the negative.

The Toronto team debating at Laval will be T. Nichtawiz, II St. Mike's, and France Gagnon of Loretto College.

Satire On Girls' Residence Last Varsity Story Theme

"A satire on a university woman's residence is the theme of the year's last "Varsity Story" which will be heard over CBC at 9 a.m., tonight. "It portrays the venom that all women possess" said Producer Ross Maclean.

The author, Mel Breen, Grad. Studies, created this bitter work, ("On With the New") on the opposite sex for an all-female cast which will star Phyllis Walter, IV Vic, Bea Goldberg, UC, Sheila Craig, UC, Joyce Bochnek, UC, and Sheila Higgins, IV Trin.

Maidie, Jean and Rhoda are three eager residence females who vie for the hand of Bill Goodrige, a B.M.O.C. (Big Man on Campus). A comic character in the conversation is Orvie who seems the short diminutive type although he is never heard.

Maidie complains that "It bothers you going out with him because you can't keep your eye on him—he's always under your chin."

Action throughout revolves around the Hart House Spring Prom and the three girls engage in intramural warfare for the hand of this desirable man.

SAC At A Glance

At its meeting last night, the Students' Aministrative Council:

Heard Kenneth Bradford, Director of the University Placement Service, ask the Council for help in publicizing the facilities of the Placement Service.

Reversed its previous decision and authorized an expenditure of $100 for an All-Varsity Revue cast party.

Discussed the controversy between Con. Balfour and The Varsity but took no decision.

Heard SAC President Gordon Gwynne-Timothy report on the recent trip to the Student Union at the University of Wisconsin.

Art ∞ Music ∞ Drama

Claudio Arrau

Mr. Arrau is certainly one of the most capable pianists before the public today. He has unlimited facility, really poetical taste, virtuosic fire, and the stability and projectability required of an artist who would play in an auditorium the size of Massey Hall.

The most satisfying items of his concert Monday night were the Schumann "Viennese Carnival Jest", the Ravel "Alborada del Grazioso", and two Debussy Etudes. The finale of the Schumann sounded, in fact, as completely thrilling as any piano piece could in a hall so unsuited to solo pianism as Massey Hall.

If the Beethoven Sonata (Opus III) was disappointing, the fault was certainly not Mr. Arrau's. One cannot blame him, nor any pianist capable of the task, for wanting to play so transcendent a masterpiece. And one must admit that the first of the two movements could hardly have had a more dramatic treatment than he gave it. Nor can one blame him—quite the contrary—for realizing that there needed some compromise in the presentation of the second movement to make concert music out of a piece so essentially intimate and unworldly in build. Played at the level of high serenity implied in the score, the movement would have lost meaning and shape after Row D. Played, as it was Monday night, with exaggerated rhythm and block tone, it was long and occasionally colorful, but evidently no more distinguished musically than any Viennese trifle of the period. How much happier for performer and audience if we could have filed into the green-room twenty at a time for the Sonata, and then proceeded to the hall for the rest of the program.

B Minor Mass

This is the last time, for this year, that this department has the opportunity of reporting on the work of the Mendelssohn Choir. The occasion calls for an expression of a very strong feeling of gratitude to this organization and its conductor, Sir Ernest MacMillan, who—in a single season—are giving us Walton's Belshazzar, the St. Matthew Passion, the Messiah and the B minor Mass. There is one particular point that struck this listener as a highly convincing indication of the vitality that keeps tradition from being a burden, if quantity and quality of performances were not sufficient proof: it was the fact that most of the soloists of Tuesday night's performance belonged to the new generation of singers in this city. Without exception, they justified the choice and contributed a very large share to the success of the great enterprise.

The Mass is designed in such vast proportions—and far less accessible than, say, the Passion—that any degree of familiarity with the work could only come from frequent hearings. It is to be hoped that the seven lean years since its last local performance will be followed by an indefinite number of annual repetitions. One must pray that the number of empty seats—not considerable, but even one would seem too many on this occasion—will not prevent this.

Of choir and orchestra it can be reported that their achievement grew as the work progressed. If there was some groping and lack of concentration in parts of the first half, it was completely overshadowed by the unquestionable precision, balance and, I daresay, increasing power exerted by the music over the performers in the second.

References to particularly successful moments would only weaken what was the most valuable of all the impressions, that of a spacious whole gradually taking shape. Only the taste and reliability that increasingly characterized the progress of the performance could have produced this effect and the odd instrumental slip and similar trifles simply ceased to matter.

With the soloists, too, one is tempted to steer clear of specific references for fear of saying less than that they simply brought the right equipment to do a gigantic job. I had come prepared for the pure intensity of Lois Marshall's soprano voice and for the ever-absorbing individual quality which characterizes that of Mary Morrison; every note they sang served to confirm my previous impressions and increase my enthusiasm. However, an inexplicable trick of fate had prevented me from hearing Margaret Stillwell, contralto, and I count as a loss every occasion I missed hearing this splendid singer whose control, strength and poise were a source of great rejoicing. The type of tenor voice owned by Pierre Boutet is a dangerous gift, susceptible to harm by the slightest failing in taste. It is good to know that he is one of the few who know how to handle it to the greatest advantage. Baritone Donald Brown's contribution was clear, flexible and very pleasing. Eric Tredwell, basso, seemed a little out of his range in the lower parts of his aria.

doesn't see them. Mouldings, those relics of the bad old days, haven't disappeared entirely. I rather like the gay color scheme even if it does look a little startling on our staid campus. I do think that the stucco should have been painted or tinted some harmonizing color, perhaps dove-grey or sort of a honey color . . . it looks vaguely unfinished as it is. And one last thought . . . I think the canopy over the big windows should project farther. It is indecisive.

In conclusion, here we have a competent and interesting example of the geometric approach to contemporary architecture, but I have a sneaky feeling that the architects felt, 'let's do as they're doing at Harvard, but, heavens-to-Betsy, let's not be too radical." In this lack of conviction, they reveal themselves as authentic Canadian artists.

Referring to Balfour's demand that professors and students of the university should be investigated "to assure they are being taught the democratic way of life," Jocelyn affirmed that the function of a university was to examine every point of view. "Students should not have to (apologize) for what they think, say or do," Jocelyn declared.

There's a new movement on foot in England called the International Children's Union, whose avowed purpose is to make this world a better place for children. 'Children should have equal rights with their parents', is the flaming motto which, we suppose is perfectly justified but rather disconcerting for some parents. The leader and organizer, an English headmaster by the name of Copping, is firmly convinced that children are being sadly disregarded and thought of simply as objects of discipline when out of line. On a program based squarely upon the abolishment of caning, strapping, knuckle rapping and off-hand slapping, he is gathering enthusiastic support from the minor leagues. Advocating as well, relaxed drinking and smoking regulations for children, we can just picture the chaos at one of his meetings. With a stogie in one hand and a highball in the other, his audiences should be something to see. We vividly remember our experiments along this line when we were about ten. We're prepared to state that the securing of such privileges is definitely not worth the bother.

A physio must pass on her confidence to him for often he has none himself. The way to recovery is a slow one and particularly patience-demanding of the operator as her patient again and again loses confidence with failures to succeed in obtaining the results toward which the exercises are directed. Book Review

A Play Of St. George

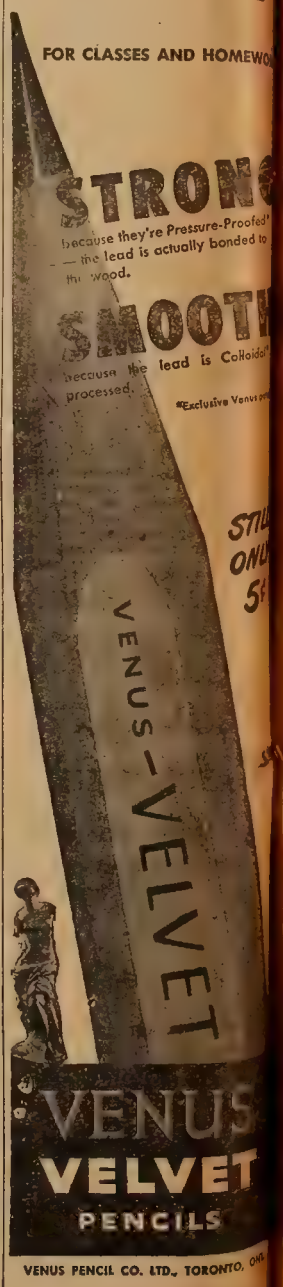
A Play of St. George (Macmillan's: $2.25) by John Masefield, deals with the challenge of Christianity in the first century. The Dragon is a handsome pirate who captures the kingdom of Lydda and demands the dead king's daughter. St. George, a Roman messenger, challenges him and defeats him in a duel, though the pirate offered him a 50-50 cut on future booty if he joined him. For his victory, St. George is highly honoured by the Romans, but is required to acknowledge Caesar as God. He refuses and is led away to be killed.

Throughout the play, Masefield employs choruses and poetry a great deal—sometimes effectively. But on the whole, the poetry is not powerful to carry conviction; it hasn't even an echo of Milton's religious grandeur. The plain recitation of scripture or church service is inevitably superior to a poetic paraphrase. For my own part, I shall always prefer the rather sentimental, romantic lyrics of Masefield.

John Grube.

There Is No Armour

The structure of There Is No Armour (Collins: $3.50), a long English novel by Mr. Howard Spring, is on the whole, ineffective, for its method is faulty. The dialogue is well done in itself but does not particularly characterize individuals, and since the action is inclined to be melodramatic, characterization is achieved largely through the narrator's attitude towards the people in his life. The narrator, Ted Pentecost, is, therefore, central, and since he is a rather uninteresting person — a poor youth who easily grows into a portrait artist, and an R.A. at that—his life provides a suitable container for the story and the theme: the relation of life in England during the last 50 years and the development of these lines by James Shirley: "There is no armour against Fate/Death lays his icy hands on Kings." Although there are no kings in the novel, 25 people die in the course of the story, and one dog. From the desultory treatment of the theme I assume Mr. Spring means by "Death", fate and love, usually combined as a fatal passion, inevitably creating the eternal triangle, which at times acquires a fourth side. Although there are more things to be said for the novel, my space is limited, and in conclusion I shall therefore balance the scales without disclosing the weights I use: There Is No Armour is a fair piece of work. It seems the sort of thing to read after exams.



Douglas Chapman.

Coeds Do The Asking At Manitoba To Try To Hypo Cage Support

Winnipeg—(CUP)—Student apathy had hurt attendance at University of Manitoba Bisons' cage games with American colleges, and Saturday, the Woman's Association did something about it. "Each girl in the university is to ask a boy and pay his way" was the WA directive.

Features of the "Basket Balle" night beside the Bisons-Valley City game, were a women's basketball game and dancing to the university jazz band. "The Manitoban", U. of Man. newssheet raised a questioning eyebrow at the idea, but hastily backed the proposal as manna in a non-Leap Year desert.

Details concerning this latest Sadie Hawkins approach were not forthcoming at press time.

Four Teams Vie For Trophy

The Hart House basketball floor will see action this week-end with the women taking over for part of the time in the Intercollegiate Women's Basketball meet.

This meet will decide the possessor for the coming year of the Bronze Baby and the battle should be keen. Reports of the Toronto-Western game played Thursday, Feb. 17, were at least in agreement on the fact that the Western team was fast and strong. Varsity downed them with a slight margin by the score of 42-37 and will meet them on Saturday afternoon.

Queen's will be aiming to retain the Bronze Baby when they meet Varsity in the Saturday morning game at OCE. This game should be a crucial battle for both teams as they will both have played one game each the night before. Toronto is scheduled to meet McGill at 8.30 with Queen's meeting Western an hour before. The first round of games to be played on the Friday night at Hart House will pit the two as yet unplayed teams against Toronto and Western. Much will also be decided at these two meets in the round robin contest of the Intercollegiate Basketball week-end.

'Mural All-Stars Challenge Blues

The Varsity Intercollegiate water-polo team will meet an All-Varsity aggregation representing all faculties immediately following the intercollegiate swim meet between McGill, Queen's and Varsity at an Athletic Night next Saturday.

The All-Varsity squad, reportedly the stronger, will be predominantly UC and SPS, with representatives from Vic, SMC, Trinity, and Meds.

Bill Tilson and Warren Clayson will referee.

HART HOUSE ELECTIONS

Hockey

Meds sailed into the semi-finals when they beat Physio at noon yesterday by a score of 3-1. A goal by Kay Batanoff of Meds in the first period started the winning fight.

Meds' superior passing made their winning almost inevitable and two more goals by Irene Haine assisted by Joan Fletcher clinched the game.

In the first two periods Meds had the edge, but in the last period Physio put up a powerful fight and might have copped three goals if it had not been for the excellence of the Meds goalie Eleanor Settlerington. However Lil Batanoff managed to slip the puck past to give Physio their point.

Estelle Heakes and Sally Sarles played a good game for Meds, while Jeanne Cossar and Barb Foreman deserve credit for their effort for Physio.

On Friday, Meds enter the semi-finals against Vic I, and the winner of that game plays PHE I next week for the intramural championship.

Volleyball

PHE I vanquished the School of Nursing squad by a decisive 67-18 last night at Lillian Massey. This game was the equivalent of a quarter final and means that PHE I will play again on Friday.

The Fizz Ed score was boosted by the spiking of Bev Lowry and Thelma Henderson. The game was not at all exciting and not up to the standard one would expect in a playoff.

UC I took Meds 40-30 in the second game of the evening. Led by the spiking of Mary Gooderall and Paula Zumstein and the all round play of Betty Bates, the UC'ers had a definite advantage throughout and kept in the lead. When the Meds team threatened to tie it up, the College girls would get down to business and surge ahead again.

This win puts UC I into the semi-finals where they will meet Physio next Tuesday.

ICE BLUES DROP QUEEN'S 12-4

Seconds Seek Title With Win Over OAC

Tonight at 7 o'clock the Varsity Intermediate hockey club meet the Aggies in a do-or-die attempt to retain the league championship for the fourth successive season. It's the last game of the schedule and a win would clinch it all for the Blues. The standings are very confused with Toronto, McMaster and OAC all conceivably able to wind up on top.

The Varsitees beat OAC the last time the teams met in Guelph by a 6-4 score in a thriller that wasn't decided until the last minute of play. The game tonight should be the best of the season from a spectator's standpoint. If OAC should happen to win it would boost them into first place with seven points, leaving Varsity with the six points that they have now. McMaster also have five points at the present time and a victory for them over Western next Tuesday would put them in a first place tie with OAC if the latter team should win tonight.

But to confuse matters further—oh, why go on? You can see the crucialness of the situation. The team has been luckily free from injuries all year in spite of the smashing brand of hockey that they adhere to so voraciously. But don't get the impression that the team is composed of a wild bunch of meat-hungry bullies. Oh, heavens no! There are smoothies on the club too, such expert stick handlers as Dinty Moore, speed king of the team, and reliable Griff Pearson.

Friends of "once jovial" Jack are urged to come out in droves so that the coach will not remain in his present harried state of mind. Coach Life was, however, considerably cheered by the team's victory over McMaster last Friday. Remember, 7 p.m. is game time.

Injury Jinx Sidelines Glen

Glen Pettinger, starry forward on the basketball Blues has an ankle injury that is more serious than was at first surmised.

He went to the hospital Tuesday and they diagnosed his injury as a torn tendon and encased his ankle in a walking cast that will have to remain on for ten weeks. Adam Smalley, another Blue sustained a similar injury in the fall.

The injury was incurred in London last Friday night when the Blues met the championship team from some local institution. Glen was jumping for a high ball and when he came down he landed heavily on his right ankle.

At first it was thought that he had a mere strain and that he would play again this year but unfortunately this is not the case. Well, Glen, maybe it will be easier now to settle down in preparation for those exams that are so rapidly approaching.

Varsity Racks Up High Score Of Yr. Spence Hat-Tricks

By BILL ROSS

Kingston, Feb. 23 —(Staff)—The well-known winless Gaels continued their winless ways here tonight when they suffered a terrific drubbing by the Varsity Blues. The final score came out 12-4. Cool Paul Hutzulak still had the same moxie that won him such acclaim from the Montreal players last Saturday. This score was the highest of the entire year.

Practically everyone got into the scoring act in some manner or another with the first line of Turcott, Henry and Spence getting 14 scoring points. Bill Spence got three goals, two of them in the first period with both his linemates getting assists. Turcott and Fox also picked up a goal each to end the period at 4-0.

The Tricolor cut Hutzulak's hopes of a shut-out at 1:40 of the second period when Hamilton scored unassisted. His goal came off a very difficult angle shot that looked as if it didn't have a hope of going in. Encouraged by his team-mate's effort, Murray got the next Queen's goal assisted by Hamilton.

Spence got his third goal, entitling him to one Sammy Taft model with assists going again to Henry and Turcott. Hews, of Queen's got the next goal from Murray and Mercier. Rugged Bob LaRose got the only penalty of a very clean game in this period.

In the third period went hog-wild rapping in five goals. One of the nicest was hard-working Bob Henry's at 5:51 when he skated in from the blue line and beat goalie Urie cleanly.

Line-ups:—
Varsity: Goal, Hutzulak; defense, Cooper, Eccestone; centre, Turcott; wings, Henry, Spence; alts., Hayes, McDougald, Larose, Boyd, Frey, Howson, Fox, Ferguson, Prince.
Queen's: Goal, Urie; defense, Flannigan, Johnstone; centre, Murray; wings, Hews, Mercier; alts., Wagar, Scafe, Potts, Kemp, McKelvey, B. Hamilton, Batachio, Strehliski, Roberton.

Scoring Summary

First Period

1—Varsity, Spence (Henry, Turcott)	1	25
2—Varsity, Fox (LaRose)	3	50

Rugby Dies But Stukus May Revive

Edmonton, Feb. 21 —(CUP)—Football is dead, at least temporarily, on the University of Alberta campus. The University Athletic Board decided at a recent meeting to drop football from the roster of U of A activities for at least a year.

Reasons given were lack of competition and financial impracticability. The only available team is Saskatchewan University, for two home games. "This does not make for a very good season," said a representative. The financial problem: "Minimum of between $2,000 and $3,000 gate receipts must be obtained to cover expenses, and two games a year would involve too great a financial risk."

"We expect that some players will come from the USA, some from eastern Canada, and some from the west," says Stuke.

BLUES LAMBASTE TIGERS

Centrals Shade Intermediates By 41-40 Count

By BRUCE MacDONALD

Showing a shade more accuracy in the shooting department than the Intermediates, the Central Y basketball squad eked out a 41-40 win in the first attraction of the Sports Night at Hart House last night.

The Blues started things off at a fast clip, and began to pile up the points before Central Y could get organized. The Varsity hoopsters were in the lead 16-8 at the end of the first quarter. The Y team tightened up their defence in the second stanza, but the Intermediates, sparked by Barney Maher and Bill Henderson, managed to retain the lead, and were on top 24-16 at half-time.

Long-range sniping by Central Y began to have its effect in the last half. The score was evened by the end of the third quarter, and things were nip and tuck right from there until the final whistle.

With only a minute of play remaining, Central Y held a 41-40 lead. Ted Luck of Varsity was awarded two separate free throws in the dying seconds of play, but failed to sink either of them for the score-tying point.

Watson and Bacon led the Y scoring with 9 points each, while Maher was high man for the Blues with 9 points.

Central Y—Scott 6, Carrick 4, Wallace 6, Marshall 6, Foulton, Bacon 9, Watson 9, Sokol 2—Total, 41.
Varsity—Stevenson 8, Henderson 8, Cole 5, Luck 4, Maher 9, MacKenzie, Lowes, Andrews 3, Wigle 3.—Total, 40.

Doug Tyndall and his running mates on the senior Blues didn't have much trouble with the Hamilton Tiger basketball squad last night in Hart House when they came up with a 69-22 decision. Tyndall threw in 16 points.

Queen's Here For 'A' Nite

Basketball this Saturday night will consist of a minor battle between Institutional Management and St. Mike's, purely for exhibition. This can be considered your cocktail game before the major tilt between Queen's and Varsity, which in turn is supplemented by the Varsity seconds pacing the floor with O.A.C.

In the pool, a water polo game between Varsity seniors and the All-Varsity team, is one feature. As the major splash we have a senior Intercollegiate Swim Meet with McGill, Queen's, and Toronto competing. For the first time, Hart House Pool should be boiling with such hot competition.

Stick around—we're not through yet! Volleyball will be an open game to all spectators, as will the games room, plus piano playing in the lounge. Also . . . the World-Canadian-Ontario Badminton Champions we are happy to see will further enhance the evening by playing for us. Looks pretty good, doesn't it? Can anybody get me a ticket?

Mountaineers Mauled; Blues Hit Year's High

By BRIAN LAND

Varsity Seniors romped to a 69-22 win over the Hamilton Tigers in what was laughably billed as a basketball game last night in Hart House Gym. The Blues completely outclassed the Mountain Men in every department, tossing the leather around with gay abandon, until they were in a scoring position. And to cap it off the Toronto boys sank a large percentage of their shots to roll up their largest score of the year.

Better At Football

Ted Luck, playing his second game of the night, dropped in 20 points and Doug Tyndall had 16 to show the way for Varsity. Flingin' Frankie Filchock proved he can toss a basketball as hard as a football and managed to throw in 6 points for the Tigers, but his muscular cohorts look more at home on the gridiron.

Toronto snatched an early lead and ended the half with the score 33-10 in their favour. Never worried at any time, the Blues had ample time to work the ball into position and scored most of their points on set shots as the baffled Tigers were helpless to do anything about it.

Luck's Big Night

Ted Luck, who was the hard luck boy in the Intermediate game, could do no wrong in the nightcap, sinking his shots with a "nothing to it" shrug of the shoulders. And the way the Blues played there wasn't much to it. The Tigers were out-jumped and out-manoeuvred all the way.

Despite the fact that their two top scorers, Glen Pettinger and Eddie Brennan, were sidelined with injuries, the Blues had little trouble in solving the Tigers' zone defense. Big Doug Tyndall was prominent in snatching rebounds which the alert Blue ballhawks converted into baskets with ease.

The exhibition win was the first since dropping McGill 52-26 in Montreal nearly two weeks ago. If shooting accuracy against Queen's here Saturday night is on a par with the Tiger game, then the Gaels might just as well stay home.

Line-ups:

HAMILTON — Gaudaur (2); Harper (4); Crooker (2); Pal (2); Wolkowski (4); Festeryga; Smith; Hickey (2); Filchock (6). Total, 22.

VARSITY—Stockman (4); Tyndall (16); Volpe (8); Gray (9); LaChance (5); Henderson; McManus (7); Luck (20). Total, 69.

Officials—Bill Zener and Ron McComb.

Junior Vic handed SPS IV their first loss of the season in a quarter-final hockey playoff yesterday at Varsity Arena. The 5-3 triumph for the Scarlet and Gold crew sent them into the semi-finals today with Senior Skule. Johnny Rhame led the Vic marksmen with two goals while Fred Ladly, Bob Dickson and Lorne Lodge added singletons. Diebel, Vann and White tallied for the Engineers.

In the basketball world Senior Vic provided the surprise of the day by downing Senior School 41-29 for their first win of the season after five straight losses. Vic led 19-13 at half-time and outscored their opponents 22-16 in the last session. Rybak led the Vic hoopsters with 14 points and Andrassey and Munro followed with nine and eight points respectively. Casey Latinovitch sparked the Skule team with nine points while McClenahan added eight.

Vic V ended a successful schedule yesterday with a 27-14 victory over Institutional Management. Colbert led Vic to their sixth straight win with 10 points, while Coles and Ostrum added eight and five points respectively. Montizambert's eight points was best for the losers.

IV Electrical staged a 15-point second half rally to eke out a 19-17 win over Vic VIII. High man for the victors was Durand with nine points, while Buchanan and Holmes each potted four. Mel Baker's seven points topped the Vic shooters.

In another minor league tilt, Pre-Med 1A withstood a last-minute drive by St. Mike's K for a 29-28 decision. McKee dropped in 10 points through the baskets to help the Medsmen's cause, and Leon of the double blue squad also notched an even dozen.

In a water polo clash, Wycliffe squeezed out a 2-1 win over UC's league-leading UC fourths. Despite the loss, their first of the season, the Red and White crew are in the playoffs with Vic and their opponents. Hesketh scored Wycliffe's two goals while Yamanaka saved UC from a shutout.

Laval Guests Win Debate By 18-8 Vote

Defeated last night by a vote of 18 to 8, the motion "Resolved that advertising is detrimental to society" was hotly debated by Laval and U of T students in the J.C.R.

Negative speakers Marthe LeFramboise and Jacques Roy of Laval University successfully maintained that though modern advertising might be subject to certain abuses in practice its principles were sound and justifiable.

"Advertising is, in itself, a moral," declared Mlle. LeFramboise. "Each person determines for himself what goods he considers necessary to his well-being; this is the essence of democratic society."

Gnaws At Roots

Susan Decker, III St. Michael's, opened the attack of the affirmative with the statement that advertising was "conceived in snake oil and reared in the side-show barker's tent". It was, she said, a force gnawing at the very roots of society, aiming only to create a demand where none actually existed.

Branding advertising as "dishonest", Miss Decker went on to describe it as "an assault on the senses, an appeal to man's baser instincts, and the one sure way of maintaining the evils of capitalism."

Second speaker for the affirmative Alex MacRae, III St. Michael's, distinguished between the announcement said the advertisement as it has become familiar to modern society. The announcement, he said, had a legitimate purpose, that of making known as simply as possible the availability of goods and services. Advertising, on the contrary, he described as the education of the emotions, as opposed to the intellect, and the playing on man's instincts of sex, fear and ambition.

Said Subversive

"An insidious parasitic fungus" in the language of the affirmative speakers, advertising was allegedly subversive to a good democratic government. "It makes people ignore political questions, and it has in itself totalitarian principles," said MacRae.

Creates Demand

Speaking against the motion, Jacques Roy of Laval denied that advertising was a wasteful expenditure of money. "If this were true," he said, 'it would be the fault of the men who use it, not of the use in itself."

By means of advertising, the speaker claimed, small manufacturers were enabled to compete with larger firms, and technology was advanced by the creation of ever greater demand for its products. "Advertising has been the motivating force of industrialization, a benefit to employers and employees alike," said the Laval debater.

Editors Tangle At Meeting Disagree Over Implications Of Atlantic Security Pact

Two widely divergent interpretations of the North Atlantic Pact were presented by fellow-journalists J. B. McGeachy, Associate Editor of the Globe and Mail, and Leslie Morris, Editor of the Canadian Tribune, when they spoke at a forum yesterday in Wymilwood under the auspices of the Students' Peace Council. Speaking on "The Implications of the North Atlantic Pact," Mr. Morris called the plan "a United States war pact," and Mr. McGeachy referred to it as "a defensive alliance that may ensure peace."

Ridicules Russian Culture

In explaining his attitude toward Russian Communism, Mr. McGeachy said that he regards the Russians as "admirable barbarians" with many likable features in their culture. "But to me it seems laughable to suggest that we have anything to learn from them politically."

He added, "The Russians have always had a national complex by which they see it their divine duty to carry the virtues of their culture throughout the world. Tolstoy, the Czars and now Stalin have expressed this complex."

Time is Short

The speaker stated that recent troubles in the United States Senate, concerning the terms of the North Atlantic Pact, are of no great importance. But he criticized the Senate for taking time with the troubles. "With the extension of Russian power far into Asia, it seems to me a shame that we should still be involved in such technical matters."

Mr. McGeachy concluded, "The North Atlantic Pact may enable the Western powers to maintain peace. I agree with Mr. Churchill that the Second World War could have been prevented by a show of force to Hitler."

Blames West for War

Mr. Morris agreed that the last war might have been prevented by a united opposition to the Axis. "But this united opposition was prevented because the Western powers supported the anti-Comintern Axis as long as its efforts were directed to the east. The howl was set up when the Axis turned on the West. Then, during the war, it was admitted that Hitler could only be stopped with the aid of the Soviet Union. If that had been recognized in 1938, there would have been no war."

The Tribune editor said favorable opinion toward the U.S.S.R. in the West has only been destroyed by means of "an immense propaganda campaign." This had led to the pact.

U.S. Rejects Peace

About the pact, he asserted, "It is not a peace pact, but a United States war pact. All peace pacts have been swept aside by the United States. Atom bomb abolition, progressive disarmament, withdrawal of occupation forces and peace treaties with Germany and Austria have all been suggested by Russia and rejected by the U.S."

To a question about Russia's attitude toward the idea of world government, Mr. Morris replied, "The Soviet Union looks on present proposals for world government with suspicion. Such an organization would be dominated by the United States since most nations' economies are American controlled."

Grant Received For Wind Tunnel

Defence Minister Brooke Claxton and President Sidney Smith in a joint announcement yesterday revealed that a $350,000 grant has been made for a supersonic aerodynamics research laboratory to function as part of U of T's Department of Aeronautical Engineering. It is reported that $250,000 is to be spent on buildings and equipment, with the remaining $100,000 to be used to partially cover operating costs for the next three years.

Professor of Aerodynamics G. N. Patterson, one of North America's top wind tunnel men will be director of the laboratory, which will be housed at deHaviland airport. There will be one or two tunnels for supersonic speeds up to Mach 10, while smaller tunnels will be used to study basic problems in fluid dynamics over longer periods of time at lower speeds.

Dr. Patterson said the equipment and staff would be available for study of guided missiles, supersonic aircraft design, gas turbine rotor blade study, or many civilian and industrial uses.

Dr. Patterson graduated from the U. of Alberta in 1931, took post-graduate work at U. of T., and has carried on research at the California Institute of Tech. and the Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton.

Expert In Jets Appointed Dean Of Engineering

Succeeding Dr. C. R. Young, as Dean of Engineering, Kenneth F. Tupper will join the university staff April 1, Dr. Sidney Smith announced today.

Mr. Tupper received his early education in Saskatoon and Calgary, graduated in Mechanical Engineering from the U of T in 1929 and later took a Master's degree in aeronautical engineering at the University of Michigan.

He has worked on various National Research Council assignments during the last 15 years.

Mr. Tupper has been director of the engineering division of the

KENNETH F. TUPPER

Atomic Energy Project in Chalk River since February, 1947. Before this, he was chief engineer at Turbo Research Limited, Leaside and during the war he worked no jet propulsion projects in England.

The new dean's duties commence July 1 when Dr. Young's retirement comes into effect. Dr. Young has been in the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering for 42 years and has been dean since 1941.

Spiritual Element In Man His Highest Dignity—Lynch

Both capitalism and Communism are insufficient systems for man, said Dr. L.E.M. Lynch of St. Michael's College philosophy department at a meeting sponsored by the Inter-Cultural Relations Committee of the SAC at Cartwright Hall yesterday afternoon. The doctor spoke on "The Dignity of Man".

Pointing out the spiritual element in man, which makes him God-like, Dr. Lynch stated that there should exist among men a fellowship with God. For Christians, he said, this should take the form of a brotherhood of men under the headship of Christ.

Cites Philosophers

Dr. Lynch cited the position taken by many philosophers on the subject of the dignity of man. Some reduced man to mere matter; others recognized only the immaterial element in him. It is just as wrong, he said, to make man a mind as it is to make him a beast.

"We are tired of man as he is dwarfed and levelled off in contemporary society," he said. Both capitalism and Communism degrade man. Neither economic system really makes him free. Under

College Magazine Contest To Be Held By University

A competition for the judging of the best college magazine is being organized by The Varsity. A panel of judges will be appointed and they will select what they consider to be the best magazine published on the campus during the past year.

Acta Editor's Opinion

When approached on the subject of such a competition, Doug Fisher, Editor of Acta Victoriana, stated that he thought it was a good idea if the judges boldly formulated their standards of judgment. The magazines as they stand now," he continued, "have to be judged from their present content rather than from an absolute standard. The state of the college magazines today is a direct reflection of how far college authorities have been corrupted by the pressure of the popular conception of a university."

Many Opinions

Gary Clarke, Editor of the UC Undergrad, welcomed the idea. "It should arouse an interest in the publishing of college magazines," he said. "Students usually take them for granted without considering the problems involved. But," he added, "there are as many opinions as to what a college magazine should be as there are editors."

Anthony Wallace, Editor of the Trinity University Review, remarked that he thought it would be difficult for the judges to arrive at a basis of comparison since each magazine follows a different policy. "The Trinity Review," he said, "aims to represent and to encourage writers of all years and all courses. This naturally affects the content of the magazine, since first year students obviously have not the experience of those in their final year." Frank Havey, Editor of the St. Michael's College Trireme, stated that he thought the competition was a good idea. Unfortunately, the Trireme's only issue this year will appear too late to be entered.

Dave Quigley Elected; Heads St. Mike's SAC

After an active campaign and heated speeches on Wednesday the students of St. Michael's College turned out yesterday in large numbers to elect their representatives to the College's SAC.

Dave Quigley, III Poli. Sci., was elected president and representative to the University SAC. The vice-presidency will be filled by Doug Wallace, II-III C and F. Jim Wiley, II Pass, and Bob Ringwood, I Pass, are third and second year representatives.

Doug Wallace, II Pass, will fill the Athletic representative's position and Miles Kennedy was selected as the College's representative to the NFCUS committee.

Got Employment Worries? Try The Placement Office

By KEITH STANTON

"I'd like to do anything in my power to help students find the type of employment that they want, and are best suited for", said Mr. Kenneth Bradford of the University Placement Service yesterday. This is a comparatively new service of the University and began functioning on a full scale last April. It is open to some 80,000 graduates and 16,000 undergraduates.

Service Very Busy

When The Varsity phoned for an interview Thursday, Mr. Bradford stated that he would "squeeze you in." It was difficult to determine whether or not he was joking, but on arrival we learned that he was "booked up" for the next four weeks. The Placement Service has information on jobs ranging from peanut butter jar filling to executive positions paying up to $10,000 a year.

Vacancies Abroad Listed

The bureau has received vacancy listings from Canadian and foreign industries. Some were in the Netherlands, Bolivia, United States, Jamaica and Newfoundland.

"More and more businessmen are demanding specific training and qualifications," said Mr. Bradford. "We would have a better chance of properly filling these positions if more people would respond." He wishes that more students would take advantage of the job openings posted on the bulletin boards of the various arts colleges around the campus.

Good Work

A statement issued by SAC President Gordon Gwynne-Timothy at this week's meeting of the Students' Administrative Council indicates that plans for the proposed Students' Union building have gone as far as they can go without definite financial support.

Next week an SAC committee will meet with the University administration to outline the progress made and to discuss methods of financing the new building.

It is about forty years since a students' union building was first suggested on this campus. It was not until last year, however, that any definite investigation on the problem was begun. In seven months, as Gwynne-Timothy pointed out, the working committee of the SAC have accomplished a job that has taken similar groups in other universities as long as eleven years to do.

We would commend the committees for the excellent work they have done to date and for the tireless energy they have shown in their task. That they should have reached a point beyond which it is impossible to carry on without funds is an indication that much of the complex, detailed ground work has been laid.

The energy and zeal the committees have shown in their work and the excellent reports which they have developed are a strong indication of what students can do when they are given an opportunity to assume responsibility.

By tackling a large project such as the Students' Union, the students of this university have shown that they are able to give mature and intelligent consideration to important problems. And they have shown that they are able to produce concrete solutions to those problems.

The plans which the SAC will lay before the University administration point up what this paper has reiterated many times, that students, when allowed, are not only capable but they are also willing to handle their own affairs.

Members of the SAC committees and all others who have worked on the project are to be congratulated on the excellent work they have done.

As the plans for the Students' Union move into high gear, it is hoped that both the University administration and the student body will give the proposals their full co-operation and support.

The Cat And The Mad Hater

The Cat smiled nervously and then felt rather faint for its body was disappearing and the grin remained. This morning, since the Cat had followed the Mad Hater there seemed to be no logic left in the world.

"Its all too much like Fallacy in Wonderland," thought the Cat, "Oh, my goodness I can't seem to remember the proper words." Perhaps if I sing some lusty and loose carols things will return to normal."

Rat Exterminator

"Do so," ordered the Mad Hater, while he surveyed the wall before him. "Perhaps it will assist me in my self-appointed task of Rat Exterminator, that is if I can climb this wall to get at the rats." The Mad Hater threw a piece of silver over the wall with a long string attached since the wall was really too high for him to climb in any other way.

"Fore!" he cried as he threw the silver.

"Four?" replied the Cat, "Really, I think I know only one carol."

"No, fore you idiot! I always bawl fore when I throw my weight around. Now sing Cat!"

Words Fail

"Oh goodness, the words don't seem to come right," wept the Cat while the grin remained on its face.

"What do you do to things that are left?" asked the Cat.

"Cut them off!" The Mad Hater flourished his weapon.

At that moment two Turkeys passed who had been gobbling up beers in the Park Plaza.

"Where did you come from?" thundered the Hater.

"Timbucktoo," meekly replied one.

"Off with their heads," screamed the Mad Hater, "did every student attend that lecture? Off with all their heads."

Hater Hoarse

"I'm partly hoarse through all this exertion," confided the Hater.

"Yes, I knew it. I love conundrums and I bet I can tell what part of the horse you are," the Cat grinned nastily. "Now its my turn! Do you know what the Cardinal point about you is?" Since the Hater was too fatigued to answer the Cat volunteered, "Because everyone says of you, 'On his Mindsetzhe'."

"Ass," replied the Hater.

"Precisely, the answer is so very obvious," conceded the Cat.

At that moment Don dashed across their path in his red union suit practising for next year's Follies.

"Red Heron" murmured the Cat.

Can't Fool Him

"We'll go the other way then, they can't fool me," screamed the Hater.

"Now don't get into that kind of a flap," soothed the Cat, "although its the proper condition for you perhaps. Better pull yourself up or you'll expose yourself."

"I'm too tired to argue with you now, I'll rest on this soft couch that some kind person has left."

Cat Astonished

"The Hater lies so naturally," thought the Cat and then was astonished to see him leap from the bed in agony.

"I've been parboiled! Look, I'm red all over!"

"Oh goodness," remembered the Cat, "You've found the hot-bed of communism."

"A purge! An immediate purge!" demanded the Hater.

"Immediately," agreed the Cat, "that's Nature's Remedy isn't it? We must have immediate action in your case."

Brotherhood Hop Slated To Close Week's Program

Popular and square dancing, a varied floor show and dancing contests will be available for an admission price of fifty cents per person at this Saturday's "Brotherhood Dance", Jack Thomas, of the Inter-Cultural Affairs Committee said yesterday.

He outlined a program to be presented in the Drill Hall between 8:30 and midnight Saturday which includes music by Bob Cringan's orchestra, Hawaiian dancing by Pat Hunt, Al Marson, lyric tenor; Ukrainian gymnasts and tap dancer Herb Wedderburn. Winning posters sought during the Poster Contest will be displayed, and cabaret-style refreshments will be served.

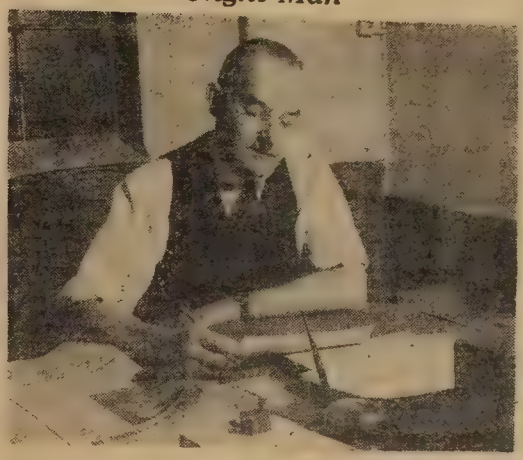
Among the novelty dance contests will be one designed for jivers and another for barn dance swingers.

The judges we have secured are Marjorie Lunn, campus drum majorette, Mr. E. A. Macdonald, Warden Nicholas Ignatieff, the "caller" Gladys Pfeiffer, and her assistant, Len Meyer," said Thomas. "Stags will be welcome," he added.

Tickets for the dance may be obtained in the rotundas at UC, Trinity and Vic today between the hours of 11 and 12 a.m., or 2 to 3 p.m. They may also be bought at the door.

Thomas said many girls from fraternities have helped in arranging for the dance. "Whitney Hall girls have painted some terrific murals on the theme of world brotherhood," he said.

Polling Begins at SPS Celebrate At Drill Hall



SPS goes to the polls at 10 a.m. this morning to elect the 1949-50 Engineering Society Executive. Two new members will be added for next year since Ajax will be in Toronto and will not have a separate executive.

Campaigning began Tuesday with candidates decorating the interior of the Skule House with signs and posters. Candidates roamed from room to room stating their qualifications.

With the closing of the polling booths at 2 p.m. today, a blast from the Skule Cannon (new inscription and all) will start a parade to the Drill Hall where Bob Cringham and his orchestra will supply entertainment.

"Engineers expect a shortage of women and cordially invite all coeds to meet the faculty that won the Chariot Race" said Engineering Society President John McCrodan.

Night Man

The work of putting The Varsity out at Oshawa revolves around capable, genial, night superintendent Les Coles. Les, who prefers to work when most people would be home asleep, has been directing general printing operations in the wee hours of the morning for over fourteen years. (See story at bottom of page).

Son Of Well-Known Family Seeks New Health Concept

It runs in the family, they say. One of his grandfathers founded the educational system which forms the basis of most of Canada's present one. The other was a Professor of Natural Science in Victoria College, Cobourg, Ont. Their grandson is working out a new course of health—Hygeialogy.

Who is he? His name is Dr. Stanley Ryerson, M.D., C.M., F.A.C.S. He is Director and Professor of Health Education at the University, has been president of some of the most eminent medical associations in Canada, and plays cricket, golf and squash.

Graduated at 21

We want to see this amazing man of 70 in a cheerful little office in the Medical building. That the doctor is a well-read man was evident from the books he picked out from the maze of hundreds of volumes on the walls.

Doctor Ryerson graduated from Trinity Medical College at the age of 21, and joined the staff of the College. Upon federation of Trinity with the University of Toronto, he became Demonstrator in Anatomy and subsequently Demonstrator in Pathology, Assistant Curator of the Pathological Museum and Demonstrator in Clinical Surgery.

New Concept

His aim is to establish a new concept of health as a positive condition rather than a negative "not being sick". His idea began to form when he saw a moving picture of an amoeba under a microscope. Since health occurs only in living things, this simplest of all creatures would show him the characteristics of all living things.

He assesses the qualities of structure under five standards, excellent, good, poor, loss of qualities, and diseased. Functions are classed under four headings, movement, nutrition and metabolism, response to stimuli, and reproduction. Health is the degree of efficiency with which these functions are performed by the structure. Here Dr. Ryerson points out the integration of structure and function.

The harmony of the function and its relation of its environment, are the third and fourth characteristics of living things.

Dr. Ryerson points out that we use these principles in judging horses and other animals in contests. His new approach is to apply these principles to human beings.

Parliament Debate Ends In Confusion Leader Shuns Party

At a heated debate yesterday afternoon in the Junior Common Room, during which the Speaker of the House branded the proceedings as "farcical", the resolution: "That brotherhood is a greater reality in Russia than in Canada", was rejected by a vote of 36-25.

Calls House to Order

Joan Easser and Harold Carter of U.C. defended the resolution, while Doreen Cullen and Bill Klem of St. Michael's formed the opposition. The debate was a feature of Brotherhood Week.

The Speaker was forced to call the House to order every few minutes during the period of speeches from the floor as members arose on points of order and personal privilege, applause and catcalls greeted their remarks. The debate broke up in confusion when the Prime Minister, John Morden, U.C., voted against the motion, and argument arose as to his fitness to hold his office.

Harold Carter, first speaker for the affirmative, suggested that one look to acts by Russia outside Russia, and from them draw logical conclusions as to what takes place inside the country Mr. Carter stated that a Russian representative on the United Nations Committee of Human Rights averred that a document presented in that body advocating economic, social and humanitarian measures did not go far enough. After that said Mr. Carter, "to say Russia thinks nothing of human rights would be ridiculous."

Quotes Russophile Author

He qoted from a book by Craigshaw in which the author said that his attitude on leaving Russia was not one of an "escape from prison," but of an "exclusion from the vitality, generosity and loyalty" of the country.

Opining that the attitude of one man to another on the streets of Russia indicated the degree of brotherhood existing there, Mr. Carter declared that he could not picture a man "going around with a hammer in his hand to protect himself from his fellow man."

Defining brotherhood as "a drive in man that makes him respect the rights and privileges of his fellow man," Bill Klem, first speaker for the negative, said that the contrast between the order under a superior Being set up by man's code of ethics and the dictatorship and party purges existing in Russia shows "what brotherhood means" in that country.

Ideal Not Realized

While conceding that Brotherhood was "far from being ideally realized here," Mr. Klem affirmed that it was "less of a reality in Russia." The Russian attitude is one of slaughtering to prevent slaughter, he declared, referring to an alleged 12 to 14 million people in Russian labor camps, and the German prisoners that "never went back to Germany."

"We can find no room there for brother love and sympathy," he concluded "Communism is a vicious enemy of brotherhood."

Intolerance In Canada

Joan Easser, second speaker for the affirmative, pointed to the communal ownership and production in Russia as an example of sharing leading to brotherhood. She spoke of many instances of intolerance in Canada, citing discrimination against Negroes and Jews, and the treatment accorded Japanese-Can-

NFCUS Committee Proposes Change In Appointments

NFCUS Chairman George Wilkes will present a revised draft of an amendment proposed by the Students' Administrative Council concerning the selection of NFCUS Advisory Committee at the next representatives on the SAC NFCUS meeting of the SAC, a meeting of the NFCUS Committee decided last night.

The proposed amendment will change the basis of selecting NFCUS representatives from the various colleges and faculties. As now constituted representatives are either elected or appointed by the college or faculty The new plan is to have the SAC appoint the representative on the nomination of the college or faculty.

Amendment Not Clear

Members of the NFCUS Committee felt that the present wording of the amendment is not clear, and will present their revised draft to clarify the situation.

The Toronto NFCUS Committee will write a letter to Montreal to ask for a definite date for the planes that are to fly Canadian University students to Europe next summer. Already several applications are in, and it is felt by the committee that students will be better able to plan their summer if they know definitely when the planes will fly to Europe.

Mount Allison Dignitary Succumbs After Stroke

Sackville, Feb. 25 — (CUP) — Dr. George Johnstone Trueman, president emeritus of Mount Allison University and Mayor of Sackville, N. B., died early this week. He suffered a stroke on the evening of February 11, as he entered the assembly hall of Sackville United Church after officiating at the crowning of the High School Queen of Sports. He remained in a coma until death.

Behind The News

From Typesetters, To Presses, To You

By JACK GRAY

(In a previous article we described the course of a news story — the one about Hector Smith's disappearing nose — from the time a tip was received in THE VARSITY Office until the written story was placed on the bus to Oshawa.)

Every week-day evening the last run of copy goes from Toronto to Oshawa on the Grey Coach Lines bus. Once it leaves the Varsity Office the paper is out of student hands. Professional printers now take over the job, and produce the paper which you pick up each morning.

The copy is picked up at the Oshawa bus terminal by a man from the Rotary Press, printers of The Varsity. When it reaches the press, the first man to look at it is Les Coles, Night Superintendent at the plant.

Copy Checked

Les checks the written stories against the dummy to make sure that all the copy marked on the dummy has been sent. To ensure against any possible slip-up, all stories run in The Varsity are typed in duplicate Should it happen that a story doesn't arrive, or if the bus has an accident, Les knows that by phoning to whoever has the "dupes" that night he can get any story that is missing.

Once he is satisfied that all the stories are there, and that everything is all right, the copy is sent to be set in type.

Each Varsity story is set up in the following manner. On the first page is the headline. The story proper begins on the second page. To make sure that the proper headlines get on the right stories a "catch line" is written on the first page of the story. The catch line is the first line of the headline (Whew!) This is done because the headline and the story proper are set in type in different ways.

Separate Operations

The headline is set on a Ludlow machine. In this operation each letter is separate, and is taken from a type case and set by hand. Stories are set on a Linotype machine, in which the operation is completely automatic. The Linotyper has a keyboard arrangement which he operates in much the same way we do a typewriter.

When the stories are set up in type "galley proofs" are pulled. These are the first set of proofs and are sent to the proofreaders who check the story in type with the original copy. The proofreaders mark any mistakes and then send the corrected proofs back to the typesetters. When the mistakes have been all eliminated the type goes to the make-up man.

At the make-up forms the various pages of the newspaper are put together. The make-up man follows the dummies sent from the Varsity office, and sets up the pages in chases, as the steel frames which hold the pages are called.

Proofs Made

When the pages are completely assembled, page proofs are made. These proofs are checked both by the proofreaders and by Les Coles. When they have finished the chases are taken to a large rolling machine, where impressions of the type are made on a matrix.

The matrix resembled a damp piece of heavy soft cardboard. It is placed over the type, cuts and felt pads are placed on it to provide a cushion, and it is then rolled by the mat roller which gives it a pressure of thirty tons per square inch. A complete impression in every minutiest detail of the type and illustrations is left in the matrix, or mat as it is usually called.

Mat Dried

The mat is then scorched and dried, so that it will retain the impression Next it goes to a casting machine where cylindrical plates are cast. This machine holds about 5,000 pounds of molten lead, heated to 600 degrees. The lead is pumped around the mat, taking the impression of the type. When this cast is cooled, trimmed to take off the round edges and placed on the press it prints two pages of The Varsity.

Our story has now reached the final stage. What started out as a tip at 10 a.m. in the morning has become a printed story in the paper. But it took quite a long time. The presses usually begin to roll at about 6 a.m. Once they start it doesn't take very long to print a day's issue.

Ready In 40 Minutes

In about forty minutes the Varsity is ready for delivery to Toronto where it will be distributed around the university, and where you will pick it up to read the tragic tale of Hector's disappearing

PANEL DISCUSSION

The question, "Is legislation an effective means of combating discrimination?" will be discussed by a student-staff panel today, at four o'clock in the UC Junior Common Room. The panel, composed of Provost Seeley, Professor Tatham, Ralph Campbell, IV UC, Nancy McCormick, IV St. Joseph's and Harvey Hay, IV Vic, will discuss aspects of the question among themselves, before attempting to answer questions from the floor. The U. of T. Debating Union and the SAC Intercultural Affairs Committee have arranged the panel.

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

We have an opening for young men who desire professional sales work but to date have either been at school or have not had the means to equip themselves for such.

Applicant must be between the ages of 25 and 35 and the four selected will be given complete training to equip them for a successful and remunerative career.

When writing give date of birth, marital status, and previous employment, education and approximate salary required.

FOR APPOINTMENT CALL R. A. DORRELL, ELGIN 5141 OR MAYFAIR 6602.

ART ∞ MUSIC ∞ DRAMA

Les Jours Heureux

One of the most popular pre-war French comedies — and one that turns up annually among the French entries in the Canadian Drama Festival — Claude-André Puget's "Les Jours heureux", was performed for the first time in Toronto Wednesday evening at Cartwright Hall by la Troupe française de Victoria College. This modern comedy, which with its emphasis upon character suggests because of its small cast and strict observance of the unity of time the classic French comedy, is based upon the most fragile of plots.

The Vic players wisely stressed character portrayal, particularly difficult in this case where the normal people of the play have to be presented without any trace of theatrical emphasis. Immediately upon their entrance the actors established their characters and it is to their credit — and to the directors' — Mlle. Rièse and M. de Montmollin — that they maintained the interest in the reactions of the characters and kept the action progressing rapidly.

Accent is merely one of the many problems faced by an English speaking company in presenting a play in another language. Accent can be polished to a certain degree. The acid test is inflection and phrasing. The students in "Les Jours heureux" revealed a genuine understanding of the French idiom. Their diction, as well, retained its clarity throughout the presentation.

The Vic students cannot be praised highly enough. While the performances of all the actors were of a singularly high standard, two in particular must be mentioned, Jean Scroggie, whose natural ability enhanced by a definite technical skill gave a tremendous variety to her portrayal of the ingenuous Pernette, and Ted Rathe whose unerring sense of timing "put across" without overplaying the most humorous lines of the play.

D. Ney.

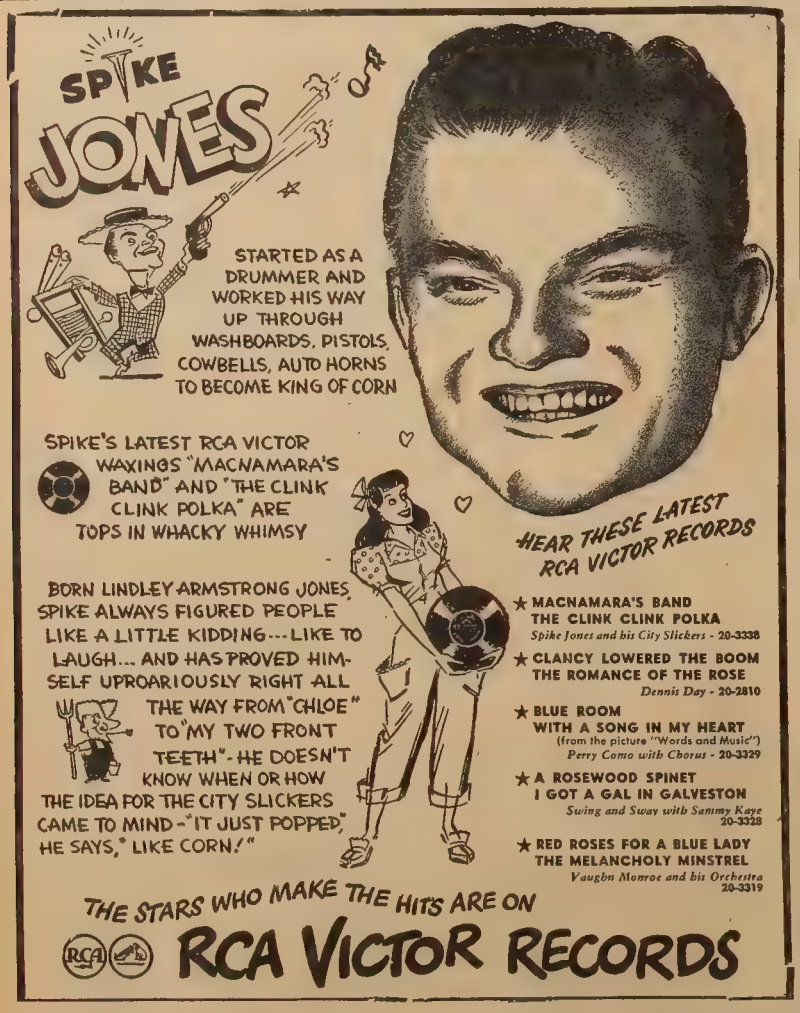
Guerrero

A near capacity audience crowded the Royal Conservatory Concert Hall in the 5th of the Wednesday five o'clock series. Canadian pianist Alberto Guerrero, senior faculty member and noted exponent of Mozart, was guest artist in a programme of Chopin's last sonata and five impressions of Ravel and Debussy.

Often desperate for epithets when truly impressed by a musician's art, critics resort to hailing him as distinguished, brilliant, phenomenal and the rest. These terms are handed out so freely by both critics and press-agents alike that a real doubt arises on their value and when they are deserved.

Simply because a pianist succeeds season after season in serenading the multitude with side-show virtuosity, he is not entitled to praise as a distinguished man. He must have the ability to draw from a tempered keyboard an effect powerful enough to prick the subconscious, and thus erase the bounds of 3-dimensional thought.



I last heard the Chopin and Debussy's "L'Isle Joyeuse" played last month by Rubinstein. Unlike Rubinstein, Mr. Guerrero with adroit finesse and moving majesty of phrase stirred his listerers well beyond the instrument and the man.

To hear him play Debussy's "Reflets dans l'eau" was not only to see the glory of streams of sunlight descending in magnificent design through an abysmal expanse of water, but to grasp an objective view of our relative importance in this life, to catch a glimpse of the ethereal, and to awaken with an image of experience that time is unable to destroy.

OUR READERS WRITE

BOUQUETS

The Editor, The Varsity

Dear Sir: With your permission, I should like to take this opportunity to express to you my appreciation of the role which intercollegiate sports and intercollegiate fellowship are playing in bridging the gap which nas for too long existed between the French and the English areas of our Canadian population. The recent hockey game between the University of Toronto and the Carabins of the University of Montreal is a case in point.

You will remember that the first period belonged to Varsity; you outpointed our team and out-played them all the way. During the second period the Carabins came un-nailed from the ice and picked up speed, but it was the spectators who, for me, furnished the biggest thrill. At that point, with the Varsity team lagging, one might have anticipated that there could be scarcely any enthusiasm for the visitors, yet the Carabins were cheered at every turn! Everywhere there were cries of "Good shot!" and "Nice play!" Even the University of Montreal cheer greeted the team when they skated out onto the ice.

Had the enthusiastic reception come only from the small group of students who visited Montreal recently with the Varsity Revue, it would have been quite understandable, but it was a far more representative group who were expressing themselves. As a scientist, I could not refrain from even doing a little experimenting. I turned to my neighbor, who was giving loud and asked:

"Aren't you a Varsity man?"

"Sure I am," he replied.

"Then why are you cheering the Carabins?"

"Because they are playing a good game," he said. "If you can't cheer for a good team, whether they're your own or someone else's, you're not much of a sport!"

So there I had it, from a Varsity-age youngster. Why can't we do a better job of recognizing the merits of those who are not of our own small group? In the hockey game there was no boo-ing of the referee's decisions, the game was played cleanly and with the assumption that should differences arise they would be settled fairly. It is impossible, under the circumstances, not to draw a parallel between that game and the game which we seem to be willing to go on playing indefinitely between our two cultural groups.

You may be sure that I have not been reticent, back here in Montreal, about expressing my appreciation of the splendid spirit which exists between our two organizations. Never again shall I feel obligated to go to Toronto to furnish support for the Carabins, for they have honest and sincere supporters already there. Instead, I shall consider it a privilege to meet our Varsity friends and to enjoy the warm fellowship which exists, and is growing, between us. I cannot but feel that such sports and such sportsmanship offer an open door to better understanding and, thereby, to a more unified Canada.

Gustave Prévost,
Director Biological Bureau and Professor at the Institute of Biology, University of Montreal.

GEARY DEFENSE

The Editor, The Varsity:

I write to express my personal revulsion at the tone of Mr. Morrison's reply to Capt. Geary. I refer, in particular to two small sections of that letter.

First, Mr. Morrison says " . . .Capt. Geory and his friends (presumably Queen's Park Conservatives since Sergeant-at-Arms is a lush political appointment) . . . " and secondly " . . . Capt. Geory in the sinecure comfort of his office . . . "

I have no intention of delving into Capt Geary's record as an army officer except to point out that some of the reasons for which he merited a V. C. continue to this day as strong factors in the situation. As a person who had the honor to be stationed under Capt. Geary for a short time during the war and who thus got to know something of him, and, as a person who is certainly not a Tory, I was delighted to learn of Capt. Geory's appointment. I know of no person who better deserves the post.

We may consider that the position of Sergeant-at-Arms is a sinecure but Mr. Morrison's insinuation that Capt. Geary is merely a man in a soft job who does no work is ridiculous to any person with even a slight acquaintance with Capt. Geary.

Mr. Morrison would strengthen his case if he kept to the point and refrained from personal allegations obviously founded on ignorance.

D. Harvie Hay, IV Vic.

INTELLIGENT VOTE

The Editor, The Varsity:

I wish to refer to your editorial of Friday, February 18, entitled "Elections" in which you berate the student body for being an "apathetic electorate which neglects its responsibilitys." I too am faced with a grave responsibility and herein lies my dilemma.

Bulletins now announce the approaching Engineering Society elections. Since I am in 5T2 I am eligible to vote for the aspirants to 12 offices. If there are, say, three candidates for each position, I may be required to make a personal assessment of 36 persons concerning their suitability or unsuitability of holding student office. This does not seem a portentous task but did you notice the nominations close at 5.00 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 22, and it is unlikely that campaigning will start until sometime Wednesday?

Simple arithmetic shows I only have to assess the candidates at the rate of 18 a day. Unfortunately, I have a lecture schedule which seriously interferes with the wheels of democracy and hence, I may have to do all my deciding from posters alone. At ten posters per candidate a rapid shuffle of 360 posters, ignoring my natural prejudice against certain color schemes, should allow me to select the right man for the right job. The fact that I do not see or hear them will in no way influence my decision—democracy must go on. I must make use of my vote—but is it an intelligent use?

H. Webster, II Engineering.

Let's LOOK at it!

WATT'S ARE PROUD of their sweaters and skirts and blouses. There's a violet Land-sea skirt that is a natural to wear with one of their Royal blue skirts, for a blonde girl. Another pale blue sweater matches to perfection a pale blue wool skirt. The skirts are in evening styles, too—pleating, etc., to take care of necessary formality. F. J. Watt's, Park Plaza, for sportswear—suits, dresses—is your own local shop. New suits are in—better see these uncrushable gabardines.

MEN! TEASDALL'S INVITE you to take advantage of their ten percent reduction on suits and overcoats available to U. of T. students. Here's a very definite opportunity to finance the purchase of a new suit, especially since Teasdall's also make such purchases easy by assisting in a deferred payment project, available to the University, by which instalment checks can be issued at convenient financial mile-posts. You'll like the atmosphere at Teasdall's ... it's a man's shop, run the way a man likes to do business, with merchandise of the leadership school. 804 Yonge Street is above Bloor, west side.

YOU MAY NOT BE the type who goes around questioning the hand that feeds you, just the same next time you order ice cream ask for Tudor and you'll prove to your own advantage that now better ice cream than run o' the mill is very definitely available. Tudor, made by Acme Farmers Dairy, costs a little more, is so much better that you'll ask for it again as a matter of policy. Tudor is richer, more packed with the flavourful fruit of its own particular flavour, more digestible to the delicate appetite. Ever taste ice cream right out of your own cream freezer? That's next thing to Tudor.

THERE'S A GROUP of undercoat gabardines at Northway's that we think you'll like. They come in brave new colours, just the idea to brighten the dullest moment of the year. Nineteen ninety-five is the price. They're lined, tailored as your brother's tux, but with that softly casual fitting which snuggles down happily under a fur coat, comes up bright as paint for Spring walking-out or summer when it's cool. These are an opportunity to get something you can swear by and live in for weeks and weeks. Going fast. Watch 'em. At Northway's Fashionland, third floor.

TODAY'S clever career co-ed can cut a few corners when it comes to economy in dressing. Thanks to the blouse and skirt trend, very accommodating as to price, she can set herself up in daytime and evening flattery by choosing a blouse and a couple of skirts from the Evangeline Shops' collection which can double for daytime and evening wear with a little clever negotiating. Crepes lend themselves particularly to evening wear, and the Evangeline Shops' collection of wearable skirts for evening run in an exceptionally comprehensive range. Prices up only to 9.95; majority less, around 5.95.

AN ENGAGEMENT RING from Scheuer's, at 131 Yonge Street, is chosen from a collection of aristocrats which have the oldest diamond-merchant heritage in Canada. Scheuer's specially priced group at a hundred dollars have been selected for their beauty and brilliance and good value, moreover, a ring from Scheuer's is the girl's own assurance that there are no time-payments to cope with later in the romance. Scheuer's buy their merchandise for cash, sell it for cash, pass on savings to their customers. 131 Yonge Street, facing Temperance.

NEW SUIT TIME is always a time to take note of what is new and news for the canny shopper who knows that a suit purchase is no minor operation and requires authentic information. A good suit, the kind you can purchase at Joan Rigby's, will take you through your scholastic career if properly selected. Therefore it's good business to make a serious job of looking over the new crop, being certain you're right, and going ahead. Joan Rigby Suits are celebrated for cut and contour. 54 Bloor Street West invites your inquisitive interest on the subject of suit futures.

Fight Titles To Be Decided At Kingston

At Kingston today and tomorrow Varsity, McGill, and Queen's will stage their annual battle for Senior Intercollegiate Boxing and Wrestling honors. At present Varsity holds the wrestling title while the Montreal college has the Gibson Cup for boxing.

Varsity will send 15 men to compete for the titles. No Blue wrestler will compete in the 125-pound class. Amongst those who will make the trip is Hank Henshall who has captured the intercollegiate title in the 125-pound boxing class in each of the past two years. Varsity's fighters are:

Boxing

125 lbs.—Hank Henshall.
133 lbs.—Dave Geary.
140 lbs.—Carl Leprich.
147 lbs.—Roberto Couceiro
155 lbs.—Maurice Boulay.
165 lbs.—Ray Patrick.
175 lbs.—Clem Scott.
Heavy—Tim Turner.

Wrestling

135 lbs.—Walter Cassells.
145 lbs.—Jack Kirkup.
155 lbs.—Bernie Shaver.
165 lbs.—George Davies.

adian and Chinese-Canadian citizens and minority religious groups such as Jehovah's Witnesses. "We have to have a Brotherhood Week, therefore we are lacking in brotherhood," stated Miss Easser.

Russians such as Gouzenko who because of their "love for the Communist ideal have exposed the present regime," were mentioned by Doreen Cullen, second speaker for the negative.

Cites Russian Exiles

Miss Cullen referred to "cases that stand out in glaring light," such as an alleged 7 million Russians in parts of Europe who "would rather be homeless in Europe than enjoying the brotherhood of Russia." She pointed out that Jews were sent to concentration camps in Siberia, and excluded from public office. Three percent of the Russians were Communists, she stated, and the rest slaves. Where there is an atmosphere of fear, "we cannot have real brotherhood."

Hal Rosenthal, U. C., speaking from the floor, deplored the whole tone of the debate and the wording of the resolution, declaring that it was easier to smear the opposition than to present constructive proof.

either men might become equal; yet they remain "cogs in a mechanical wheel". He added that as the consideration of man from just an economic standpoint distorts him, so too does viewing him from the point of view of one of science alone.

Not Mere Matter

But man, Dr. Lynch insisted, is not mere matter. His yearning for individuality, his artistic works, his speculative ability all indicate something immaterial in him. This spiritual element constitutes his highest dignity, he said. Differences in race, color, nationality, and the like are relatively unimportant.

Because man is spiritually dignified in God's image, he said, fraternal charity should exist.

nose. The press can print up to 20,000 papers an hour; The Varsity run is about 11,500.

In the process of printing the paper over 500 pounds of metal have been used in the type and plates, 11 pounds of black ink and a third of a ton of paper, (which would stretch over 6 miles if you like that kind of statistic) have been used, and many highly skilled technicians have set, made up and printed The Varsity.

It takes a lot of people, and a lot of time to tell you the story of Hector's disappearing nose.

Study Radiation Effects At Saskatchewan U. With Betatron Machine

Saskatoon, Feb. 25—(CUP)—Experiments are now in progress at the University of Saskatoon to determine the effects of betatron radiation on living tissues. The 22 million electron volt betatron installed there is being used for the experiments. It is the only machine of its kind in Canada.

Scope of the tissue research is two-fold. One group is investigating the possibility of using the betatron for cancer treatment, while a second is investigating for radiation sickness.

Varsity Ousted in B-Ball Finals

Varsity Captures Top Slot In 4-Way Track Display

Varsity captured first place in a four-way track meet at Hart House yesterday. The Blue runners piled up 15 points to edge out North Toronto who stood second with 13. East York followed with six points while West End Y trailed with two.

Four events were run: 100 yards, 300 yards, 1,000 yards, and a 12-lap relay. Paul Forestell gave Varsity its sole victory by covering the 1,000-yard distance in 2:21.1 which is well under his previous mark of 2:25.3.

Results follow:

100 yds.—1, Don Stonehouse, (North Toronto); 2, Bill Kelly, (V); 3, Dempster, (East York). 10.9 secs.

300 yds.—1, Wallace, (East York); 2, Art Cowien, (North Toronto); 3, Bill MacMackon, (V). 35.3 secs.

1,000 yds.—1, Paul Forestell, (V); 2, George McMullen, (V); 3, Ken Nevin, (West End). 2:21.1.

12-lap relay—1, North Toronto; 2, Varsity; 3, West End Y. 4.01.

McGill and Queen's Seek Swim Crown From Varsity

McGill and Queen's face Toronto for the C.I.A.U. swimming title tomorrow in Hart House. Coach Curran of McGill will seek to regain a crown which the Redmen have not possessed since 1936. His present squad has compiled an impressive record against very formidable States' competition. McGill's 7-2 record for dual meets includes victories over Amherst, Connecticut, Brooklyn Polytech, and Howard University.

Large 'Y' Floor Causes Downfall

By BOB DNIEPER

The Varsity Junior basket-ball team lost the final game of the T & D city finals last night at Central 'Y' by a score of 68-33. The smooth aggregation from 'Y'-had it all their own way except briefly in the third quarter, as they nursed a seven point lead piled up in the first game of the play-offs at Hart House last week.

They were never headed or seriously threatened as they jumped into a commanding 23-9 lead in the first quarter and built it up to 44-20 by the half. Varsity, used to the comparatively small gym at Hart House, were rather fuddled by the large Central floor. The tricky backboards also seemed to give them unaccustomed trouble as the ball refused to bounce from them the way the Varsity men hoped it would.

The Varsity shooting in the earlier part of the game was way off its usual form as was their checking. Playing a close man to man defence they were continually disconcerted by the amazing accuracy of the 'Y' hoopsters shooting lead by Horace Wilson and Tommy Orr. Wilson was so hot last night that he couldn't miss, as he once demonstrated, throwing one in while absolutely prostrate on the floor.

John Braithwaite fought hard in a losing cause as did Burns Burnstein, the latter swishing in 11 points This team is composed entirely of freshmen and under the able coaching of Busy Barry Lowes should do plenty for the Varsity teams of the future.

Varsity—Braithwaite 6, Hamilton, Bonsell 2, Dancy 3, Glover, Carruthers, Freeman, Burnstein 11, K. Brown 5, Carr 3, Denton 3, A. Brown.—Total 33. Central "Y" — Huycke 6, Fowler 5, Thomas 8, Orr 10, Wilson 15, Robertson 2, R. Ridding 1, Howard 14, Maynerick, V Ridding, Porter 7.—Total 68.

Sportswoman

The newly picked all-Varsity volleyball team will meet McMaster at 7.30 p.m. on Monday in the Lillian Massey Gym. Last year's team played two games against McMaster, winning one and losing the other.

The team includes Kay Catto, PHE, (playing manager); Joan Irwin, Vic; Pat Conway, PHE; Evelyn Aiken, Vic; Fearn Smith, Physio; Margaret Doyle, PHE; Noni Clark, St. Mike's; Dodie Jones, Trinity; Joan Galt, Physio; Thelma Henderson, PHE; Shirley Brown, Vic. The last four mentioned played on last year's team. Except for UC, all faculties have at least one representative on the team—what happened, UC?

The intramural playoffs have advanced to the semi-finals, with Physio 2 playing PHE 1 tonight. On Tuesday, Physio 1 will play UC 1 and the final game will be on Wednesday. Last year's champions were Physio 1.

League Scoring Lead Is At Stake Saturday

By ED VOIGHT

The Varsity Blues ring down the curtain on their 1948-49 basketball activities tomorrow at Athletic Night when they take on the Golden Gaels of Queen's U, in the evening's feature attraction.

Tonight out in London, Queen's are the visitors of the Western Mustangs, who have already clinched the league championship. Thus there is really nothing at stake in the week-end games, except the occupancy of second-place.

Wearring Leads

An interesting side-light of the two games, however, afforded by the individual scoring race. The latest releases show the one-two punch of the Hustangs, big George Wearring and Bob Phibbs holding down the first two spots with 67 and 66 points respectively. Next comes Toronto's Eddie Brennan with 65 points.

Brennan Has Chance

Thus, Brennan if he plays on Saturday night, has a chance to emerge as the year's top point-gatherer. If he goes against Queen's, Eddie will probably be playing with his ankle heavily taped. Coach Masterson will decide in tonight's scrimmage whether or not to play Brennan against the Gaels.

But even if he does get in against the Tricolor, Brennan will have to have a hot night if he wants to keep pace with Wearring and Phibbs.

For in all probability, the Mustangs will paste Queen's by a narrow margin of at least 40 points in their meeting (we'd be exaggerating to call it a game) tonight. And one can rely on the fact that Wearring and Phibbs will account for a high percentage of the Mustangs' final score. They're both likely to pop in about 20 points, certainly a not-too-pleasing thought for Brennan.

Doubtful Starters

Glen Pettinger is definitely a non-starter tomorrow night — in fact, Pettinger has his foot in a cast because of the sprained ankle he suffered in the Western game last Friday. Wally Zeaton is, like Brennan, in the doubtful class also.

To bolster his depleted roster, Masterson will dress Ted Luck and Bill Henderson of the Intermediates. Thus both these players will see action in two games tomorrow night.

A slight prediction for Saturday—the Blues by 15 points.

ALL-STARS PRACTICE

The "all-star" water polo team that has challenged the Blues will practice today at 5 p.m., Warren Clayson reports. The game is one of the pool attraction at athletic night.

"Bronze Baby" Is Topic Of Debate

This weekend is "Bronze Baby Weekend" at Varsity.

The Bronze Baby is the trophy given to the winning women's basketball team in the intercollegiate loop. This year, the intercollegiate meet is here and the games will be played tonight and tomorrow morning and afternoon.

Queen's Has 'Baby'

The Bronze Baby will arrive in Toronto under the arm of Betty McCrae, captain of the Queen's team, which kidnapped the baby from her home in Toronto last year, Western and McGill are also in the fight over the 'Babe' which begins tonight at 7.30 when Western take on Queen's and Toronto go after McGill.

This intercollegiate meet is in the form of a round robin tournament which means that each team plays each other team. The tomorrow morning games at OCE pit Toronto against the Gaels at 9 30 and McGill against Western at 10:30. The schedule is completed that afternoon at Hart House.

The Toronto-Western game is the last game of the meet and will probably be the fastest and the most exciting. At 3.30 the Bluettes challenge the Western Mustang-ettes who are champing at the bit after their recent 42-37 going over by Toronto.

Sisters Coach

"Mickey" Barnett, is the Varsity coach and sitting on the edge of the purple and white bench will be her twin sister "Dade" Barnett, coach of the Western team. These two sisters, who graduated from OCE last year, made a confusing and fast combination on the Varsity intercollegiate basketball team two short years ago, when they were both in PHE here.

These basketball games are open to everyone and no admission is charged.

Drop OAC By 5-1 For 4th Straight Intermediate Title

By JOHN KENNEDY

The Varsity Intermediate hockey team kept a three-year tradition alive when they decisively beat OAC 5-1 last night at Varsity Arena. The win meant the fourth consecutive year that a Varsity intermediate squad has copped the league championship. They were never seriously threatened as they dominated the play in the first and last periods and did better than hold their own in the middle frame. Only one penalty was handed out until the last hectic five minutes when the boys let loose and got four deserved penalties.

The first period started out with a lot of fast skating and not much in the way of passing combinations. The rapid pace continued throughout the game and the team work got better to make the game a good one to watch. Griff Pearson, reliable centre, got one goal and an assist to lead the point getters.

Joe (Krusher) Kane was his usual carefree self as he repeatedly set the oncoming forwards on their panties, with his deceptive crossbody blocks.

One of the prettier goals of the piece came in the second period when Bill Paterson took a pass from Dies at centre and burst past the defence to go in and beat goalie Campbell with a hard angle shot. Dinty Moore and Clare Morrison both played very well for Varsity, both showing a great deal of persistence in fighting for the puck.

Line-ups:
Varsity—Goal, Foote; def., Morrison, Waldron; centre, Pearson; wings, Moore, McKillop; subs., Turner, Paterson, Dies, Howson, Kane, Bell, Fingland, McLoughlin.
OAC—Goal, Campbell; def., Stewart, Patterson; centre, Sherven; wings, Hammill, Starrack; subs., Sullivan, Dies, Barnes, Hutcheon, Reeves, Treleaven, Doseger, Brennan.
Officials—Scott, Digby.

First Period

1—Varsity, Turner (Fingland) .. 12:53
Penalty—Fingland.

Second Period

2—Varsity, McKillop (Pearson) . 4:20
3—OAC, Sherven (Hammill) 5:12

Dear Diary

She's Lovely (Ugh) She's Engaged

By HARRY K. RASKY

Oh dearest diary I have come to the end of my rope and dope. Things are great; I've got a mate. When I finish this chapter the book will close on the diary for ever.

Let me tell you the story from beginning to end.

It all began when Peter called me to go to the Athletic Night this Saturday night in Heart House. Peter is a poet, and he knows it. Peter told me all about what was happening and I knew that Peter was the one for me.

Pit-A-Punk

When Peter speaks my liver palpitates. My heart goes pit-a-punk. He makes a basketball game sound like the night life of the gods.

We are going to celebrate the engagement at the Athletic Night. We are going to get there early to see the two preliminary games. In the big Jim, Varsity Seconds will bounce against the O.A.C. Peter loves to see the Seconds bounce. They bring out the poetry in his soul. The Institutional Managers will exhibit themselves with the St. Michael men. (Peter used to be in an institution.)

In the poolroom we will see a water polo game between Varsity Seniors and the all Varsity stars, and the Senior Intercollegiate Swimming meet. Can't to see us sitting there; Peter with the crease vanishing with the steam and me with my hair straightening too. About the tank Peter said:

"If I were a pool—
In me so cool,
Like a doughnut big
You could dunk your wig.

From this you can gather what rank Peter writes.

Big Event

What a night the A-Night will be. The big event of the evening will be in the big Jim when the Queensmen fall apart in front of the Blueboys.

There will be nothing bad about the badminton that will be played at 8. The World-Canadian-Ontario Champions will keep the birdies twittering at a rather rapid rate. (Peter can't stand the sight of blood, and said that it was cruel for a grown man to be banging birdies with a racket.)

Last Night

Some people go to Niagara Falls; we just want to see the basketball fall. Peter got his ticket early to make sure that we get in. This is the last such event, and Peter knew what it meant.

Oh diary just think what Peter and me will do in the wrestling room.

Aro-Mat

There will be dancing and prancing in the Jims. We are going to square dance in the upper Jim. Peter says that there is something rustic about it. Maybe it is the aroma from the mats that causes the Shakespeare to rise from his spirit, and caress the beams of the roof.

Knowing Peter hasn't changed me as you can see.

Dear Diary: I close this book
To become a housewife, queen, and cook.
I guess it's okay
I've used my B.A.
With diligence I guess
to graduate—M-r.-s.

PITCHING SPORTSHOES

By JOHN MOYSE

Senior School moved into the Jennings Cup finals yesterday with a 6-2 triumph over Junior Vic. The blue and gold squad dented the twine three times in the first period before hurdler Johnny Rhame found the range for Vic. After a scoreless second session the Skulemen sewed up the game with three more goals in the third with Fred Ladly replying for the Artsmen. Veenis and MacDonald led the Engineers' scoring with two goals each while Watson and Steed got singletons. Bill Batchelor played a standout game in the Vic nets.

Med III dunked Architecture 5-2 yesterday in a water-polo group playoff. In the first half the builders matched the doctors goal for goal but the latter scored three unanswered goals after the rest period to win the battle for the playoff position. Derry Hubbard pulled the hat-trick for the Medsmen with Bill Lyon and Palmer heaving a goal each. Jim Crang accounted for both Architecture scores.

In basketball St. Mike's A got their first taste of defeat as PHE I racked up a 42-31 victory. The Fizzeds were led by Jim Bell and Geno Genise with 11 and 10 points, respectively. However, Ray Ryan of the double squad, headed the scoring parade with 12 points.

Architecture A defeated Forestry B 31-22 in another major league tilt. High scorers for the Architects were Freedman with 11 points and Crang with six. Anston's seven points topped the losers while Sheldon and Boucher added six.

School Fifth's were never in danger as they doubled Knox A 34-17. Bob Richardson and Max Spears sparked the winners' attack with 11 and 10 points respectively. The Knox scoring was evenly divided with Campbell and Phillips notching a pair of baskets each.

UC thirds beat Vic thirds 30-27 to take over the leadership of group V and enter the playoffs. Ron Cohen netted half the winners' total with Hi Harrison hooping five. John McKenzie paced the Victorians with six points aided by Ken Stevens and Harris with five each.

In the minor leagues IV Engineering Business beat Vic VI 33-21 despite Neil Field's 15-point outburst for the Scarlet and Gold. Webster potted 14 for the Businessmen.

Red Tide Ebbs In W. Europe Declares M.P.

"The Communist tide in Western Europe has been receding ever since the Czechoslovakian coup last year —it was an eye-opener to the other people of Europe," says Donald Fleming, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Toronto-Eglinton.

Mr. Fleming went to England last fall as a Canadian delegate to the Parliamentary Conference, and went on to visit Greece, Italy, France, Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Germany. He spent one month in Great Britain and another touring the countries mentioned. The visit to Greece was made on the invitation of the Greek government.

Mr. Fleming graduated from University College in 1925. He will address the U.C. Alumnae Association on "Inside and Outside the Iron Curtain". Mr. Fleming emphasized the gravity of the situation in Greece, where the civil war has reduced the people to a condition of abject poverty. The war is kept going by the infiltration of Greek guerrilla troops trained in neighboring iron curtain countries.

Mr. Fleming thinks that the countries of western Europe are making very definite progress towards economic recovery. The Marshall Plan has been a big factor in this return to normalcy.

Should Control Of Ruhr Be Returned To Germans UN Forum Topic Tonite

The United Nations Association of Canada, Toronto Branch, will hold a forum meeting this evening at 8:15 in the Ontario College of Education on Bloor Street.

The guest speakers at this open meeting will be Councillor of the French Embassy in Canada, Mr. Jean Basdevant, Mr. D. G. Rohr, and Mr. Marvin Gelber. The subject of the discussion will be "Should Ruhr Control Be Returned to the Germans?"

Mr. Basdevant, a graduate of the University of Paris with a Doctor in Law degree has been with the French Embassy in Ottawa since Jan., 1948. During the war he served in the French resistance movement.

Mr. Rohr is a graduate of this university in history. He is now a lecturer in mediaeval history in the Department of History. Mr. Gelber, also a graduate of this university, is on the National Executive of the United Nations Association of Canada, and President of the Toronto Branch.

IRC Visits Ottawa, See Inner Working Of External Affairs

In what was perhaps the first move of its kind ever attempted by a student group at this university, more than 60 members of the U of T International Relations Club visited Ottawa over the week-end to watch Parliament and more specifically, the Department of External Affairs, in action.

St. Laurent Talk

The sombre, staid halls of Parliament Hill were filled with curious students as government officials led the group through offices behind whose doors the foreign policy of this country is formulated and directed. The trip was highlighted by an address given by Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent, a discussion with External Affairs Minister Lester B. Pearson, and a reception at the French Embassy, and included everything from a visit to the Speaker's chambers to a look at the individual coat hangers reserved for cabinet members.

Arriving in the nation's capital Friday afternoon, the 61 members of the IRC pitched into a heavy schedule as External Affairs officials whisked them through the department in the East Block of the parliament buildings.

Departmental Tour

Escott Reid, Acting Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs, started the tour off with a description of the department's organization after which heads of the Economic Division and the United Nations Division explained the intricacies of their jobs which, they explained, have mushroomed to large proportions as a result of post-war expansion.

Talks by the heads of the political divisions, European, American and Far Eastern, and Commonwealth, dinner in the parliamentary restaurant, and a welcome by Speaker of the House Gaspard Fauteux, climaxed the day's visit which also included sitting in on a session of the House of Commons.

External Affairs officials laid bare the mechanical functions of their organization as heads of the Consular Division, Information Division, Legal Division, and Personnel Division, explained the details of their work.

Students expressed surprise as they watched A. D. Heeney, Secretary to the Cabinet, appear in ski clothes to explain the work of the Cabinet carried on in the Privy Council chamber. Later, students fired questions at External Affairs Minister Pearson who took time out from his job to chat with the

Laval Debaters Gain Double Win

Laval University achieved a double victory last Thursday over Toronto in simultaneous dual-language debates on the resolution "that advertising is detrimental to society".

In Toronto, Susan Decker, III SMC, and Alex MacRae, supporting the affirmative, lost to the visiting Laval team, while Francoise Gagnon, Loretto, and T. Nichtawiz, II SMC, were defeated upholding the negative at Laval.

Only honor accruing to Toronto was that Miss Gagnon was judged the best speaker at the French-language debate at Laval.

Make No Bones Of Chiropractic Aims Aid 'Twisted Outlook'; Put Time In Joint

By JANET HARBRON

Now that it's getting near exams, perhaps you feel "the time is out of joint" or the joint is out of time. Maybe you have a twisted outlook. According to recently interviewed members of the Canadian Memorial Chiropractic College, there is help for you.

The college, located on Bloor Street near St. George, is the latest addition to the campus area, while it isn't actually on the campus or a part of it. A college in the truest sense of the word, it is complete with residence space for 30 men and staff apartments.

The students come from across Canada, from the United States and from many parts of the British Empire. These unassuming red brick buildings have the distinction of composing the first and only chiropractic college in that political unit of which Queen Victoria was once so proud.

Central Location

Why was the College located here? Could it be that more people in the Bloor and St. George district need their spines adjusting? Do they do a lot of business with the York Club? Well—no, according to Dr. Watkins, head of the Chiropractic Clinic. This is a central area with easy access to the facilities of excellent public and University libraries, and this was one of the few central locations in the city with space to build.

The college is a professionally-owned organization being financed by contributions of the Canadian chiropractic profession. It has a charter from the Ontario government. The old building was originally a hotel. The new part, a $130,000 addition, houses an auditorium, classrooms, and laboratories. The X-ray lab, considered by the profession as one of the best in Canada, includes a darkroom that accommodates 16 students at a time.

Chiropractic Theory

Very briefly, the chiropractic theory is based on the premise that disease is often caused by interference of the normal flow of nervous and physical energy along the spinal column, which is the centre of the entire nervous system. A great deal of work has been done in the "taking kinks out of backs" field but chiropractors are investigating fields such as polio in which they have already been active.

All is not serious for the junior chiropractor. There is a Camera Club at the college which has recently helped to publish a new college text on Chiropractic. There is a Public Speaking Club with the prime concern of assisting the students to gain confidence in meeting people. There are hockey and basketball teams and a branch of the Canadian Legion with their own sports line-up.

The Students Council is active in sponsoring bi-monthly dances. There are about 25 women in the college and their club sponsors chiropractic care of under-privileged persons, financing X-rays and generally caring for the patients' health problems.

SIX MORE ISSUES

The remaining six issues of The Varsity are to be published on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday of the next two weeks. The final issue, on Friday, March 11, will contain 16 pages.

Mechanical Building

A Well-Planned Aesthetic Vacuum

By TED ROSS

This is the second of three architectural criticisms of the new buildings on the campus.

The Mechanical Engineers have a new extension on their old building, involving machine laboratories, lecture rooms, staff rooms, and so on. It's rather shocking to see the highly respected and reputable offices of Allward and Gouinlock, capable of such fine work as the new Massey Harris plants on King St. turn out an inept piece of design. Don't misunderstand—a cursory inspection indicates quite efficient planning and mechanical equipment — but aesthetically it just isn't there.

Unrealistic Approach

It is apparently an exercise in a symmetric balance, with the stair tower acting as a pivot and the heavy solid mass of the large lecture rooms on the south balancing the longer but lighter mass on the north. This is a trite and superficial approach which most architectural students abandon by the end of their second year. Admittedly the designer was limited in this site, like the whole of the south end of the campus, was overcrowded to the point of being a slum, and his building had to connect with existing buildings — but surely a more realistic appoach was possible.

This is the second of three achitectural criticisms of the new buildings on the campus.

Obviously it is "street architecture"; that is, it can't be seen from further away than across the street, so good manners and common sense would demand a flat facade with rhythmic openings and interesting textures rather than the harsh bare Queenston limestone. It is irritating to go round behind and find the part that doesn't show is good red brick—surely we're grown up enough to accept real values. The pseudo-drama of the stair tower might look more at home in fascist Germany, glorifying the state. The many, glorifying the state. The clock at the top, far from justifying the tower, merely gives it the authoritative stamp of banality.

Windows For Effect

I understand the strip window effect with the columns a foot or so behind, was considered very modern, very enlightened. The endless rows of small, undifferentiated panes are impressive by their numbers, but quite dull, and the dividing bars and mullions are heavy. Large sheets of glass with opening sash only here and there would have been much more interesting. The pale green color of the steel frames and sash is pleasant, picking up the green tint you get by looking at the edge of a pane of glass, but inside one sees that the laboriously contrived strip windows are merely for exterior effect, really quite meaningless—that is, they don't light one large room, nor yet a row of similar undifferentiated rooms. The structural columns behind the windows pop up through the rooms at quite awkward places, without enough space between them to be useful. The main entrance is not finished but it may be noted that the little canopy over it supported itself contentedly as a cantilever for some months before the big stone column was put under it.

All through the building there are silly examples of neo-classic details, such as flutings, coffered ceilings, wrought iron balustrades and elaborate cove moldings. The interior, although monotonous, is rather pleasant with buff-glazed tile walls. There is one exciting room in the place—the machine design laboratory, on the south end of the top floor—which has continuous windows on three sides as well as two saw-tooth skylights. It seems that a lot of trouble was taken on the south end, considering the results. There are but one large and two medium lecture rooms, with huge amounts of space wasted both under the sloping banks of seats and in an access corridor on the second floor. Remember the monstrous girder installed last spring? There must be an easier way.

This represents the "bandwagon" approach to modern design. At the first of the year "Tolke-Olke" boasted of their "modern" building. I am glad to report that the School of Architecture was given its anatomy before the Mechanical Building was opened.

98 Nominations For HH Seats Vote On March 3

Nominations for Hart House Elections closed last Wednesday. Voting will take place on Thursday March 3. The polling booths will be located in the East Common Room and the Map Room, and voting will take place between 11.00 and 2.15 and 4.00 and 6.15.

Candidates are not allowed to spend more than five dollars for campaign purposes. They are forbidden to give away any articles of value as premiums. They are, however, allowed to distribute blotters. The walls of the main hall are decorated with posters extolling the candidates.

Peter Bryce, Secretary to the Warden, said that the number of candidates, was adequate. He recalled that in 1943 the elections were almost cancelled due to lack of candidates. A total of 98 candidates have been nominated to fill the 61 positions. The house committee, with 19 nominees, had the greatest number of candidates, followed by music with 17 and library with 12.

Four new committees; table tennis, bridge, revolver, and archery, will be voted on at a later date along with the camera and squash committees.

How Much Student Government?

According to one of its official publications, the Student's Handbook, one of the major functions of the Students' Administrative Council is "to act as the representative body of the students of the University of Toronto."

Whether or not Council's present set-up allows democratic representation to the various faculties and schools of this campus has been argued before. What is far more important is whether student government at Toronto, as exemplified by the Council is an actuality or a delusion.

From the time a student enters here as a freshman until he receives his degree, it is impossible for him to avoid hearing such phrases as "a stronghold of truth," "a training ground for citizens of the future," "a bulwark of freedom," and the like. In addition, from his first days at the University, mature men in responsible positions inform him that he will be regarded as an adult, and will be expected to act as such.

On the other hand, he is denied real freedom in managing his own affairs. A mysterious and impotent body present him with a long list of prohibitions from which there is apparently no appeal, and inform him that these will be obeyed or else.

Why the hypocrisy?

In the outside world, citizens have the privilege of electing their own law-giving bodies and thus achieve the final responsibility for their own actions. Yet the actions of some would-be law-givers in a recent by-election raised serious doubts concerning their maturity.

If students are adults, why the paternalism in the matter of discipline on the campus?

If students are children, and deserve such handling, why allow them even the present student governments?

Is there any valid reason why members of the SAC, nearly all of whom are in their senior years, should not be allowed to administer student discipline, in consultation with the University authorities?

If they are incompetent, why trust them with undergraduate funds?

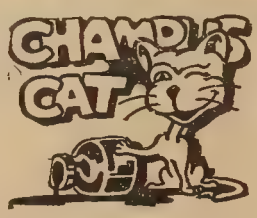
Since elected students are by the very nature of their office closer to the student body than graduates of 10, 20 or 40 years standing, is there any reason to suppose that if entrusted with broader powers, they would tend to misuse them?

Such students might lack experience.

It might be argued that the present members of the Caput lack good judgment if their recent prohibition on the use of lecture rooms for student meetings during lecture hours is any indication.

The edict was announced to the student body; the reasons given were less than adequate.

If any reasons are considered sufficient to answer the natural questions of Toronto students, why flatter students by calling them adults? Why let them have any voice at all in any of their affairs?



COLLEGE BEAUTY CONTESTS—

May they continue until the Judgment Day! Everyone likes to look at co-eds who have a little more of this and a little less of that. And in Canada's colleges, it's natural to look to Player's Cigarettes for fresh, cool smoking.

To The Warden, Hot House,
U. of T.,
Dear Ward,

As the secretary of the Anti-Parsnips League of Canada, it has fallen my lot to inform you that PARSNIPS have been appearing on the menu in the Great Hall of Hot House with increasing regularity.

I would like to point out to you that there is a large body of undergraduate opinion against the use of parsnips in the Great Hall and if this increased use of them gets worse, we will have to take action!

Please see what you can do in this regard,

Yours truly,
P. Boom.

Dear Mr. Boom, October 22, 1948

With regard to your letter of the 2nd instant, I have spoken to the Chief Dietician of the Great Hall and she informs me that we have already bought the winter's supply. Since this is the case there seems no reason to discuss the matter further.

Yours truly,
The Warden.

P.S.:— Please stop calling me "Ward."

Dear Ward, Nov. 16, 1948

Leave us not get tough about this. The League is aware that a winter's supply of parsnips can easily be sold. Ask the C.D. about that, will you?

Meds, SPS Come Next On Blood Donor Drive, Total 300 To Date

Nearly 300 students signed up for blood donations under the current Red Cross appeal last week, according to Miss Miles of the Canadian Red Cross.

Of those signed, 100 are from St. Hilda's, 100 from U.C., and the remainder from Vic.

The response, according to Miss Miles, has been quite good for this time of year. She said the appeal would end in time to enable students to study for their exams.

The Red Cross will be in Hart House tomorrow to sign up interested students. They will be there from 11 to 2 o'clock.

So far, neither S.P.S. nor Meds have been heard from, but it is expected that they will respond during the remainder of the campaign.

Muscle Fibre Research Aided By Recent Grant

Scientists at the University of Toronto will continue fundamental studies of muscle fibres and the circulation of blood in muscle tissue with an additional grant of $5,940. This was announced jointly last week by Dr. Sidney Smith, U. of T. president and Basil O'Connor, president of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

The Varsity's Scientists, headed by Dr. Donald Y. Solandt, Professor of Physiology have been continuously supported in their polio research since 1940 by March of Dimes funds. Primarily the Toronto group is concerned with determining the electrical, physiologic and chemical changes which occur in muscle fibres deprived of normal nerve impulses.

Complementing this investigation will be an evaluation of various physical therapy techniques ordinarily used to correct blood circulatory disorders in polio affected muscle tissue. The ultimate effect of the investigation, it is hoped, will be a reduction in the serious, crippling after-effects of infantile paralysis.

Film Society Shoots Kids In New Creative Venture

By PEARL PARNES

"Lights, action, camera". Lights flash, the camera grinds, a firecracker explodes, and another 20 feet of the University Settlement movie is shot. The film is a new venture by the U. of T. Film Society.

"Oh boy, that's swell", Director Henry Kaplan commends Jimmy "Jesse James" Morton, an eight-year-old with an impish face and a mop of curly hair, on his brilliant mural of a burning building and streamlined firetrucks. Graeme Ferguson, photographer, grinds the camera, and shoots a dramatic clay Mask of Tragedy complete with scar and cigar.

Lloyd Graham Producer

And so the movie goes. Lloyd Graham, School of Social Work, is producer of the film, which shows the activities of the University Settlement and the excellent work it does for the children. The Settlement is a recreation agency affiliated with the U. of T. and supported by the Community Chest. The staff is a permanent group of students from the School of Social Work, and volunteers from Psychology and other courses.

Informal education and recreation are the aims of the Settlement. The children are taken on trips to interesting places such as Malton Airport. The camera followed Art Bell and a group of children to the airport several days ago, concentrating on their reactions as they visited the hangars, the fields, and watched a North Star take off for a transatlantic flight.

All Activities Filmed

A little "pool-shark" concentrating on an antique billiard table with inlay work; Doris Bailey, arts and crafts instructor, mixing paints; Hank Kaplan being paternal to a group of the children; John Howe and Sheila Craig's dramatic class; shots of the ballet, boxing and nursery groups: all become a part of this movie which portrays the whole settlement program. Bea Goldberg, Chris Taylor, Pat Watson, and Bill Hutt are used in scenes on such streets as Fitzroy Terrace, to illustrate the kind of homes most of the children come from.

As Ken McKenzie, Electrical Technician, was explaining that about 1,800 feet would be shot of the Settlement House, a water pistol squirted and a playful little boy named Fumio asked The Varsity reporter for a match. A few minutes later the "outsiders" who were not used to the Settlement day, jumped as a firecracker exploded.

New Venture

The film, a creative project of the U. of T. Film Society, is directed by Hank Kaplan, well-known director and grad of U.C., who is currently working on "Another Part of the Forest" for the Central Ontario Drama Festival. Graeme Ferguson is head photographer, and Peter Wade takes the still shots. Chris Taylor, who has worked with the National Film Board, acts as technical advisor and script man, and Roy Little is publicity director.

Varsity Wins 41-32 Gaels Outclassed In Hoop Encounter

By JOHN KENNEDY

Senior Intercollegiate basketball drew to a close at A-Night Saturday when Varsity, playing a brand of ball reminiscent of the very early part of the season, handed the despondent Golden Gaels of Queen's a 41-32 defeat. The last quarter produced the best ball as Jack Gray and Smiley Brennan got used to each other's type of floor play, and sparked the team to their victory.

Close Contest

There were two points separating the teams at the half as Varsity led 19-17, and by the end of the third quarter the Blues only managed to lengthen their lead to a 32-28 count. However, in the last period the Blues pulled up their sox and won going away.

Nick Volpe was the high man for Varsity in the first period as he threw in seven of his team's 11 points. Nick always seemed to be Johnny-on-the-spot to take passes from tricky guards McManus and Zeaton. Queen's had loads of scoring chances but couldn't seem to get them in. Doug Tyndall and Bill LaChance looked after most of the rebounds at their own end and did fairly well under the enemy basket. The quarter-time score was a mere 11-8 for our side.

Brennan Hurt

The second quarter didn't produce any more exciting play than the first although Brennan and Gray began to work well together. Both men are very fast and don't waste any time on a fast break. Unfortunately Brennan was playing with a bad ankle and wasn't quite his usual bouncing self. Ed hurt his ankle at the end of the half and had to be assisted from the floor. However, he was able to continue in the third and fourth quarters.

"Giant" Soutter of Queen's played terrific ball for his team in the third quarter. In fact he carried them through the period with his good ball-handling and floor generalship. Tyndall had to be on his toes to keep in step with him as Soutter must be at least 6' 5".

The Zeat Performs

In the last quarter, Wally Zeaton, crowd pleaser de luxe, feeling that the game was well in hand, performed a couple of stunts designed to hand the large crowd a few laughs. At one point Wally nonchalantly looped one over his head while looking the other way from a position in the upper part of the Queen's key. Shortly after, he decided that he would like to bounce one in. Unfortunately, this effort didn't come any closer than his other stunt. It was the first time this year that Wally really dipped into his extensive bag of tricks.

Program Director For Campus Radio Required By SAC

Applications are now being received for the positions of Director of Radio Programs and Director of Radio Workshop for the 1949-50 season, Radio Commissioner Paul Fauteux said Saturday.

He stressed the positions require qualities of personality, executive ability, and imagination. "Technical or practical radio experience would be an advantage but are not necessary," he said.

Applications must be submitted to the S.A.C. office in Hart House before noon on Friday, March 4, and must be in writing, Fauteux said.

"Radio," Fauteux stated, "has made great strides this year, but there are many ambitious plans for the future and we need good men and women to carry out this work."

The Radio Committee winds up its activities for this year with a general meeting on March 10. Reports of the various sub-committees will be given at this meeting and the recording of the Engineer's program will be replayed. The new directors will be introduced at this meeting.

Discuss Organization Of Baptist Students To Work With S.C.M.

Organization of a Baptist Student Fellowship at the University of Toronto was discussed last week by representatives from four Toronto Baptist churches and members of the Student Christian Movement and the Inter-Varsity Fellowship.

The churches represented were Yorkminster, Walmer Road, Park Road, and College Street. Rev. C. G. Stone, of Park Road church said there was much work to be done in the realm of denominational education at the university level. Such education, he said, would lead to more co-operation between inter-denominational groups.

Aids To Living

How To Get A Big "A"

By HERB K. WOOD

Since this is the up-and-atom age, and where the devil has leave to take the hindmost, what could be more startling than a man who willingly lets you in on the secret of his success?

His friends call him the Mr. Belvedere of Varsity. (Remember Clifton Webb in "Sitting Pretty"?) He's a hypnotist, a writer, a designer of gimmicks, and the proud possessor of two congratulatory letters from President Sidney Smith. You know, of course, that such letters only appear when your average marks are —"Ouch, . . . hey, quit twisting my arm, Doug. OK, I won't tell them."

You regard the letters with a jaundiced eye, perhaps, but that's okay, the important thing is, how does he do it. Well, I'll tell you; he's got a system. It's a study plan whereby everybody, or almost, can attain a big A as easily as falling off a greased pole. What . . . how much does he want for the system? Nothing . . . that's what I've been trying to tell you. What's his name? Doug. Jones, III, U.C.

Looking at him, you can see a resemblance to Mr. Belvedere, but Doug. would dismiss that simply as preparatory set. That's the tip-off to a subject very dear to his heart, Psychology, and the one he plans to specialize in after graduating this year. Get him into a conversation and mention studying habits and he'll draw a memory retention curve at the first flicker of skepticism.

In spite of these habits, Doug. is quite normal looking; wears a brush-cut becomingly and uses his hands in abrupt gestures to emphasize what he is saying. He's crazy about plaid shirts, but wears no horn-rimmed glasses.

Doug. was in the Air Force for four years as a radar mechanic. On his station he worked to perfect a signalling method in order to drop men or material "in a stick," instead of playing a game of paper-chase across the countryside. It was an every-night affair around the field to see German-suited saboteurs smoking a last cigarette before being dropped quietly in some French field. However, enough of these things; the forthcoming spring penmanoeuvres are the important thing, and that system we mentioned.

T'Ain't Easy

Doug. was a trifle disappointing at first, as he stated that, "You have to do the work and it ain't easy."

As you are all aware, learning is directly connected with motivation, but motivation is you, so you see, there's no escape. However, there are techniques that are helpful.

Take a look at your marks, and you will notice your highest mark in the subject you find most interesting and the converse with the boring subject. Now, Doug. says, "Make it interesting. Connect the subject with everyday life." This brings up the idea of activity vs. passivity.

Boring Lectures Made Interesting

When you're sitting in on the next boring lecture, when you start to separate the "wheat from the chaff," then stop . . . whoa. Start taking notes, take a look at the lecturer. In this way, you are using three sense medullaties, including listening. And that's good.

For work at home Doug. recommends a few tips. Rewrite your notes. He types his. In this way you are using two sense medullaties, seeing and writing, besides, you're practising what you will be doing in the exams. Again, "gen sessions" are ideal he says. In this way you eliminate wrong fixations and introduce new ideas, by progressive information about your responses.

Doug, and his friends have been meeting regularly for the last two years. The usual number is five, but toward the term's end the usual five members increase to thirteen. One notable "gen session" lasted from 1 p.m to 2 a.m.

You Study Too Much

"Most people study too much," he says. Take a rest regularly otherwise products of fatigue and boredom set in affecting your studying. Most people, too, neglect the boring stuff till exam. time. Results are better if studying is spread out.

worsening. Yesterday as I entered the Great Hall, I saw a chap read the menu, mutter "Dammit, PARSNIPS AGAIN," and head for the Tuck Shop. Unless this is some insidious method of increasing the business of the Tuck Shop, your motives in allowing Parsnips to appear on the menu must be purely personal. Do you like parsnips?

Yours truly,
P. Boom.

P.S. The least you could do would be to tell them to stop mixing parsnips with carrots.

Dear Mr. Boom, Dec. 3, 1948

In answer to your last letter, I must admit that I am fairly fond of parsnips, but not too often. This however does not influence my action on this matter in any way.

I have spoken to the Chief Dietician about selling their parsnips, but she claims that the menus are planned out far in advance and no suitable substitute could be provided at this late date.

Yours,
The Warden.

P.S. For the last time stop calling me "Ward."

Dear Warden, Dec. 16, 1948,

These petty excuses cannot be tolerated much longer. Are you or are you not going to take action? If you do not intend to do anything about this, then we will get someone in there who will!

Several chaps have complained of the tremendous loggy feeling brought on by eating a double order of whipped potatoes. This suffering must be stopped! By the way, Merry Christmas.

Yours truly,
P. Boom.

Dear Mr. Boom, Jan. 6, 1949

Thank you for your last letter. Happy New Year.

Since this is a new year, I would implore you to forget this whole 'campaign' of yours, start cut afresh. Good grief, man, Parsnips can't be THAT important!

So long,
The Warden.

Dear Sir, Jan. 20, 1949

When you imply, as you did in your last letter, that championing the cause of the Anti-Parsnips League of Canada is a sideline with me, you are giving me just cause for murder. "Forget about this whole campaign", you say! Bah! The thing cannot be dismissed in a few words, man!

Young boys are going without their proper dinners every day in droves because of parsnips, and you say forget the whole thing! As long as I live I shall fight for this cause no matter what you or your kind say!

Get some action on this thing within ten days, or I am taking it to OTTAWA!

P. Boom.

Dear Mr. Boom, Feb. 3, 1949

My patience is rapidly being exhausted. The diatribes in your letters, against all that I ever stand for, cannot continue further. If you do not stop this nonsensical escapade, I shall cut off your membership to Hot House.

Yours truly,
The Warden.

Dear Warden, Feb. 10, 1949.

I laugh at you in defiance. But I will give you one last chance to come across. The deadline is Feb. 21, 1949.

ART ∞ MUSIC ∞ DRAMA

Julius Caesar

This week the 1948-49 Hart House Theatre season is going down, colors flying, guns booming, with Shakespeare's 'Julius Caesar'. Colors and sounds predominate, and rightly so, because, as far as the play is concerned, Dr. Johnson's statement that it is somewhat cold and unaffecting and fails to agitate strongly is an unusually mild verdict coming from so outspoken a gentleman. But heaven forbid that one should turn this rather thinnish branch off the mighty tree into a stick to be used against director and performers.

If new proof of Robert Gill's eminence as a master of stagecraft were needed, this production would supply it. One should try and abstract for a moment a diagram tracing the movements of the paths of the individual members in a mob scene. One would find a complex pattern fully exploiting all three dimensions serving to create the illusion of a milling crowd and consisting of just the right number of people commensurate with the size of the stage. Add to this the judicious choice and distribution of costume colors under the appropriate lighting and completely disciplined shouting at the right pitch and in the right degree of confusion—when you stop to realize the amount of controlled imagination and work invested in such a scene of, say, two minutes' duration or recall the decorative quality in the dynamics of the two white togae of the first Brutus-Cassius scene then you have an inkling of Mr. Gill's achievement. The sets were made for versatility; platforms and columns are moved smoothly and rapidly for amazingly differentiated effects. The lighting is used with the utmost skill of which the silhouetting of the group around Brutus' tent against the beautifully color-sensitive rear wall is only one example. Only the final sunburst and appearance of the ghost may be open to question.

The production is much more than a stirring spectacle; with Gill as director one is never required to worry about the acting which is no small relief in a cast of these proportions. David Gardner gave his Anthony on a high emotional pitch, and rightly so; he supplied the largest share of heat to a play that needs a lot of it, if all the stabbing and hacking is to be made plausible. His funeral oration was a nicely-sustained display of histrionic intelligence.

If Donald Davis (Brutus), and John Walker (Cassius), are mentioned in one breath it is not to imply that either performance could not stand on its own feet, but theirs are almost team roles in a rather rigid antithetical way. Both used their great talents well to break the euphuistic spell. Both too became, to some extent, victims of their own assets. Davis' voice is so pleasing that it often seems too good for a man in the throes of an inner conflict. Walker seems to relish the play of changing expressions and gestures, in short the muscular business so much that the spectator tends to relish along with him to the detriment of the total conception. Eric House's terse and witty Casca emerged as a major contribution in spite of the smallness of the part.

There is ample support in the text for William Hutt's interpretation of Caesar as approaching the caricature. If this raises difficulties concerning the reactions of those about him, they and quite a few others can safely be left at Shakespeare's doorstep. The disproportionately small incidence of women's roles seems to me another indication of the discomfort that he must have felt towards the whole thing. Robin Taylor as Calpurnia and Marylo Wishart as Portia did well what they were allowed to do. John Golding's charming Lucius must suffice as typical of a great deal of good work done in the numerous minor parts.

Jean Marie Scott

Conservatory recitals are usually attended by two factions: Those who come to jeer and those who come to cheer. If any of the former were still infidels at the end of Thursday night's concert it was certainly not the fault of the performing artist. Jean Marie Scott Mezzo-soprano, possesses a vocal quality pleasing to the ear, a keen sense of musicianship, and an easy, graceful stage deportment—a combination all too rarely found amongst singers.

In the bombastic vocal gymnastics of "Nacqui all' affan e al pianto" from Rossini's "Cenerentola" Miss Scott romped through the tortuous passages displaying a controlled and highly developed dramatic technique which could handle the individual styles of Campra, Gluck, and Rossini with equal ease. The melancholy but youthful "Songs of the Wayfarer" (Mahler) were interpreted with keen musical insight and understanding. Of Ravel's "Chansons Madecasses" we considered "Il est doux" the most enchanting; accompanists Rowland Pack (cello) and Dirk Keetbaas can always be counted upon to turn in a good performance.

Piano accompanist John Coveart was highly instrumental in making Miss Scott's recital as successful as it was. We enjoyed him thoroughly in the Mahler songs and the Brit-

PETTY ATTEMPT

The Editor, The Varsity.

We have just listened to the last chapter of "The Varsity Story." What a sad conclusion! As supposedly typical residence girls, we apparently have much to learn. So far, we have not experienced life as presented in Thursday night's performance.

After spending some time in discussion, we have reached the conclusion that this must be some frustrated male's attempt to avenge his disappointment in love.

Typical co-eds perhaps, but not from Vic. We may sing "The Persian Kitten", but that is the extent of our feline characteristics. True a petty remark might happen to creep into the conversation on occasion, however, we never resort to the juvenile backbiting and outright slander that was employed throughout the broadcast.

As women of this University, we value the respect not only of our male contemporaries, but of the citizens at large—the taxpayers, who help to finance education. We resent this petty attempt to degrade women in residence. Surely "The Varsity Story" has a higher aim.

If these are "the future leaders of the future leaders of Canada", we resign.

OPEN MINDS

The Editor, The Varsity:

The Scientific Age is on the wane. In its place is waxing the Age of enthusiastic vocal support, and Ideals. This should be reasonably clear considering the world conflict of ideologies taking place in the 20th century.

Those people that condemned scientific discoveries, involving the Truth are now condemning ideologies which also contain part of the Truth.

There should be little doubt in the minds of thinking people that each of the ideologies in the world at present have their own points of superiority. Democracy teaches freedom of thought and responsibility. Communism teachers the sharing of property by all. Fascism teaches allegiance to a cause and the instinct to obey the higher powers—or directing influences.

Certainly these three major ideologies have their associated disadvantages and evils, but let it be remembered that there is some good in all. Until the time comes when we have perfected our own form of government to the point where it contains the good which is in all other existing governments are we justified in criticizing other governments.

What of the people who are closing their minds to communism now? Is this giving freedom of speech and allowing the hearer to decide the value of the speaker's statements based on his own understanding. I have come to find that those who are most disturbed by any influence are probably weak in that respect themselves. These people are AFRAID TO OPEN THEIR MINDS to a different idea than what they have been taught. AFRAID—because they might have to change their mode of living or understanding. And I confess that I am in this class, too.

Let us then open our minds to the Truth again, since this was the function of the first universities. Let us then DARE to be broadminded. Otherwise, we have failed in the task of living.

NAIVE EDITORIAL

The Editor, The Varsity;

For some time I have been reading The Varsity and have been impressed with the sincerity and depth of feeling with which Varsity writers long for peace on earth and good will toward men. At the same time I marvel at the naivety of the editor who wrote "Cry Havoc" in The Varsity, Wednesday Feb. 16.

If the general public through the press, radio, and movies, is given an alarming picture of world events, I am glad to hear it. The writer of "Cry Havoc" should pull his head out of the sand. World events are alarming. I admire him for his idealism, but myself am sensible of the fact that failing a moral revolution in Russia and the United States, and that seems unlikely, peace can be realized only by commanding the balance of power.

Yes, we know that war is hell on earth, and it would be that much farther away if more people were not afraid to take the uphill path to peacetime conscription.

CHINA REPORT

The Editor, The Varsity:

The letters written by some of your readers in answer to your recent editorial "Cry Havoc" raised some interesting questions. The letter signed by K. C. Thompson urged that Canada prepare for war in order that we may not "fall an easy victim to the rapacity of the Kremlin." He cited China as an example of a country which was rapidly doing just that. It amazes me that university students should call the spread of ideas and the coming of social change, Russian aggression. The struggle that is going on in China would be going on whether there had been a Russian Revolution or not. It started long before 1917 and has its roots in the social and economic structure of that country. There is no evidence of Russian interference in the Chinese civil war, (even General Marshall has agreed to that) but the pouring into China of billions of dollars of military help by the American and Canadian governments is a well-known fact. Is this not an attempt to dominate another country? The fact that all this help was of no avail merely illustrates the fact that force merely delays but does not stop the spread of social change.

I would agree with Mr. Thomson that there is danger of the outbreak of war in the world at the present time. But is the Kremlin the source of this danger? Let's see what a prominent Canadian business journal "The Monetary Times", has to say about this. "Inasmuch as the Russians appear to be achieving great success with the peace and are unlikely to gain more by war, the conflict will have to be OF OUR MAKING, sparked by some event either in Berlin or elsewhere in Europe where the West and Russia may come into conflict."

"To be or not to be" that is the question facing the profit system today. However, preparations for war and the "guns instead of butter" slogan that must accompany such preparations will not destroy the desire for the social and economic equality and abundance that socialism brings. People will always strive to bring about these aspirations and all that war preparations and war do is delay their fulfillment and intensify the eventual struggle.

Plans for the trip began taking root last fall, explained Ed Cosford, IV Trinity, president of the IRC. The matter was discussed with Mr. Pearson when he visited Toronto recently and, in co-operation with the Information Division of the Department of External Affairs, final arrangements were made. The International Relations Club at McGill which made a similar trek last year have planned another some time in March, explained Cosford.

Jerry is adaptable when it comes to doing the floral decor of weddings and receptions. He gives as much care and attention to a simple 2 dollar corsage as to something in the gorgeous category. Flowers are his hobby and he loved 'em, respects the people who love them too, gets fun out of making floral groups, both great and small. Park Plaza corner.

GUIDED by the pretty accurate sense of direction which guides the majority of university girls in the matter of practical day-by-day choice of wearables, the Evangeline Shops have anticipated the blouse and skirt trend by observing how enthusiastically campus leaders took to it across the country earlier in the year. Their collection of light wool, crepe and tweed skirts is one to study for inspiration on partnership-dressing. All of 'em less than a ten dollar bill, some much less, and the blouses have been chosen to adapt themselves to either daytime or evening wear. Belts and costume jewellery set keynote for day or night wear.

MANY SECOND RATE ICE CREAMS have been accepted by the public for the simple reason that the impact of the frozen flavour sometimes dulls the critical palate. But here's a test . . . try a de-frosted ice cream and report as to flavour. We let some Tudor, the new luxury ice cream, become de-frosted, and the result was that the pure fruit and flavour, drowned in rich creamy texture was almost as delicious as the frozen dessert, a test we'd like you to try and report on. Tudor casts a little more, tastes considerably better.

TEN PERCENT ON a coat or overcoat is no small concession to a man with a knowledgeable understanding of the dollar. Teasdall's offer ten percent to college men on suits and overcoats because they do considerable trade with the U. of T., and are not averse to doing more. You'll like Teasdall's men. They're pretty good at sizing up a man, incidentally, and accommodating with an easy payment plan if such proceedings seem desirable. 804 Yonge Street, above Bloor, is a friendly spot for the acquiring of male attire.

YOUR OWN LOCAL SPORTSWEAR SHOP. F. J. Watt, Park Plaza, is offering one of the most complete round-out-ups of sportswear of the spectator type, in their history. Suits, coats, sweaters, skirts all have new zest in colour and line . . . the pastel wool sweaters inspire a girl to better things in the way of colour harmonies. Baby blue wool skirt with violet sweater, for instance, pale grey with yellow, toast 'n coffee with oyster. Have a look, draw your own specifications for Springtime campus-wear reform.

Photog. Ex.

The Camera Committee of Hart House are to be congratulated on the present exhibition of photographs. Deviating from former practice, members selecting the prints to be hung resorted to ruthless cutting. The result is a salon of surprising quality.

Two pictures by J. E. Guillet particularly impressed me. One, a study in reflections on water, owes its success to its extreme simplicity. I stood before this photograph for a long time wondering whether the introduction of another element into the composition would improve it or reduce it to the commonplace, and still feel undecided. Mr. Guillet has touched on the borders of oversimplicity, but in doing so has carried off the job very well indeed. Impressive from a technical standpoint is his other photograph, "The Powder Mill," in which the entire print assumes the bluish-grey quality of the dust encrusted building itself.

C. D. Woodley's "D-a-m-n", graphically portraying the unfortunate combination of a lady, a very muddy road, and a flat tire provides a touch of humor which must come as a welcome relief to anyone who is impressed with the developing monotony of passing from picture to similar picture.

Among the portraits, I particularly liked "Portrait No. II" by Joseph Chang. The happy combination of lighting and the unconventional placement of the figures in the picture frame lends to the model a sense of dignity not unmixed with human warmth, qualities difficult to discover in the faces of the cover girls appearing in the exhibit.

Technically, the salon is disappointing. The relentless search for print quality could have been a trifle more relentless, and a number of the prints are carelessly mounted with little attention paid to eradicating the ever present, ever objectionable dust spot. Whether one is a photographic purist or not, the fact is that spotting can be successfully accomplished without changing the photograph into another art form.

I have said that the general quality of the salon is high, but this is true only of the black and white entries. One wonders why the same policy of ruthless cutting was not employed in the selection of colour slides, for many of these seem to have as their only qualification the fact that they are in colour. We are no longer back in the days when the achievement of satisfactory colour was in itself a definite accomplishment, and a valid enough criterion for salon acceptance.

There are many pretty pictures in the Hart House Salon—and therein lies its biggest fault—a fault not uncommon in photographic exhibits. The photographs are pleasant to look at, but only pleasant. One is struck by the relative paucity of mature ideas, by the sense of sameness, by the somewhat uncomfortable feeling that most of these pleasant pictures have been seen many times before.

Photography is a medium capable of infinite possibilities. It is frustrating when these possibilities are fleglected or only partially realized. One has the feeling that many of the prints on exhibit are the result of a careful search through negative files, looking for a "good' picture, and this definition of "good" only means a resemblance to pictures that have appeared in previous salons or publications. Undoubtedly the photographer deserves credit for recognizing such a picture in his files, but can this, the performing of the mechanical operation first and the selection of the picture later, be called creative art? Does not the definition of creative art include the conception of an idea and then the translation of this idea into material form?

I have no quarrel with those who like to take beautiful pictures. Any such dispute would be with their interpretation of the word "beautiful". But even if we regard beauty as only a segment of life, then so much of life remains waiting for interpretation that is as yet largely neglected. It awaits only the application of the creative-interpretative powers of the photographer, with the photographer, rather than the camera dominant. But perhaps that is why photographers are more often called picture-takers than picture-makers.

Meds Coeds Lose In Last 40 Secs

In a women's semi-final hockey game on Friday, Meds lost in the dying seconds of the game when Vic I knocked in two goals to win 2-0.

The two counters came in the last forty seconds of the game when Alison Jeffries poked in a pass from Jessie Nugent and fifteen seconds later Jan Martin scored from Di Rogers.

Until then the spirited Meds girls had matched and even surpassed the Vic team, last year's champs, in the play. Their Irene Hain broke away twice only to be foiled by Jean Rose, the Vic goalie and be put off by the fast-approaching Jean Mevers.

Jeffries skated an outstanding game for Vic and managed her stick ably despite the splint on her broken thumb.

The co-eds giving the drive to the fighting Meds team were forward Sally Sarles and defencemen Estelle Heakes and Joan Fletcher, who combined to keep out the Vic attackers until the end of the tilt.

COLE SCAN

We saw a film entitled 'Three Godfathers' last week, which we think puddles around in a new low-water mark. Without a doubt, it is one of the worst stinkers that ever emanated from Hollywood. The story, if we can dignify it by such a term, concerns three bad men of the West who deliver a baby in the desert, discover a Bible and stagger through the picture under the delusion that they are the Three Wise Men of the East. Unfortunately, only two of them die during the early part of the picture leaving poor John Wayne to carry the rest of the burden alone. He also carries the infant, like a football, nobly expiating his sins on the scorching desert giving voice to sentiments that would cause the child to squirm with embarrassment. We sat through to the end hoping that at least we would be rewarded bby the sight of some satisfying gun-play, but no luck. John Wayne will live to ride again, but we think he'll have to ride hard and long to leave the memory of this one buried in the swirling desert dust.

Behind The News

Why Editors Go Gray

The following is what a budding young reporter did with the assignment to cover a lecture in Room 225 of the Mechanical Building.

At somewhere around 4.00 p.m. on Friday, in Rm. 255 of the New Mechanical Bldg., Prof. or Dr. Something-or-other addressed a group of what I took to be Engineering students. If I was in the right room, the address or lecture was probably on Wind Tunnels, but it could be wrong.

How to Get to Room 255

In order to get to room 255, in the Mechanical Bldg. (new) you go first to the Wallberg Bldg. on College. This is not the Mechanical Bldg. (new) but by the time you have found this out, you at least know where the Wallberg Bldg. (also new) is. Since the only other new bldg. near you is that Functional Nightmare (new) between the Mining Bldg. (old) and The Skulehouse (also old), you naturally try it. By some oversight on the part of the Board of Control, the Board of Governors, and The Caput, this turns out to be the Mechanical Bldg. (new). Now the only thing you have to do is find Room 255. This sounds pretty easy. It may be easy for Engineers, but I'm an artsman. Since the Room number is 255, naturally I looked first on the second flood. There is NO Room 255 on the second floor of the Mechanical Bldg. (new). Next, getting a little panicky, I tried the third floor. As I more or less expected, there is also no Room 255 on the third floor. This is only logical. It hit me pretty hard though. I stumbled into a dark corner in order to sob my little heart out in silence. I had just got nicely started when a raucous bunch of SPeSSers came down a shadowy flight of stairs at the end of a hall, and they were saying one to another, "What a lecture, what a lecture". That's all they said until I asked them if that was the lecture on wind tunnels in the mythical Room 255. Then they said "yep". I then asked them if they would be so kind as to direct a broken old man to the aforesaid room. They did. Room 255 of the Mechanical Bldg (new) is not on the second floor, neither is it on the third floor. It is just between. To get to it, one goes up to the third floor, down a coupla halls, down a flight of short stairs, then along another short hall, and there one is. And there I was. All alone. All alone, that is, except for the cleaning woman. I asked her if she had heard the lecture. She had. I then asked her if she remembered what is was all about. She told me that she had heard only the last five minutes of it, but that what she heard was all about "angles of incidence", "angles of refraction", "Waves of penetration" and such-like Tom-Foolery. So if I was in Room 255 of the Mechanical Bldg. (new), I don't think that that is where this lecture was held. I'm confused.

And you know what you can do with your byline . . .

ATHLETIC DIRECTORATE ELECTIONS
1949-50

The Electoral Meeting of the University of Toronto Athletic Association to elect representatives to the Directorate for 1949-50, will be held on Thursday, March 10th, at 4 p.m. sharp, in the Debates Room, Hart House (south side, upstairs).

Under the Constitution of the Athletic Association (Article IX, section 4), all Athletic Club Executives are entitled to send representatives to this meeting. These representatives must be male undergraduates of the University of Toronto or one of the affiliated colleges, who are proceeding to a degree, are in actual attendance upon lectures, and who have paid the annual fee required (By-law 1). The Club Executives are being notified to meet at an early date, appoint their representatives and give them their credentials, for the electoral meeting. On presentation of these credentials at the Athletic Office on the morning of March 10th, representatives will be given voting tickets.

A student to be elected to the Directorate must, at the time of his nomination, be in the second or higher year of his course, at the University, but not in his final year. The nominations must be in writing on the form provided for the purpose, signed by two male undergraduate members of the Athletic Association, in good standing, and filed with Secretary of the Athletic Association not later than 6 p.m. Monday, March 7th. The nomination form may be obtained at the Athletic Office.

Doug. believes in making up a schedule of study, so that each subject receives some time each day. A variety of subjects introduces a change," but more important, sets back the boredom threshold. Without a break between subjects there is retroactive inhibition.

"What about memory system?" we asked. "A memory system takes time to learn; you are better off learning the work itself," he said. And it's no use saying you haven't a good memory around here. According to Doug., no one has a good or poor memory; they have either good or poor specific habits. The same applies to concentration.

Just about here, Doug. whipped out a pencil and drew a retention curve. The largest percentage loss of meaningful material occurs following practice, he said. Now, by re-reading your notes before they're cold you bring the curve back up. By bringing the curve back up, you lose, say, 15 per cent from 80 per cent remembered, otherwise you lose the 15 per cent from 45 per cent only remembered at a later date.

Lots of Reading Required

This plan requires a lot or reading so you have to be fast, that is, 250-350 words per minute. First of all, read the whole to get the sense, then re-read to get the details. Underlining while you're re-reading keeps you active and brings into play two sense medullaties.

"Warm milk and biscuits are not a preparation for studying," he says. A quiet place is best but small background noise is permissible. A strong stimulus inhibits the finer thinking processes. Pictures of Betty Grable come under the heading of distractions. A hard chair is better than a soft one.

Doug. has a few words about writing exams successfully. He's a firm believer in the Halo effect, that is, setting a favorable impression in the beginning paragraphs by doing the questions you know best first.

Also, making a digest of notes prior to the exams, checking old exam. papers for the common thread running through them and practising writing answers to probable exam. questions are sure ways of increasing your marks.

Finally, the night before the exam., go to bed early. There is more fixation in your sleep.

So there's the system, guys and gals. You know what it has done for one man.

St. Mike's Oust Vic In Playoffs

Saint Michael's College "A" hockey squad put on a four goal scoring spree in the last frame to overpower Sr. Vic. in the semi-finals Friday in one of the hardest played games in the interfac loop to date. The Mikemen took an 8-5 decision as Sam O'Hara and Jim Coughlin made the three goal bracket to pace the winners.

Small flareups punctuated the contest which recalled the Mulock Cup rivalry of last fall. The red and gold pucksters knotted the count in the middle frame but the saints had power plus left in the final period as they scored four goals to Vic's single. Ron Baxter netted two for the double blue as did Don Crawford for the Vicmen.

Varsity Coeds Win "Bronze Baby"

"Boots" Bags Ball

The high jumper (number 11) is Betsy "Boots" McFaul who is displaying the prowness she used to good advantage in the intercollegiate basketball meet here over the week-end. The Toronto team won all of their three games to bring the 'Bronze Baby' back home after her stay at Queen's last year.

Swim Win For McGill Ends 13 Yr. Drought

By BRUCE MACDONALD

Sparked by Adin Merrow and his spectacular win in the 440 yard free style event, the McGill Intercollegiate Swimming Team splashed to a comparatively easy win in Hart House last Saturday night to cop their first intercollegiate swimming title since 1936.

The McGill squad broke three Intercollegiate records in the course of their win. A new mark of 3 min. 7.8 sec was set by the Redmen in the 300 yard medley relay. Adin Merrow smashed the other two records in individual events.

In the 100 yard back stroke, Merrow completed the distance in 63 seconds to shave 3.8 second off the old Intercollegiate mark. His win in the 440 yard free style, however, was the highlight of the evening. Swimming his powerful back stroke throughout the whole race, Merrow outsped all his opponents using the crawl, and finished 1.2 seconds under the former record. Runner-up G. Titus also completed the race in record-breaking time.

Ken Tulley of Varsity was outstanding in the diving competition, and his beautiful display regained the Intercollegiate Diving Championship for him. D. Thom of Toronto also put on a fine show in the diving meet.

The McGill team dominated nearly every event in the meet, and showed superior conditioning to both the Varsity and Queen's squads. The final standings were McGill 57, Toronto 25, and Queen's 16.

In the water-polo game played immediately after the swim meet, the Varsity Seniors downed the Intramural "All-Stars" by a 7-2 score. J. Crang and N. Mortimer were high scorers for the Varsity squad with two goals apiece, while L. Teskey and J. Fydell each scored one counter for the "All-Stars".

Swimming Meet Results:—
300 yd. Medley Relay: 1, McGill; 2, Toronto.
220 yd. Free Style: 1, Titus (M); 2, Teskey (T); 3, Issenman (M)
50 yd. Free Style: 1, Quayle (M); 2, Humphries (Q); 3, Douglas (Q).
Diving 1, Tulley (T); 2, Thom (T); 3, Douglas (Q).
100 yd. Free Style: 1, Christie (M); 2, Young (M); 3, Arnold (T).
100 yd. Back Stroke: 1, Merrow (M); 2, Mingie (M); 3, Wigie (T).
200 yd. Breast Stroke: 1, Kopen (M); 2, Rosen (T); 3, Errington (M).
440 yd. Free Style: 1, Merrow (M); 2, Titus (M); 3, Reimer (Q).
200 yd. Sprint Relay: 1, McGill; 2, Queen's.

Which One Got The Bird Here?

Athletic Nite fans were treated to a display of championship calibre badminton Saturday night between the basketball games. The crowd, mainly composed of people with only a nodding acquaintance with the game, cheered madly at the experts' skill and antics.

Four shuttlecock aces were present in the persons of Jack Purcell, Ted Pollock, Bud Porter and Jack Muir. Purcell, a Toronto resident is retired world professional champion. He held this title for several years and hung up his pro racquet without suffering a single defeat.

Ted Pollock is a Varsity student in III Meds and is the holder of the Ontario Singles championship as well as being the co-holder of the Canadian and Ontario doubles championship. Purcell and Pollock teamed up to trade serves with Muir and Porter. The champions were defeated in the first encounter by a 15-10 margin but came back to take the second 15-13 after a fierce battle.

Blues Edge McGill, Nip Western 26-22, Rap Queen's 32-21

By HELEN PROBERBS

The Varsity women's Intercollegiate Basketball team captured the Bronze Baby from Queen's on the weekend. In a round robin between Western, McGill, Queen's and Toronto, the Blues came out on top winning three straight games.

The final game brought the Baby to Toronto, who downed Western 26-22. Both teams were fast, chalking up almost as many fouls as baskets. Varsity never had a lead of more than four points but London just couldn't tie it up due to the Blues' terrific defence led by Betsy McFaul and Mickey Thomas. Gwen Smith shone for the Blue and White displaying beautiful playing style and spectacular shots plus deception and great backchecking.

Mable Gillen, of Western was the outstanding player of the four teams. She was a treat to watch either scoring herself or setting up all the other plays. Western showed great team work throughout and therefore favored for the Baby.

Varsity: Gwen Smith 10; Rosanna Kelly 7; Betty Fitzgerald 4; Shirley Speck 2; Ann Bradshaw 2; Eleanor Lever 1
Western: Mabel Gillen 14; Jean Shillington 3; Ruth Blezard 2; Marilyn Bell 2; Anne Baker 1

Varsity came through to win her second game of the round robin defeating Queen's 32-21 Saturday morning. The first half found both teams taking turns sinking shots ending it at 13-13. Varsity surged ahead in the last part sparked by Gwen Smith, highest individual scorer of the game. Queen's Pat Gardiner sank some beauties in the first stanza but her shots were off in the last part.

Varsity: Gwen Smith 13; Rosanna Kelly 6; Ann Bradshaw 4; Betty Fitzgerald 4; Shirley Speck 3; Eleanor Lever 2.
Queen's: Pat Gardiner 10; Joan Keough 6; Marion Reid 3; Connie Bennet 2.

The second tilt of the morning was copped by Western from McGill 33-22. Half time score favoured the Redmen 14-11 and looked as if there might be an upset as Western was definitely the favoured team in the league. The latter half found the Purple and White walking away making 22 points to McGill's 8 due to Western's defence by Mary Shirk and Joanne Thrasher.

Western: Marilyn Bell 12; Mabel Gillen 9; Jean Shillington 7; Ann Baker 5.
McGill: Molly Camp 9; Louise MacFarlane 6; Wendy Cleugh 4; Margaret Dix 2.

The first game Saturday afternoon saw the already ousted Queen's and McGill battling it out in order to round out the robin. It turned out to be the best game of the series with McGill edging out the Tri-color 27-24. Montreal held the lead all the way with speedy Wendy Cleugh chalking up points in the first quarter and the energetic jumping of the guards for rebounds. The score would have zoomed higher but for Queen's captain guard, Betty McCrae.

McGill: Wendy Cleugh 8; Pat Griffithes 8; Molly Camp 7; Louise MacFarlane 4.
Queen's: Joan Keough 10; Marion Reid 10; Connie Bennet 2; Pat Gardiner 2.

Toronto took the opening game Friday night with a basket sunk by Ann Bradshaw in the last 20 seconds, edging McGill 21-19. The game was close all the way, Toronto creeping ahead only to be tied up again and again by McGill's Molly Camp.

Varsity (21): Shirley Speck 7; Betty Fitzgerald 6; Gwen Smith 5; Ann Bradshaw 2; Eleanor Lever 1; Joan Cloke, Parsis Hughes, Rosana Kelly, Lillian Laakso, Betsy McFaul, Nancy Sootheran, Mary-Clare Thomas
McGill (19): Louise MacFarlane 9; Molly Camp 8; Pat Griffiths 2; Dorothy Nocil, Alex Irwin, Wendy Cleugh, Margaret Dix, Roberta Tyler, Gloria Victor, Margaret Racey, Pat Wallace, Mary MacMillan.

Western copped the second one trouncing Queen's 37-20 with Jean Shillinton netting eighteen points and Anna Baker ten. Queen's Joan Keough, put up a good fight but just had tough luck on her dogshots.

Western (37): Jean Shillington 18; Anna Bawer 10; Mabel Gillen 4; Marilyn Bell 3; Ruth Blezard 2; Fairley Dadd; Joanne Thrasher, Betty Rowden, Mary Shirk, Joan Crich, Beryl Rafuse, Mary Stewart.
Queen's (20): Pat Gardiner 14; Joan Keough 4; Marion Reid 2; Joan Stewart, Daria Shoemaker, Betty McRae, Janet Greenlees, Margaret Blasiek, Moragh Shepherd, Jean Culvevr.

Busy Art

ART ANDERSON

Whose first and second loves are basketball around this time of the year, Saturday night showed half of his double life as a star in the intermediate cage win over OAC, and the week before he demonstrated the other half—as manager of the junior Central 'Y' team that ousted Varsity in the playoffs.

Blue Seconds Pound Aggies To End Season

The Varsity hoop intermediates had little trouble in administering a 58-39 defeat to the OAC quintet at Athletic Nite Saturday.

The seconds parlayed a 21-12 lead at the half way mark into a 40-20 standing at the end of the third quarter and matched the Aggie scorers almost point for point in the stretch. It was the last game of the schedule for both teams.

The marksmanship standards set by the home aggregation were too much for the visitors who were not shy on ball handling ability but lacked much around the boards.

Ted Luck, who put in another double appearance, stood out for the seconds as he notched 14 points to lead all scorers and was much in evidence around the home boards. Andy Andrews came up with a ten point effort and Henderson contributed nine counters to the Varsity total. Al Stevenson piled up eight points, all in the second half and Art Anderson, who played his usual fine game, counted six and set up several fine plays under the OAC basket.

Don Slinger was the main cog in the Aggie scoring machine as he dropped in 12 points and gave a display of tricky ball hawking. Corman was next on the red and black scoring list with seven to his credit, while Sheilds popped in six points.

Lineups

VARSITY: Luck, 14; Andrews, 10; Henderson, 9; Stevenson, 8; Anderson, 6; Maher, 5; Cole, 4; Furlong, 2; MacKenzie.

O.A.C.: Slinger, 12; Corman, 7; Sheilds, 6; Smith, 5; Gray, 4; Hay, 3; Hikichi, 2; Meyers, Humphries.

BOB PHIBBS HELPS

Queen's threw up a startlingly strong defense against Western in London Friday night before succumbing 56-41 to the four-time senior basketball champs. And big Bob Phibbs had a lot to do with the Western win as he threw in 19 points to lead all scorers. McNiven paced Queen's with 14.

Varsity Trails At Both Meets; Is OAC's First

Kingston, Feb. 27—(Special)—OAC won their first senior intercollegiate wrestling championship in history here over the week-end when they nosed out McGill by half a point, OAC chalked up 15 points to McGill's 14½. Queen's scored nine and Varsity four.

In boxing Queen's captured the senior title for the first time since 1935 with a 23-14 margin over Varsity. McGill was third with three.

Before a packed house of 2,500 in the Queen's gymnasium Saturday night for the finals, Jack Kirkup of Toronto outpointed Dorland of Queen's in the 145-pound class by a decisive 8-2 margin. Jack was the only Varsity man to make the finals.

Walt Cassels, twice 135-pound champion suffered an upset when he was beaten in the semis by Theriault of McGill. This blow hit the Varsity team hard and they never really recovered.

Jack Kirkup of Toronto won his preliminary easily when he beat Farrand of Queen's by an 8-2 score. Bernie Shaver, highly favored Toronto 155-pounder, lost to Politi of Queen's 15-10. Hughie Graham, weighing 175, fought courageously, but was beaten by McGuire of Queen's. Dail Leonard of Varsity lost the light-heavy affair to Owen of McGill in a fight contested mostly from the standing position.

WRESTLING RESULTS
Friday
125 lb.—D. Hancock (OAC) beat Hillman (McGill).
135 lb.—M. Hancock (OAC) beat Westaway (Queen's).

190 lb.—Stewart (Queen's) beat Owen (McGill).
Heavyweight—Kowal (McGill) beat (by one fall) Dick (Queen's).

Toronto had three winners in the boxing finals, Henshall, Geary and Patrick. This was the third time that Henshall has walked away with the Intercollegiate 125-pound title. Hank beat Queen's-man Nourry and there was no doubt as to the outcome.

Dave Geary, starry 133-pound puncher, from Toronto, fought a great fight and pounded Lebaron of Queen's into submission in the third round when the referee wisely halted the bout.

Saturday Night Boxing Results:

Red Pettinger, high-scoring forward, and his absence was no doubt a factor in the comparatively low score. An interesting sidelight of the game was the announcement at half-time that Ed Brennan is slightly more than half as old as those vets Zeaton and McManus. Those last two and Volpe were playing their last game in intercollegiate company.

Summary:

Near East In Peril If Red Forces Win In Greece-Fleming

The picture of the world can rapidly change if the communist forces in Greece win out, Donald M. Fleming, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Toronto-Eglinton, warned last night in a speech to the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society.

Report on Trip

Fleming spoke on a trip that he took through Europe last fall. He spent some time in Greece, talking to government leaders there and travelling through the country examining conditions.

"Greece is a nation at war, and it is not a cold war," he declared. "We would do well to remember the strategic position of Greece. If it should fall to communist forces, then Russia would be at the Dardanelles. From there it is not far to Turkey, and the Suez Canal. If Russia gains control of this section of the world, the picture could change rapidly, and the effects will be felt not only by ourselves but by our children and our grandchildren."

Fleming described the present fighting in Greece as "an invasion of the country by communist countries to the north." He said that Albania, Roumania and in a lesser degree Bulgaria, were providing materials and bases for the guerrilla forces that the government of Greece is fighting.

Greek Gratitude

The Greeks are very warm in their thanks for materials and aid that Canada has sent, Fleming said. He described several instances of Canadian aid, and the gratitude with which the Greek people have received the assistance. "When the Canadian ambassador drives along the streets of Athens the people cheer," Fleming told the Lit.

Bands are fighting all over Greece, not just in the northern section of the country, Fleming explained. "They get their supplies from Russian planes based in the communist states to the north."

Fleming described the almost unbelievable conditions under which the Greek people are living. Refugees living 55 to a tent 18' by 40', main meals of onions or beans, and rampant disease are only a few of the problems to be dealt with, he said.

Summer Session Offers Students Study In Europe

Saskatoon, March 1 —(CUP)— The New School for Social Research, in co-operation with World Studytours, Columbia University Travel Service, will hold a six weeks' session in Europe for American Students during the summer of 1949. A quota of Canadian students will be included.

The session will afford students an opportunity to study political and economic conditions at first hand. Its purpose it also to advance the cause of international understanding through a free mingling with peoples of other lands.

The summer session will be held in three European cities — an English industrial city to be selected, Paris and Annecy, France. Three separate groups of approximately seventy students each will work at each of these centres for two weeks. They will study under leading American scholars assisted by European professors and experts.

The first group will be made up largely of teachers, the second of undergraduates, and the third will be limited to graduates. In addition to attending classes for six weeks, every student will visit London and take a bus trip from Annecy to Brussels to get a quick view of some of the most economically and politically important regions of Europe.

The estimated total cost for all essential expenses is $900. Interested students should contact Dr. Fritz Kaufmann, World Studytours, Columbia University, 2960 Broadway, New York 27, N.Y.

Guest Speaker

Donald M. Fleming, Federal Member of Parliament for Toronto-Eglinton, who was the guest speaker of the UC Lit at its nomination meeting last night. Mr. Fleming gave a report of his recent trip to Europe.

WUA Committee Drafts Program, Presents Awards

Nominations for the 49-50 executive of the Women's Undergraduate Association were held in the Women's Union yesterday.

WUA President Mary Innis announced that following the plebiscite on amalgamation a committee had been appointed to draft the new constitution. The appointments of the committee which were ratified at the open meeting included Jane Hill, Paula Zumstein, Garry Clark, Don Evans and Bob Sutherland.

WUA awards for outstanding contribution to college life during undergraduate years were presented to Rae Evans, Helen Ferguson, Marg McHardy, Opal Miller, Virginia Tory, Mary Alice Burton and Ruth Boettger.

STAFF ELECTIONS

The Varsity staff election for the position of Editor-in-chief will take place to-morrow at four o'clock.

All staff members are requested to contact The Varsity office for further details as soon as possible.

Tender Fees Brief For Porter's View After Year's Work

Climaxing a year's work on the Fees Brief, SAC President Gordon Gwynne-Timothy and Student Service Commissioner Jane Hazard interviewed Hon. Dana Porter, Ontario Minister of Education, Monday. Contacted yesterday, Gwynne-Timothy said the brief had been favourably received by the minister and that the talk had been "lengthy and satisfactory".

Precedent Established

Gwynne-Timothy pointed out the value of the precedent established in the student approach to the provincial government. "We have accomplished something important in taking our proposals through the University authorities, then directly to a cabinet minister," he said. "University students have the rights of any other group of citizens," he added.

A detailed statement concerning the interview would be released some time today, the SAC president promised.

The SAC Fees Brief was presented to the Department of Education after a reading before the University Board of Governors Jan. 27. At that time, President Sidney E. Smith expressed approval of the general ideas contained in the brief, which embodies the fees research group's recommendations that increased operational costs of the University be fully met by increased government grants, that fees be lowered to the 1946 level, that fees be lowered progressively by government absorption of the University deficit, aiming ultimately at free and equal opportunity for all qualified university students. The Fees Brief also advocates the provision of more bursaries similar to the Dominion-Provincial type now given.

Gwynne-Timothy pointed yesterday to dominion government DVA grants to students as "a concrete example of what an extensive plan can be". Statistics taken from the Guillet Report on Canadian education show that there is no trend, apart from DVA post-war enrollment, in the direction of equality of opportunity.

LECTURES CANCELLED

A rumour that lectures will be cancelled this Friday was squelched yesterday by University Registrar J. C. Evans.

"It sounds like a good idea," The Registrar said, "but unfortunately it isn't true."

MPP, Reid Scott Raps Government On Varsity Fees

The case of university fees received its first airing in the Ontario Legislature last night as Reid Scott, MPP (Beaches) asked for an immediate increase in the legislative grant to the University of Toronto, and for a gradual program of reduction in the cast to students, of higher education.

The young member, a graduate of Toronto, 4T8 used data from the recent SAC brief on Fees to support his demand for action on education costs.

"Government expenditures for education," he said in reply to a question from the Minister of Education, Hon. Dana Porter, "represent not an expense, but an investment."

Scott asked for an increased grant, "not merely to prevent further increase in fees, but to actually reduce the scale of fees paid by the students." He was referring to a recent news item in the Reporter, which reported that a proposed increase in the regular government grant to the University of Toronto might offset a further fees boost this year.

During the speech the Minister of Education objected to a quotation from a more recent issue of the Reporter, in which he was reported as saying that the present budget would not permit an increase in the grant this year. "The grant certainly is being raised," he stated.

Scott stressed that "the aim should be not merely to maintain fees at their present high level," and held that the recent trend in the cost of higher education was affecting especially the low-income groups in the province.

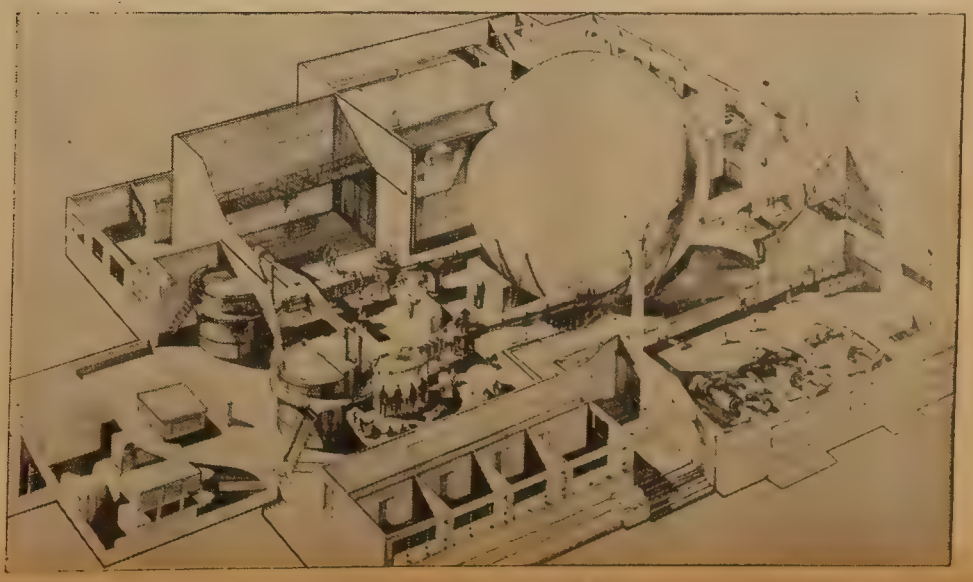
Fluid Dynamics

Varsity To Be Centre Of Supersonic Studies

By ROBT. WARREN

Mr. R. Smelt, head of the Applied Mechanics Subdivision and Dr. R. J. Seeger, Chief of the Division of Mechanics Research at the U.S. Naval Ordinance Laboratory, White Oak, Maryland, gave a series of five lectures in Fluid Dynamics last week as part of the course in Aeronautical Engineering.

Describes Difficulties



Mr. Smelt devoted two hours to a description of difficulties encountered by aircraft flying at transonic speeds. Strange phenomena occur when the speed of sound is reached —experiment indicates that the drag becomes very large and ordinary wings fail to give sufficient lift and control surfaces become useless, Smelt said. (Spitfires, during the war were found to go into uncontrollable dives for thousands of feet only to pull out automatically at lower altitudes.)

Attempts of German, British and American scientists to find solutions by means of supersonic wind-tunnels, rocket-propelled models and dropping tests have disclosed peculiar flow patterns hitherto entirely unknown, he stated.

Temperature Drops

Stranger yet are the results of supersonic flow for which speeds are more than five times that of sound—discussed in Mr. Smelt's third lecture. When a model is tested in a wind tunnel at these speeds, the temperature drops to a few de-

Speeds up to 10 times greater than sound will be reached in wind tunnel to be built for the University at de Haviland air field. The design will follow that of the U.S. Naval Ordnance Lab at White Oak. This is a plan of it.

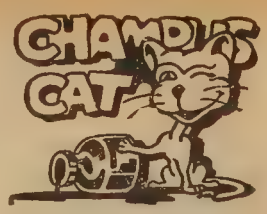
It Could Be Done

Back in 1928 a group of American university officials completed a thorough investigation into student affairs at 23 leading American colleges and universities. Facts were tabulated, conclusions were drawn, and the results were published in the form of a report. In a section under the heading "Student Government", the report stated that student morale reached a higher level in universities where students were self-governing than in universities where student government was "paternalistic" or "semi-paternalistic". "Paternalistic" was defined as a term describing a system whereby all authority concerning student affairs was held by university officials.



Since 1928 no competent body has invalidated the findings of this group which relate to student government.

The system which prevails here at this university, in terms of the report, could be designated as "semi-paternalistic". Our Students' Administrative Council functions as a medium for student activity over a wide and varied field. Within the limits set for it by the Board of Governors, the SAC has proved itself to be a responsible and efficient organization. That this is not generally recognized may be due to the fact that the bulk of the SAC's work is done by committees. The Blue and White Society, the ex-service committee, The Varsity, and many other SAC agencies are looked upon as organizations having an entity of their own when in reality they exist because of the SAC, and, in that sense, the accomplishments achieved by these groups must be considered to have stemmed from the efforts of the SAC.

The fact remains, however, that the SAC is not a student governing body. It has the privilege of doing the work entailed in a fees investigation or an anti-discrimination investigation, but it has nothing whatever to say about any action taken. In the final analysis the important decisions are made by the Board of Governors which consistently refuses to relinquish or to delegate powers to students.

In the matter of student discipline, nothing has been done to share authority with students. Yet Section 83 of the University of Toronto Act, 1947, allows the Board of Governors, if it so wishes, to make the changes necessary for the delegation of authority to the student body.

The interests and welfare of students at this university can be served best by increased participation in government by students. And the SAC is the medium through which the participation can be best effected.

BACKFIRE

The advantages of being a MAN outweigh the disadvantages, a round-table discussion of male undergraduates concluded recently. The discussion was led by Por[illegible] McFudgeon and took place in the eminent body-builder's suite in the Bayloor Hotel.

McFudgeon's opening statement to the gathering was well worth jotting down. He said "It is high time every (hic) man sat down with himshelf and figured out the pros and cons of being a MAN. Our racial characteristics are slowly dying out."

Arguments put forward in favor of being a MAN included the following—(1) Powerful brutes physicially—this saves men from bodily harm which might be inflicted by women. (A thing the average chap rarely considers).

(2) More intelligent—this was unanimously supported and was not kicked around further.

One effeminent undergraduate, Hubert ("Give-me-a-coke") Butterthwaite, III SPS, said he was sorry he was a MAN because women live longer. This was refuted by Mr. McFudgeon, who pointed out that it was far better to live well even if it meant not living so long.

It was generally agreed however that women have one big advantage over men—they don't have to pay their way.

At the conclusion of the discussion Mr. McFudgeon congratulated the men on their lack of bias. After the meeting he gave an informal demonstration of elbow-bending.

VOCATIONAL GUIDANCE

Twenty-five potential bottlewashers attended a vocational guidance talk on that profession held in the ladies' section of the KCR yesterday afternoon.

George Stubblechin, chief bottlewasher at that establishment, was the speaker. He outlined the problems facing bottlewashers and demonstrated his own methods.

Chief among the problems enumerated by Mr. Stubblechin were lack of hot water and adequate soap, and the difficulty encountered in getting rid of cigarette butts dropped in empty bottles. "And the tragedy of soggy cigarette butts", said the KCR bottlewasher, "is that there are always ashtrays nearby but people drop them in the bottles just to hear them go ph-hh-h-t".

The speaker demonstrated the Shake and Soak methods of washing bottles. Free beer was provided by the company with the admonition "Keep Canada Strong". The class was permitted to wash out the bottles afterwards. The meeting ended on an optimistic note when Mr. Stubblechin pointed out that the gradual upward trend of sanitary conditions would make bottle-washing even more important in the future than it is now.

Next week's meeting will take place at the Casino Theatre at 3 p.m., when Careers in the Theatre will be discussed. The speaker is Tootsie LaReigne. Please be on time, as "The show must go on".

Unveil Plaque To Solemnize J. Eaton Fund

A plaque to commemorate the establishment at the University of Toronto of the first full time Chair of Clinical Medicine in the Commonwealth was unveiled at the Toronto General Hospital yesterday. The plaque, designed by Scott Carter, was unveiled by Mr. John David Eaton.

President Smith described the ceremony as a manifestation of the bountiful partnership of the university's medical school and the hospital.

Battle Disease

"The relentless battle with disease has been carried on with singular devotion and marked skill under Sir John and Lady Eaton Chair of Medicine. Men and women who made the rounds of this hospital under the guidance of the distinguished incumbents of the Chair whose names appear on the plaque, have rendered outstanding service in the healing art to Canada in peace and in war," said Pres. Smith. The president commended the appointment of Dr. Duncan Archibald Graham at the first holder of the Chair.

First In Empire

Dr. Graham became on July 1, 1919, the incumbent of the first full time Chair of Medicine in the British Commonwealth and Empire. Pres. Smith described that day as a red letter day for the Faculty of Medicine, for the University of Toronto, and for the science of medicine and the art of healing throughout the world.

Among those present were Dr. Graham and his wife, Professor Emeritus of Medicine at the University of Toronto, and the present Sir John and Lady Eaton Professor of Medicine, Dr. Ray F. Farquharson, Prof. of Medicine and Head of the Department at the U. of T. Mr. H. M. Turner welcomed the guests on behalf of the Trustees of the Hospital.

Meds Debating Merits Of Pre-Medical Course

Whether the present Pre-Medical course is adequate for the demands of a medical career is to be debated Thursday by the Medical Arts and Letters Club. Debate time is 5 p.m., the place Room III, Anatomy Building.

John Hastings, and Bruce Buchanan, both II Meds, are the affirmative speakers, while Syd Hecker and Syd Wax, I Meds, will uphold the negative. The resolution is: "that the present pre-med course meets the needs of a medical career."

Judges will be a faculty member, Dr. Van Wyck, professor of obstetrics and gynaecology; a graduate, Phil Ashmore, M.D.; and an undergraduate, M. Bunker, president of the Medical Society. If time is available, discussion from the floor is planned to follow the debate.

Coeds Cut Cunning Capers, Clip Cuticles In Classes

By HARRY K. RASKY

This is mainly about nothing. If you have anything better to do, you advised to go and do it.

Our topic for today (for the people still with us) is the co-ed and her place in the lecture room. As you may have noticed there are co-eds in lecture places.

"Men Only"

It was not too long ago that our university was a place labelled "men only". Now, only a few older professors and the university horse remember the pre-girl days.

Let us tell you about one young lady and our English lecture. It was ten minutes after the hour (any old hour). Everybody was seated comfortably with their pens poised for action. Blotters were ready to catch any ink from leaking pens, and water from the leaking roof and files were prepared to sharpen ball-point pens, in which the ball wasn't pointed enough.

The lecturer had cleared his throat the conventional number of times, probably to make sure that his voice would be just rough enough that he wouldn't be heard in the back row.

Hear Pins Drop

You could have heard a bobby-pin drop, (if you had a bobby pin that you wanted to drop).

The talk began. At that moment the culprit in question entered—a co-ed. She didn't sit in the back row. But rather, decided that it would be much better to get a ring side seat. (The ring side seats are the ones occupied by girls wearing rings, on their fingers or in their noses.)

She pushed her way boldly — as daintily as a very small elephant to the front. The lecturer pretended not to notice the late-comer, instead he cleared his throat several more times. (There could be little doubt that his throat was as clear as a bell by now. He chimed several times to illustrate this point.)

Begins To Knit

The frilled filly pealed off her coat, adjusted her hair and smiled. She reached into her knitting bag and pulled out a little red bottle that looked like it contained blood. Being Red Cross Week as it was, nobody would have been surprised if it did contain that bodily fluid.

It was nail polish.

The rest of the lecture was spent adding a brilliant technicolor hew to her forefingers. In all justice to our heroine it must be pointed out that she did a very colorful job. She may some day make an excellent manicurist.

There is another young lady who we would like to say a few words about. This one is not guilty of the same sin as the artist above. She comes to lectures on time. In fact, often she stays over time. And this is why.

Sits Dreamy-Eyed

Between the hours of ten and eleven several times a week she can be seen sitting dreamy-eyed entwined in her wool and boy friend in the back of a certain Economics lecture. Not satisfied, as some of the other glove-and-scarf manufacturers are with the familiar

Education Plus Legislation Combats Prejudice Forum

Without an accompanying educational program, legislation may be of little value in combatting discrimination. Such was the opinion formed by a panel discussion held in the JCR Friday afternoon under the sponsorship of the UTDA and the SAC's Intercultural Affairs Committee.

Legislation which is far in advance of the people affected by it may be harmful but where it is close to their understanding it may be a very effective part of the overall educational programme.

Points To Fairness

Harvey Hay, IV Vic, pointed to the workings and effectiveness of legislation in the case of Fair Employment Practices in New York State, and suggested that F.E.P.C. offered a good example of what could be accomplished by legislation in this field.

Nancy McCormick, IV St. Michael's, gave examples of restrictive covenants which complicate the housing problem by preventing certain people or classes from buying or renting and suggested that legislation might well be used to prohibit the making of certain types of restrictive covenants.

Different Problem

She pointed out that the problem was somewhat different in the case of hotels and resorts where the "best paying clientele" might be ultimately responsible for the manager's "Sorry, no room", to a Jew or a Negro. In such a case the emphasis would necessarily be on public education rather than on legislation.

Professor Tatham suggested that minority groups should be able to bring an action in libel in the name of the group if it libelled as a group. He then read excerpts from a letter (abusing "the Jew") which

Prof. A. Lacey Of Vic College Buried Yesterday

Professor Alexander Lacey of Victoria College French Department died at his home, 78 Felbrigg Ave., Saturday after a prolonged illness. Professor Lacey, who was in his 62nd year, was born in Newfoundland, where he received his early education.

He graduated from Victoria College in 1917. Professor Lacey then left to do post-graduate work at Columbia University. After receiving his M.A. at Columbia, he returned to Victoria College and received his Ph.D. at that university.

He served for two years as chairman of the Toronto Home and School Association. He was a member and an elder of Timothy Eaton Memorial Church and a member of the Alliance Francaise.

Funeral services for Professor Lacey were held at Timothy Eaton Memorial Church yesterday. All lectures were cancelled at Victoria College yesterday afternoon out of respect for the late staff member.

Political Freedom On Canad'n Campi Advocated By PC's

A resolution calling on university authorities throughout the Dominion to refrain from prohibiting political activity on their campuses and instead, to encourage such activity, was passed at the third annual conference of the Progressive Conservative Student Federation at McGill University, Feb. 26, 27 and 28.

Stand For Freedom

The resolution, fifth of seventeen on the agenda, read as follows: "That the Federation believes in and stands for the basic freedoms of a true democracy, freedom of speech, of association, of the press and of worship and in particular believes that these rights should not be denied to university students. Instead of discouraging and forbidding political activity, university authorities and leaders should encourage a realistic approach to public affairs, and not deny students the right to form political groups on their own campuses."

The conference also favored a system of national scholarships based on federal grants in aid to the provinces to help students in overcoming financial and geographical handicaps, federal and provincial finance for medical research at the Dominion's universities. The delegates asked the federal government to increase the income tax exemption for students who are dependant up to and including 30 years of age from $300 to $800 per annum.

National Scholarships

The resolution favoring national scholarships asked that federal grants in aid for scholarships to provinces for needy students be granted in such a way that they would at all times respect the rights of the provinces in the field of education.

Speaking to the 65 student delegates Saturday afternoon, George Drew, M.P., national leader of the Progressive Conservative Party, urged university students to study public affairs. "Unless one knew the history of the body politic and its ills," he said, "one could not adequately prescribe for its ills."

Ian Campbell of Carleton College, Ottawa was elected president of the Progressive Conservative Student Federation for the coming year.

Lawrence Reports

Last year's president Allan P. Lawrence, III Victoria, in his report to the conference said in the past year the PCSF had grown and changed from the position when it "opposed everything and proposed nothing" to a party committed to a series of long-overdue legislation and governmental reforms.

The Federation had grown from the original nine universities, which had formed the organization three years ago in Ottawa to one which now embraced twenty-three colleges and universities across Canada, Lawrence said. He said he regretted to state there were still some universities at which it was forbidden to form political clubs.

At the conclusion of the conference the delegates passed a motion of appreciation to Lawrence and Campbell for their efficient service in the past year as President and Secretary-Treasurer respectively.

Red Cross Drive Seeks Skulemen To Donate Blood

Nearly 100 additional names have been added to the list of blood donors during the Red Cross campaign since Monday morning. Miss Margaret Ness, Director of Public Relations for the Red Cross, said yesterday that sixty members of Hart House had signed as did 30 members of the Royal Conservatory of Music.

The Red Cross tables will be set up today in the Mining Building and the Engineering Building from 10.00 a.m. to 2.00 p.m.

Miss Ness said that they were quite pleased at the students' response. She said, however, that the students were afraid that they would have to donate during the exams. This fear will not be realized because the Red Cross will have the donations completed before examinations begin.

One student, F. W. Weiner, III UC, will be making his seventeenth trip to the Red Cross to donate blood. When questioned he told The Varsity he had given many times to hospitals as well as to the Red Cross. Mr. Weiner has type B blood; a type that only 10 per cent of the population has. It is because of the rarity of this type that he has donated his blood so many times.

Request Grad Students To Offer Accommodation

"We wish that graduating students who are getting married would let us know if they have living accommodation available," said Mrs. Helen Richards of the SAC Housing Service last night. Last year, she said, no accommodation was offered by these students, despite the great demand.

The drop in enrolment next year, she predicted, and especially the drop in veterans attending university, will simplify the job of getting living quarters for students and staff.

Despite the influx of Ajaxmen to the campus next year, she felt they could all be taken care of, especially since many of them have homes in Toronto, or will be working in Toronto during the summer.

The usual advertising campaign will begin in August and September.

The Housing and Employment Service office is open all through the year, and does not close for the summer.

Members To Vote Thursday In Hart House Elections

On Thursday, March 3, members of Hart House will go to the polls to cast their ballots for next year's committee members. Eligible to vote are all male undergraduates and students of associated schools and faculties who are members of Hart House. All voters must, however, present their Admit to Lecture Cards, or Hart House membership cards.

This year the newly organized Table Tennis Club, will for the first time, be represented by a committee of its own. Four of the five nominees will be elected to direct the activities of the club which at present numbers 70 members.

Mr. McClory, Assistant in the Comptroller's Office, chairman of the Table Tennis Committee, said "the University of Toronto club is very active. We have two teams entered in the Toronto association, and they are both in the playoffs."

"Electioneering this year has been fairly quiet," said Peter Bryce, Assistant to the Warden. "Some years before the war, one of the candidates drove up to the front steps of Hart House in a brewery wagon on election day. He was dressed in all of the traditional regalia, but he was prevented by University regulations from carrying his realism to the extent of actually serving beer to his supporters."

had been circulated to Toronto high school students. Although the Postmaster could prevent circulation of the letter if it were discovered no action could be taken by the Jewish people for libel.

Bill of Rights Needed

Ralph Campbell, IV UC, thought that this led to the question of how effective a bill of rights would be. He said that it is not the function of the Government to legislate morality, but that it may lay down conditions of behaviour which prevent anti-social conduct.. He thought that a bill of rights might well establish a floor below which our human relationships should not fall.

Provost Seeley agreed with the other members that two of the underlying factors in racial prejudice are fear (chiefly economic) and ignorance. However, he felt that legislation counteracted one fear by another but that a bill of rights would acknowledge certain basic, fundamental rights of the individual and therefore might be helpful in establishing a floor to our relationships.

FINAGLERS WIN

The C. & F. Finaglers overcame stubborn resistance from the Political Science Bombers, Monday afternoon in Varsity Arena to snatch the Economics Building hockey title. The final score was 6-3 as the C. & F'ers overcame an early deficit to come back with four fast ones.

Dr. H. A. Innis, head of the Department of Political Economy, faced off the puck.

INCONSISTENCY

The Editor, The Varsity,
Dear Sir:

The SAC and The Varsity have been giving full support to Brotherhood Week, and I was therefore quite surprised by the attitude assumed by some of your advertisers. In Tuesday's issue the author of Cole Slaw said . . . "Brotherhood Week" . . . makes us itch to throttle the heaving hypocrites on their throbbing podiums," presumably referring to people like Harold Russell, Jack Bothwell, Mary Novack, Wally Fram, Dr. Sidney Smith, professors McCullough, Tatham and Provost Seeley. Everyone knows that the problem of intolerance and hate is a complex one and that Brotherhood Week alone cannot hope to solve it, but surely these men and women, as well as many others who have worked on this project have done something to tackle it. The man hired by Cole's has indicated by his flippant attitude that he can scoff, but that he is not interested in contributing anything to a better understanding among people.

In today's (Wednesday's) issue, in the Classified Ads. section some organization is attempting to procure men for a dance by asking for "fellows over 25, Protestant, abstainers . . . etc." Anyone must be free to choose his own dancing partners, I agree, but surely The Varsity which is financially supported by the Council (every student) should not print discriminatory advertising of this type. This particular ad. exemplifies the very attitude you are trying to combat.

BULLY FOR BALFOUR

The Editor, The Varsity

Sir: I quote from The Varsity, Feb. 22, "Our criticism was based on a statement made recently by Con. Balfour in which he asserted he would ask for an investigation of staff and students of this University, 'to assure they're being taught the democratic way of life'!" Shame on you for criticizing this illustrious protector of our morals, our liberty, our democracy, and our very thoughts! I say, bully for Balfour!

It is high time some red . . .er . . . maroon blooded Canadian patriot brought this burning question to the fore, flung down the challenge, and otherwise suitably conducted himself in a right-thinking way!

For a long time I have been wondering about the professors of my faculty! Although they talk medicine from dawn to dark (and after that, too, I suspect), I feel that this may be just a cover-up! When silent they look positively subversive — there is no other word for it! And my fellow students, for all they feign unrelieved somnolence throughout the day, are not fooling me! Behind those drooping eyelids something is going on.

Furthermore, it was reported recently in the Champus Chat that students have been thinking during lecture hours! The feeble punitive measures brought to bear on this ominous situation by the Caput will certainly not be enough! A thorough investigation into what is being thought and why it is necessary to think, with such able persons as Con. Balfour available (to say the least) to tell us what is right, is an urgent need.

Again I say, bully, bully, bully for Balfour! After the investigation I would suggest that those who pass it with flying standards be issued a card of bridal white to be presented when challenged, and that those who (ugh) flunk the test have a red hammer branded on their foreheads to blazon their shame to the populace!

In conclusion, let me say that my only regret is that Con. Balfour is not my daddy, so that I would never have to think again as long as we both shall live; and that my only prayer is that when I reach his ripe old age I shall be possessed of at least ten times his I. Q.!

V. Newman, III Meds.

P.S.—Vote Balfour for simplicity in government.

Vienna Boys

There is a sublime incongruity about hearing a group of twenty-one small boys clad in sailor suits fill the immensity of Massey Hall with a sound which can only be described as angelic. The choir, whose every member is an artist in his own right, has been trained to a point of unbelievable perfection. The difficult cadences and intervals of Langstroth's "Agnus Dei" with its intricate interweaving parts, was sung with incredible depth and precision. In the Offenbach opera "Herr und Madame Denis", and in the Austrian folk-songs, the young performers showed enthusiasm and intelligence.

U of T Symphony

The University Symphony Orchestra presented its major effort of the year on Friday and Sunday nights in Convocation Hall. The playing of two large scale works, a concerto and a symphony represented an ambitious and demanding task which was ably fulfilled. Conductor Harold Neal succeeded in imposing essential unity on his 61 instrumentalists and displayed reliable musicianship.

If there were traces of lack of unity they were to be found within the various sections, minor pitch deficiencies occurred and greater sense of nuance would have been welcome in several instances.

Schubert's lyricism found fine expression in the Rosamunde Overture which opened the concert.

Teresa Mulloy appeared as soloist in Mendelssohn's violin concerto and the choice was a very happy one. She showed clear bowing and fingering and a broad range of dynamics. Still better, the audience was not treated to the usual soupy interpretation of this concerto. While the orchestra supported her well on the whole there were some divergencies in tempo in the final movement. Miss Mulloy's encore, a Bach Gavotte, added to the favorable impression she had created.

Conductor and orchestra coped well and sensitively with the fugal intricacies of the Bach-Caillet Prelude and Fugue in G minor.

The grand challenge of the Dvorak Symphony No. 5 (New World) was met with varied success. The promise of the first movement with its well-styled cello introduction was not sustained in the lengthy Largo, but the triumphal theme of the last movement seemed to carry sufficient momentum to carry the work to a gratifying climax. High spirits and some stretches of remarkable tonal beauty compensated amply for what inaccuracies there were.

The sight of a comparatively large and definitely enthusiastic audience must have been as pleasing to the performers as the generally high standard of achievement was to those present.

Vic Exhibit

The Douglas Duncan collection of Canadian art, in the alumni hall at Victoria College, is one of the most interesting that has come this way for some time.

Two paintings by Will Ogilvie are of remarkable power; the huge brown torsos and a massive hand casually gripping a rope in "African Boatmen" give an impression of great strength and ease, which is reflected in the perfectly smooth sea. The hazy greens and blues of the sea and sky vividly recreate the intense heat of a becalmed ocean. Unfortunately the figures are merely posing and not integrated with the background. His other painting, Malarial Dream, is of a delirious man struggling to free himself from a mosquito net, with a revolving moon in the corner. Symbolic implications, if any, are left to the spectator.

The best picture of the collection, in my opinion, is "Boy Welder," by Louis Muhlstock. A few red and black chalk strokes suddenly capture, in a moment of concentration, a welder of 17 or so at his first job. It is a very important moment in his life, and one can quickly trace in the features his pride and youth and pleasure.

"Wheatfield" and "Summer Landscape" by Schaefer, are rescued from banality by their naive coloring. In fact, "Summer Landscape" with its absence of distracting detail, would do very well as an illustration, and the wood fence zigzagging across the field gives it a lively sense of movement. There is a delightful picture, "Mountain Ash, Grace Lake" by A. Y. Jackson. The bright red berries, scattered along the branches of the tree in the foreground, impose a sense of rhythm on the conventional backdrop of northern lake, trees, etc. In four landscapes, this conventional backdrop is simplified by Mr. Lawren Harris into the slick formula of three dead trees on a hill which is now as familiar and tiresome as three cows in a pasture. "Don Valley" by Edwy Cooke is a well worked-out composition of verdant foliage over a stagnant stream.

Emily Carr is represented by three pictures, "Fir Tree and Sky", "Trees" and "Stumps and Sky". In the first two she captures quite successfully the atmosphere of a Canadian forest and the cool tall trees, but the last one is plainly derivative of Van Gogh. The exhibition, as a whole, is very enjoyable, and the discerning taste of the collector gives it an interesting continuity.

grees absolute (about 400 degrees Fahrenheit), almost a complete vacuum results behind the model, and not only the water in the air, but the air itself begins to liquefy.

Conversely with a projectile fired at hypersonic speeds through still air, the temperature becomes very excessive and splitting of the oxygen molecule is encountered. Estimates of the drag in hypersonic flow have been made by a study of the drag of the stars and planets.

Dr. Seeger in his two lectures gave a slide-illustrated description of the Naval Ordnance Laboratory at White Oaks. Here an evacuated steel sphere fifty-two feet in diameter with walls a foot thick is used to suck air at supersonic speeds through a throat barely sixteen inches square, while the effect on models is measured and photographed.

Complex Problems

Other methods of investigation of the complex problems of supersonics were explained by Dr. Seeger, and many of the slides shown were the first pictures ever taken of certain types of shock wave patterns. It was pointed out that entirely unlike the case of light and sound waves, a wave striking a surface at right angles is not reflected as strongly as an oblique wave and the reflected angle does not equal the incident angle as we were taught to believe in high school.

During last week announcement was made of the proposed supersonic wind-tunnel to be operated at Downsview airport as part of the University's Department of Aeronautical Engineering headed by Prof. T. R. Louden and under the immediate direction of Dr. G. N. Patterson. Its main purpose will be to train aerodynamicists for scientific development in Canada in basic problems of supersonic flow and will be available for research on supersonic aircraft, guided missiles and other civilian and industrial applications.

Dr. Seeger graduated from Yale in Mathematical Physics, subsequently went to the Physics Department of the George Washington University. During the war he did research on shock wave phenomena for the U.S. Navy, before going to White Oak. It was largely a result of Dr. Seeger's effort that a Fluid Dynamics section was recently added to the Physics Society.

Mr. Smelt, a graduate of Cambridge in 1937 in Mathematics, worked at the Royal Aircraft Establishment in England where he was sucessively in charge of the High Speed Flight Section, the Division of Supersonic Research and the Guided Missile Department. Three years ago he went to the Naval Ordnance Laboratory and is now studying problems in hypersonic flow.

Book Review

New Verse

There are many ways of compiling an anthology of poetry, but the method used in John Arlott's "First Time in America" (Collins: $3.50) is unique. "None of the poems collected here, so far as I can ascertain, have been previously published in America," writes Arlott in his preface. For an anthologist to set much stringent limits upon his task is surely dangerous; much good poetry must necessarily be excluded, and much mediocre poetry included to fill the pages of the anthology. Perhaps this principle of selection accounts for the general tone of the collection—a tone of even competence.

I take exception to Arlott's assertion that he would be "disagreeably surprised" if any "clear-cut tendency" is revealed in the poetry. Only rarely do writers work in a vacuum, cut off from their fellows. There is a continual process of inter-action at work, which accounts for the development of schools of poetry. An outstanding example is the Auden-Spender-Day-Lewis group of the thirties. And the influence of this group can be discerned in the present anthology.

One good feature of "First Time in America" is the inclusion of a brief biography and a select bibliography at the head of each poet's work. The interested reader is provided with a guide to further works of the poet who pleases him. And one can be pleased by the satiric humor of William Plomer's "The Self-Made Blonde", the tinsel beauty of Aldington's transiations, and the exquisite perfection, though in a minor key, of Andrew Young's verse. Louis Macneice's "Elegy for Minor Poets", included here, perhaps provides an ironic comment on the whole volume, for there are no giants among these writers:

"Who lived in the wrong time or the wrong place,
Who might have caught fire had only a spark occurred,
Who knew all the words but failed to achieve the Word."

with their bodies but also with their applause.

The program consisted of twelve songs ranging in period from the delightful early English 'Sumer is icumen in' to Vaughan-Williams' 'Fain would I change that note'.

It was refreshing to find a choir of this size (about one hundred voices) which lost neither tone nor pitch throughout the concert and whose enunciation was so uniformly good. The inclusion of Palestrina's 'Adoramus te' and of 'Swing Low, Sweet Chariot', demonstrated the ability of the choir to perform sacred as well as secular music.

In the latter piece the distinctly ecclesiastical, not to say Anglican flavor of the choir was especially noticeable, while eminently desirable in its proper context, here it seemed to limit the richness of the music. At the risk of being considered ungrateful I would like to mention that I felt it a pity that the tenors so outnumbered the basses and that, moreover, when the latter were leading they tended towards roughness.

However the evident joy with which the choir sang and the audience responded could not but make glad the heart of any music lover.

WOMEN'S ATHLETIC ELECTIONS

Women's Athletic Directorate

The electoral meeting of the University of Toronto Women's Athletic Association to elect the six student representatives of the Women's Athletic Directorate for 1949-50 will be held in the Lecture Room, Household Science Building, on Monday, March 14, at 5.00 p.m. sharp.

Nominations will be received by the Secretary of the Assocaition until Wednesday, March 9, at 2.00 p.m. Nominations must be signed by two members of the U. of T. W.A.A. and must be made on the forms to be obtained from the Secretary, Room 62, University College.

A student eligible for nomination must at the time of nomination be in her second or higher year, but not in her final year, at the University.

Representatives to the Electoral Body must be appointed and sent to the meeting as follows: the W.A.A.'s of University College, Victoria, St. Michael's, St. Hilda's, the Faculty of Medicine and the School of Physical and Health Education, four representatives each; the W.A.A. of the School of Nursing, two; Basketball Club, six; Hockey Club, five; Swimming Club, four; Tennis Club, three; Badminton, Baseball and Volleyball Clubs, two each; Ski Club, one; the undergraduate members of the 1948-49 Directorate. Names of voting representatives must be given to the Secretary not later than Thursday, March 10 and no proxies will be permitted except upon written notice to the Secretary prior to the election. Electoral Body representatives may only carry one vote each.

Women's Athletic Clubs

The annual elections for the women's Basketball, Hockey, Swimming, Tennis, Badminton, Baseball, Volleyball, Ski and Bowling Clubs will be held on Tuesday, March 15. Voting will be held from 12 noon to 5.00 p.m. in Room 62, University College.

An election for the presidency ONLY of each club will be held, voting to be preferential. Nominations for the office of president for each club must be signed by two voting members of the club in question and filed with the Secretary of the Athletic Association, Room 62, U.C., by 2.00 p.m., Thursday, March 10.

Each faculty, college and department entering one or more teams in an intramural series is entitled to ONE representative on the executive of the club directing that sport. The president of the club is not regarded as a representative and her faculty is entitled to its regular representative.

Voting members for each club are restricted to those who have been registered with the Secretary of the W.A.A. as playing members of an intramural or intercollegiate team in that particular sport during the past academic year, or who are certified by a team manager to have attended at least 50 per cent of the practices of that team; members of the club executive and managers of all teams playing under the club.

SATELLITE STATE

The Editor of The Varsity,

I wish to put on record that a great wrong was done to the Democratic Government of the United States of America by the movers of the resolution of the recent Hart House debate when they attempted to convince the HOUSE that Canada was a "satellite state" of the U.S.A.

A satellite state, I submit, Sir, is recognized in to-day's international affairs as one of the states adjoining the U.S.S.R. and forced into subservience by that power.

By using the term "satellite state", in respect of CANADA, the movers of that resolution have compared Canada with one of those unfortunate states adjoining the U.S.S.R. And by naming the United States of America as Canada's master — they have compared, Sir, the great American Republic with Soviet Communists.

The movers of the resolution did perhaps not realize how horrible crimes—mass murder and mass enslaving included—against humanity were perpetrated in the not-too-distant past and are being perpetrated right now by the Government of the U.S.S.R. against their own peoples and the peoples of the satellite states.

The aligning, Sir, side by side, of such a great humanitarian as the late Franklin Delano Roosevelt or of such a friend of the people of the World as Harry Truman with the cold blooded murderers from the Kremlin—is unbearable to one sensitive to justice, to one whose old father and youthful brother-in-law suffered a cruel death on the cold snows of Siberia.

The house in session did, by an overwhelming vote, disassociate itself from that ill-conceived attack upon the Government of Canada's best neighbour. Still, I believe, Sir, that the movers of the resolution owe, for reasons of international courtesy at least, a sincere apology in public to the Government of the United States of America.

An Observer

P.S. For the reasons stated in my previous letter to the editor in the Feb. 11 issue, that I have two sisters still behind the iron curtain, may I ask that my name be withheld from the press.

UKRAINIAN VIEW

The Editor, The Varsity,

Dear Sir:

Captain Geary, in his letter to The Varsity, stated that "when the Germans invaded their country in 1941 tens of thousands of Russian people, together with whole divisions of the Russian army flocked to surrender." Mr. Morrison in a later letter says this is news to him. "There were, it is true, Ukrainian and other fascist nationalist groups in the Germany army, but . . .", he says.

To Captain Geary, it is evident, everybody living in the U.S.S.R. is a Russian. A man who has had so distinguished a career in Canadian political life as Captain Geary should not be guilty of a confusion which many of us think is grave. An Irishman is not an Englishman, and a Ukrainian is not a Russian.

These tens of thousands of Ukrainians that seemed, to Mr. Morrison, to have switched their allegiance could hardly care to substitute one curse for another. If, then, it appeared that they had done so, it can now be seen more clearly that their purpose was to try to destroy both invaders. Naturally, living under that order which we hear so much about, for about 25 years, they tried to destroy it when a chance presented itself.

President Truman recently hinted of disharmony behind the Iron Curtain. Recently the Toronto Star reported an interview with a Mrs. Rebet whose mission to Canada was "to tell the story of a fight more than 200,000 men and women of the Ukrainian Partisan army wage for freedom." The Russians may be only passively accepting Communism, but the Ukrainians are actively resisting it. It is gratifying to know they are "already recognized by the democracies as an ally within the Soviet sphere."

Since Mr. Morrison is a member of that group which would destroy our order of things here, we would like to see honest answers to those questions put forward by Captain Geary. Please, Mr. Morrison, let's have answers worthy of a graduate, not just the usual denials.

VIC'S CORNER

"Gather ye rosebuds while ye may,
Old Time is still a-flying . . . "

The truth of these lines is becoming more apparent every day as week follows week, and the end of the year fast approaches. It was brought home to us forcibly at the 4T9-5T0 class party last Saturday night, when we realized what a short distance separates us from the cold, cruel Outside World But enough of nostalgia, and on to the news of the week at Vic.

Top spot still goes to the V C U elections, slated for this Friday As Stan emphasized last week, we hope that everyone will come out to cast his vote for next year's executive. Campaign speeches will be delivered this Thursday at 1:10, so drag out your soap box and let's go!

We feel we should have a black border on this one, but we just want to extend our condolences to both our hockey teams for their losses last week.

Their spirits will be revived, though, at the annual Athletic Dinner March 4th in Burwash Hall Annis Stukus of football fame will be guest speaker. Invitations are being sent out, and all R.S.V.P.'s should be addressed to Al Strike, secretary of the V.C.A.U. Any athlete who has not received an invitation may buy a ticket at the V.C.U. office for 55 cents.

St. Patrick isn't the only one who has his day March 17th, for that is the date of the girls' Athletic Tea, the feminine counterpart of the banquet mentioned above. Both Vic and University colors will be presented to those girls who have won them, and the athletic year for girls will be brought to an enjoyable close.

Before we leave the athletic scene we mustn't forget our Jr. Vic basketball team, which is in the play-offs. Best of luck to you, fellows!

Doctor, lawyer, merchant, chief ... you can count them off on your buttons, but if you're trying to choose a career, there are more dependable methods. One of these is the series of vocational guidance lectures for men being sponsored by the Victoria College Alumni Association. Among the topics to be discussed are post-graduate work, merchandising, the ministry, advertising, and the university placement service. The lectures are held in room 24 at Vic. Further information may be obtained by consulting the notice on the bulletin board in the rotunda, or the cards placed on the table there.

Meditations on the past imperfect: Wonder where campus musical shows would be if "college" didn't rhyme with "knowledge"? But it does, and so that we can try to absorb some of this same knowledge, we will wind up the news for now, but will be with you again next week.

COLE SCAN

Amongst the more civilized journals that decorate the newsstands, The New Yorker stands at the head of the list. We're always surprised that this magazine, catering as it does to the 'gluttons of privileges', unfailingly takes an editorial stand on the side where enlightment is not blurred by the thick shadow of the heavy adverliser. This is not so paradoxical as it appears on the surface, we suppose, for the position they take is the only one that will effectively resist the eroding forces that are now so vigorously at work on the pillars of our society. The New Yorker makes it very clear that implicit in democracy is the right of every man to think for himself and to find out for himself in his own way the meaning of truth. If there are no encroachments on these rights then we may all rest easy that the small 't' will suffice. When it appears that the totaltarian formula is such anathema then it would seem sensible to assume that no part of the formula should be employed in eradicating it. It's a shame that The New Yorker is practically alone in this field.

PHE Women Drub Vic 4-1 Take Hockey Playoff Lead

The Fizz Ed women dominated the play throughout the first game of the intramural hockey playoffs yesterday to hand Vic I a 4-1 drubbing.

The Vic team was outplayed, outfought and outskated most of the way by the co-ordinated PHE quintet who pulled away from a 1-1 score at the end of the first to click the sign board along three more places. This game, which puts PHE in a good position to win the hockey cup Vic has held for the last seven years, is the first of a two-game, total-points-to-count championship series.

Watson Scores Three

Ferne Watson, of triple-hat-trick-against-McGill fame, pulled a hat trick again to give her team a firm grip on the intramural championship. Watson started the scoring at 5:30 in the first stanza when Marni Leeson set her up on a beautiful pass-out from the corner which Ferne lifted high into the top corner of the net.

Vic broke into the scoring column just a minute and a half later. Di Rogers broke away with the puck from centre ice and in the ensuing scramble around the net Jan Martin poked it in.

Jean Myers Terrific

At 3:16 in the second period, Watson chalked up another goal on a solo effort. She gave the drive to the Fizz Edders who kept the puck within Vic's blue line most of the time. Only the terrific defensive barrier in the form of Vic's indomitable Jean Myers kept Watson and others from waltzing right up the scoring column.

At the other end of the rink in all three periods, Elva Rampton and Irma Bullock were an almost unbeatable combination on defense. They caught up to and thwarted break-away attempts by Di Rogers, Peg Taplin and Alison Jeffries.

PHE Increase Lead

Despite the drive shown by Jean Myers, the Fizz Edders put on a successful push in the third period which added two more points to their bid for the championship. Their constant battering wore out the Vic defense and goalie enabling Eli Sommerville to slip in a scrambled puck from Alice Jameison and soon after Watson by-passed two Vic defensemen and their goalie to score her third tally. In this last frame, Jane Macklin showed top defense tactics against Vic attacks.

Second Game Tomorrow

The second and last game of this points-to-count series will be played tomorrow (Thursday) at 12:30 in the Arena.

Bailey Blues Face Redmen Friday Night

Friday night the Blues ring down the hockey curtain for this season and all indications point to the best game of the year on Varsity ice. For the Blue's rivals are none other than dear old McGill and Ace Bailey's lads are eager to continue the rousing hockey which the clubs produced in their last meeting in Montreal.

In that contest feeling ran high all night and finally culminated in a rough house which came very close to developing into a riot. McGill's huge, quick-tempered Doug Heron and Reg Sinclair tangled with Varsity's Gord Ecclestone to start the proceedings but before long there were several other minor brawls, even usually cool, level-tempered Paul Hutzulak became embroiled although he might have been trying to break up a couple of battlers in front of his goal-mouth.

In addition to the rough and ready hockey, the game the two teams gave out with some of the fastest and most thrilling puck-chasing of the year. Due to brilliant netminding acrobatics by Hutzulak Varsity held off the Redmen to gain a 5-3 decision.

The Redmen also lost the decision in the roughhouse league, too, although the Blues didn't come off without a scratch. McGill's Jim Henry was one casualty after what the Montreal viewpoint describes as "being high-sticked into the boards". However, Cy Beigler was toted from the ice to the hospital after he was heavily bodied to the ice.

Skule Wins First Game Of Playoff

By EDWARD J. SOKOLOWSKI

Johnny McCreedy's Senior School Interfaculty hockey team have grabbed a one-game hold on the Jenning's Cup last Monday when they defeated the St. Mike's squad by a score of 5-3. The second game of the two-out-of-three series will be played this afternoon at 12.30 at the Varsity Arena.

Senior School are the defending champs and at present are the Jenning's Cup holders. Johnny McCreedy is attempting to coach to his third championship. Johnny coached the Ajax hockey team to the championship in 1947 and repeated this performance last year for Senior School. At the moment he has half the cup back to School with one game to the good for his team.

The series will not be a walk-over and the Irish team still have plenty of fight left in them. They played a hard game against School and the Engineers were hard pressed all the way.

The Irish will be all out to extend the series to Friday while the Schoolmen will be fighting to end the series and get back to their slide rules.

The last game on Monday was close all the way and it was only in the dying minutes of the last period that School was sure of a victory.

MacKay opened the scoring for School at the 8.12 mark on an assist from Nick Lye. MacDonald tied the score seven minutes later when he beat Engineer Sutherland unassisted. Bob Baxter gave the Irish a one-point lead a few minutes later with another unassisted goal. The tilt was deadlocked again when Davie Graham scored from a scramble, with MacKay helping.

Jerry Sedgley put the Engineers ahead when he scored the only goal of the second period. Nick Lye again was in on the play.

School's MacDonald added another goal to the Engineers' score early in the third period with Jerry Sedgley helping out. Bob Baxter notched his second goal of the game unassisted to cut the score difference by one and MacDonald again scored for the Engineers to give School a two-point lead.

MacDonald with two goals, Nick Lye, Jerry Sedgley, Dick Veenis, Goalie Suds Sutherland, and Dave Graham sparked the Engineers. Ken McIntyre, Bob Baxter, Joe Prendergast, and Pat Duffy kept the Irish in the picture throughout the entire game.

The second game will be played today at 12.30 and if a third game is necessary, it will be played on Friday at 12.30. For the best seats, you better get there early.

Local Volleyball Women Win 44-19 From McMaster U.

The All-Varsity women's volleyball team defeated McMaster 44-19 in LM gym on Monday. The Toronto team had a clear margin throughout the game leading 20-7 at half-time.

Joan Gault was one of the instrumental factors in her team's victory. She not only used a fast, low serve, but garnered many points by her spiking at the net. Thelma Henderson was also tops at the net, placing smashes in empty spots.

For McMaster, Stella Johnston and Jean Price were valuable at the net and Joan Webb added up eight points on her serve.

A return game will be held on March 5 at McMaster when the archery team also travels to Hamilton.

The interfaculty open indoor track meet moved onward last night as the Tuesday night speedsters ran through the Senior and Novice two mile events and the 300 yards open. They are planning another track meeting for tomorrow night when the 300, one mile, half mile and medley relay will be on the board.

Sobko, Kelly, Garrassino, McMullen, Hryshko, Gawinski, Speers, Bassingwaithe, Forestell, Dashwood and McMacken are asked to be on hand.

St. Mikes' George McMullen set the pace for the senior two mile distance and finished first doing the course in 10:2.8. Bud McCurry of Dents placed second and George Speers, Vic, held the show spot. Johnny Hryshko took fourth place.

In the novice two mile, Paul Forestell added another first to a long string which he has built up throughout the indoor open running. Paul posted a 10:16 for the event to beat out Pete Niblock, UC, who finished second. Frank Thompson, Trinity, and Bill Hooker of Vic took third and fourth places respectively.

The 300 yard open was won by John Hryshko, UC, whose winning time was 35.4. Runner-up was John Dashwood, Trinity entry, while John Sobko, UC, and Ron Baird, Meds, finished in that order.

Junior UC took the measure of the Vic fifths yesterday as they ran up a 69-39 final score to move on in the major league playoffs. Gibson and Kuzmocha sparked the red and white quintet with fourteen point performances while Buckets Kennedy ran close behind the leaders with a thirteen point total.

Cootie Courtemarche led the Vicsters with eleven counters and teammate Ostrum garnered nine. Jake Fulford hooped five, Lank Coles four and Hendra and McCamus netted three each for the red and gold quintet. Barber with seven and Young and Badner with sixes were among the scorers for the winners.

Senior Meds A's handed the Emmanuel A hoop squad an overwhelming 53-37 setback in the other major b-ball tilt at Hart House yesterday. The Medsmen built up a fifteen point margin in the first half but were only able to hold a single point edge in the second frame scoring.

L. Smith was the big cannon for the docs with sixteen points opposite his name and Al Varga turned in a fourteen point effort for the winners. K. Hobson accounted for eight and Bill Cochrane five of the red and black total while Turner and Armstrong notched four per.

Four men figured in the Emmanuel total. Topp was high with fourteen counters and Sloan followed with ten. Johnson with nine and Van Stone who rang up four were the other theolog marksmen.

French Clubs Present Four French Comedies

Four French one-act comedies will be presented Wednesday evening in Cartwright Hall by the four French clubs of the University.

Included on the program are "Les propos interrompus", by Gheon (St. Michael's); "Les Irascibles", by Chancerel (U.C.); "A louer meuble", by d'Hervilliez (Trinity), and "Le Commissaire esy bon enfant", by Courtelaine (Victoria).

HOCKEY DANCE

The final hockey game of the season will be written into the books this Friday night when the McGill Redmen are visitors on Toronto ice. McGill, who drubbed the newly crowned Carabins 16-4 last Friday in Montreal, still has a chance to tie the Blues for second place.

The Blue and White Society will be sponsoring the final dance of the year at the C.O.T.C. Drill Hall with tickets available at the door. Alec Campbell will appear between periods at the game with his accordian.

Sinclair In Lead As Season Closes

By JOHN MOYSE

McGill's great pivot, shifty Reggie Sinclair, virtually nailed down the intercollegiate scoring crown by racking up three goals and seven assists in the 16-4 Red rout of the champion Carabins last Friday. This ten point total vaulted him into the scoring leadership with 32 points made up of 19 goals and 13 assists.

Sinclair's closest rivals are Georges Emblem and Andre Charest of Les Carabins. Emblem failed to add to his 25 point total last Friday while Charest registered a hat trick to enjoy undisputed possession of third place with 24 points.

Tops for Ace Bailey's crew is left-winger Bill Spence whose three goals and assist against the Gaels moved him into a fourth-place tie with Carabin Gregoire Giguere. Each has 23 points.

Spence's linemate, Bob Henry, counted a goal and four assists in the Queen's game to bring his record to 19 points. Deadlocked with him is Queen's leading light Don Murray.

Sinclair has flashed the red light 19 times for a lead of seven in the sniping department over Murray. Rich Howson heads the Blue sharpshooters with 11 goals. Emblem and Giguere share playmaking honors with 14 assists each.

Jaxmen Record Heavy Vote In H. H. Elections

A substantial increase in the number of members voting in yesterday's Hart House elections was recorded, due in no small part to the surprisingly heavy vote of the Skulemen at Ajax. Warden Ignatieff said late last night that the first two engineering years at Ajax had a turn-out of seventy-eight per cent of their electorate. The Queens Park Campus polled a heavier vote than last year, but their 19 per cent was only sufficient to bring the average poll up to 28.7 per cent.

In each of the larger house committees the first two names in the lists of successful candidates represent members of this year's committees who are carried over by vote of the present members of the various committees. A house rule makes it impossible for one faculty to have more than three representatives on each of the various committees.

Botany Conversat

Botany students are combining their own studies and practical research for the farmer, consumer and industries. They plan a nine display public demonstration of their work on March 4 and 5 in the Botany Building. Above: First year honor students, Sheila Irwin and Kate Britton, prepare exhibits for the display.

Botany Conversat Opens, Many Displays Featured

Take two days of Conversat, mix in one display of Plant Pathology, add nine more displays and a lot of work from both staff and students of the Botany Department, and you come up with the Botany Conversat. The Conversat, which comes from conversazione, meaning conversation, will be held tonight from 7.30 to 10.30, and tomorrow from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., in the Botany Building.

An Undergrad Effort

About 100 undergraduates have been working on this display, which will illustrate to the laymen the progress and development of botanical science. It is part of the University's contribution to man's fight against disease and want, and will illustrate the relatively unfamiliar aspects of botany in such a way that extensive scientific knowledge will not be needed to grasp their significance.

Many Sciences Involved

Cytology and Genetics, the study of the plant cell interrelated with the mechanism of heredity; Physiology, the study of the chemical and physical operations carried on inside the plant; and Morphology, a study of the internal anatomy of plants, are three of the nine displays.

To prove that all these long names hide a really interesting subject, let us see what Morphology has to offer. This study shows the division between plants and animals. Stop and think a mo-

BLOOD DONORS

Final reports from the Red Cross indicate that over 500 students on the U of T campus have signified their intentions of donating blood. These students answered the appeal of the Red Cross for blood donors during its current campaign.

The donors will not be called during exams. They will be called one week before they are to make their donations. Those who wish to donate blood may sign at 50 Bloor Street East.

Porter Not Hopeful Of Fees Reduction Or More Bursaries

There is "little likelihood" of a reduction in university fees next year, Hon. Dana Porter, Ontario Minister of Education told The Varsity last night. The minister was commenting on his discussion of the Fees Brief Monday with S.A.C. delegates Gordon Gwynne-Timothy and Jane Hazard.

Grants To Cover Costs

While he would like to see fees go down, Porter said, Ontario government grants would have to be used next year to help meet increased university costs.

Asked about the prospects of an increased number of bursaries, the minister replied: "There are a great many bursaries now." Pointing out that such grants had increased from "a very small number" five years ago to nearly 1000 now, and that 75 percent of the cost of the Dominion - Provincial Scholarships which comprise many of these was met by the provincial government, he said these could not be extended at present.

"I hope we will be able to offer more of them eventually," Porter added. As to the possibility of a government program to replace DVA grants after 1950, the minister expressed grave doubts. "I see no likelihood of any such replacement for some time," he said.

SAC President Reports

Gwynne-Timothy's interview with the Minister of Education was, according to yesterday's statement, "a very significant step in the recognition of the worth of student government."

"Mr. Porter felt that at this time it would be impossible to lower the fees for the University, since the University grant has already been increased for this year and the rise in fees has covered the rise in the cost of education," Miss Hazard's statement says. "The minister was also of the opinion that it was possible for all students who had the ambition to put themselves through college to do so by means of loans, bursaries and part-time employment. We told him that from our experience it was impossible . . . and that it didn't seem fair that some should have to . . . while others did not."

Gwynne-Timothy said he had asked the minister to consider some possible continuation of the DVA scheme which had "enabled thousands of veterans to obtain an education."

Miss Hazard remarked that Porter had suggested that Toronto was the only university in which students had complained of high fees. "We assured him," she said, "That the University of Toronto Fees Brief was not meant to apply solely to Varsity."

Minister "Sympathetic"

During the 75-minute interview, the delegates said, Porter had been "most sympathetic" to the brief.

St. Mike's Win Debate Motion By Vote Of 44-8

Playing hosts to Trinity, St. Mike's Senate Club yesterday carried the motion "In the opinion of this house, this University proves that denominational colleges offer advantages which outweigh the consequent loss of unity", by a vote of 44-8.

Take Affirmative

Claiming that "a non-denominational university would be like a large machine turning out uniform products, not men with beliefs", Dave Quigley, III Poli Sci., opened the case for the affirmative St. Mike's team. He pointed out that the result of abolition of the denominational colleges would be uniformity rather than unity. "The world needs men with principles" he said.

Trinity Takes Negative

Christine Russell, I Trinity, opened for the opposition with the claim that individuals come to a denominational college "with an idea and can't bear to have it questioned". She stressed the necessity for the

McMaster To Be Scene Of Debate With Entries From All Over Canada

Hamilton, March 3 — (CUP)— National debating finals will be held at McMaster University on March 11 and 12, with contestants from all over Canada competing.

The representative from the Maritimes Inter-University Debating League will be the University of New Brunswick; from the Ontario League, the Ontario Agricultural College. It is also expected that the Western University Debating League will send a representative group. Topic for the debates will be: "Resolved, Canada should have a national Bill of Rights."

The finals are sponsored by the Canadian University Debating League, an organization formed last year under the auspices of the National Federation of Canadian University Students.

Neo-Georgian Memorial To Reaction

By TED ROSS

This is the last in a series of three architectural criticisms of the new buildings on the campus.

It is lamentable that the Board of Governors should be so reactionary as to sponsor a neo-Georgian laboratory building in Toronto in 1947. It is high time that these bogies of style were laid to rest. A modern building would be more fitting and stimulating, especially if executed with the same competence that the architects, Messrs. Page and Steele, display in their own offices on the north side of St. Clair, west of Yonge.

Functional Concept

I know that architectural students get rabid over these things, but to be objective, it must be admitted that as neo-Georgian buildings go this one is quite pleasant. Also, I think the fundamental concept is quite functional—a long bar shaped building facing south, with wings at the rear connecting it with existing buildings. Despite the very high land coverage, all main rooms are surprising bright. It is good street architecture—a flat façade relieved by rythmical openings and an interesting wall texture of stock brick laid up in flemish bond. Of course it could have been done much more excitingly in the modern vernacular, but its character is appropriate, diginfied, efficient and refined. A modern architect would probably have reached much the same conclusion.

Immoral Hiding

The structure of the building is partly reinforced-concrete frame and partly steel. However, the relatively narrow vertical openings would suggest that it ought to be "bearing wall". By modern functional standards this camouflage hiding the frame is immoral. Some purists would have it that the ratio of window area to wall is too great for a Georgian building, but it seems to me that neo-Georgians are entitled to use steel lintels. When one goes inside, it becomes evident that the window pattern on the façade is more than a little forced. The rooms have little relation to the window openings for some partitions jog to avoid windows, others butt into them and in many of the rooms the windows are off in the corners, destroying the classical symmetry. Indeed, there is little in the interior to suggest a Georgian exterior. The corridors are lined with a cold looking glazed tile, easy to maintain but very expensive. Most of the rooms are uninteresting, although the plumbing pipes and taps on the laboratory desks are cleanly designed.

Pretentious Marble

The metal windows are nice, with slim dividing bars and pleasant sized panes. Although the marble veneer is pretentious, the bronze framed entrances look quite fine.

Though we may look down our noses at the Queeston limestone window surrounds, spandrels, cornice, and the balustrades across the lower window openings, it must be admitted that they give the building a good geometric crispness and definition. At the rear this treatment is abandoned, sadly, and the character suffers.

It is hardly fair to harp on the inconsistencies and illogicalities of the building when the "style" was apparently at the insistence of the Board of Governors. I hope we are growing out of this naive conservatism, but meanwhile, in a small voice I must admit that I like a traditional building well-done better than a poor modern one.

Young Osgoode Student Passes Practical Exam; Is Warned On Acquittal

A first-year Osgoode Hall student and a graduate last year of the U of T, George Ben received a warning yesterday from Magistrate T. C. Elmore in "B" Courtroom, City Hall.

The law student appeared in "B" Court on a charge of obstructing a constable in the execution of his duty as a result of an encounter Feb. 13 with a representative of the law at the corner of Spadina and Dundas. Asked by the policeman to move along, Ben, a member of a crowd the officer thought was obstructing traffic, insisted on knowing the reason for the request.

Some 15 Osgoode students accompanied their class-mate to the courtroom where Arthur Martin, Osgoode lecturer in criminal law, conducted the defense.

As the accused left the prisoners' dock, Magistrate Elmore dismissed him with the remark: "I do hope you'll profit by the experience."

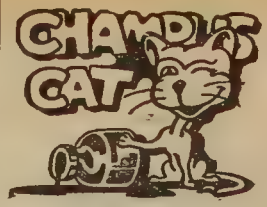
Academic Freedom—Unlimited

Recently three professors at the University of Washington were ousted from their positions because they believed in the right to join the Communist party or what are described as Communist Front organizations. They claimed their right to join or co-operate with such groups is part of the tradition of academic freedom. Because the principle involved is one discussed on this campus recently we reprint the following article from the Manitoban:

In defending his action of outright banishment, the president of Washington University has said:



"Academic freedom consists of something more than merely an absence of restraints placed upon the teacher by the institution that employs him. It demands, as well, an absence of restraints placed upon him by his political affiliations, by dogmas that may stand in the way of free search for the truth, or by rigid adherence to a party line that sacrifices dignity, honour, and integrity to accomplishment of political ends."

In the case of open Communist affiliation, the stand taken by the university president, Raymond B. Allen, is clear. It means that under the pretext of preserving freedom, freedom to join or be sympathetic to Communist groups is to be denied. That in itself might be defended, but are there not more serious implications in the Allen definition? Who is to decide when a politcal dogma "stands in the way of free search for the truth"? Why can the same stigma not be applied to a Social Creditor, or to a Technocrat, or a cyclical-budget Liberal?

And what is "rigid adherence to a party line", etc. Most political parties have rigid party lines to which members must adhere. Only a very naive person would venture to say that in Canada and the United States "dignity, honour and integrity" are never sacrificed in order to achieve the desired end. Who is fit to decide the limits to political manoeuvring? Is the sincere Communist to be persecuted while the hypocritical liberal is held up as the paragon of virtue?

The most dangerous implication is the opening of the door to unlimited scrutiny of the personal beliefs and habits of university professors, teachers and students. Once unleash the forces of suspicion and prejudice and there will be no holding them. For it is impossible to draw a sharp line and say that only certain groups should be watched. Fear of coming under the notice of any busybody or bigoted zealot will quickly snuff out any vestiges of academic freedom that remain once the process of examination begins.

Professors, like most people, like to affiliate themselves with definite groups or movements. Most of them realize that no one political dogma or social philosophy offers the complete answer to their search for truth. But under the limitations of any political or economic society individuals must align themselves somewhere or lose the opportunity of furthering a better society under the vain hope of waiting for the perfect philosophy. Are the President Allens convinced that the present capitalistic society is so perfect that it must restrict freedom of those who do or may challenge the basic framework of that society? Freedom for professors will not last long if such attitudes become universal in our institutions of higher learning.

Jotay Meets Mechanical Mind

I can see the end now. For some time I have been afraid that I might have to go to the waiting room and sit for 100,000,000 years until the sun exploded or the moon fell. But a few days ago I happened to notice some prophetic words which made me realize that we may be trucking off this mortal coil sooner than we think. Perhaps even within 10,000 years.

According to an A.P. report from London dated Jan. 14, "A British scientist says he believes it is possible to build a machine that can think like a human being."

This is a pretty harmless sort of statement, on the surface. My first reaction was, "Why?" We have enough human beings think as it is, at least in a half-hearted sort of a way. They even built a statue about one.

Under A Log

I decided, however, to dig a little deeper under the pile of type. And beneath an old log I discovered a man named Dr. Ashby, who seemed to know all about it. Dr. Ashby said these so-called thinking machines may even explore regions of "intellectual subtlety and complexity at present beyond human powers." I find that such a machine would ultimately sustain, repair and defend itself, presumably without having to resort to unions or other protective coloring.

You see where this is leading? Look closer. No, that's wrong. Look again.

As I see it, in about 10,948 A.D. the new race of metal mental marvels (the alliteration accomplishes nothing here; but I find myself strangely drawn to it) will start passing out sly hints that we humans aren't needed anymore. Within the next thousand years or so, anyone who hasn't taken those hints will be quietly shown to the back door which happens to lead to a pit 7,000 feet deep. Then the lid will be put back on.

So much for humanity. Now, what of Dr. Ashby's thinking machine?

This progenitor of the "lord of the universe" to-be apparently "looks like four automobile batteries over which are suspended magnets and inside which complicated electrical tensions are set up.

No Sex, No Nothing

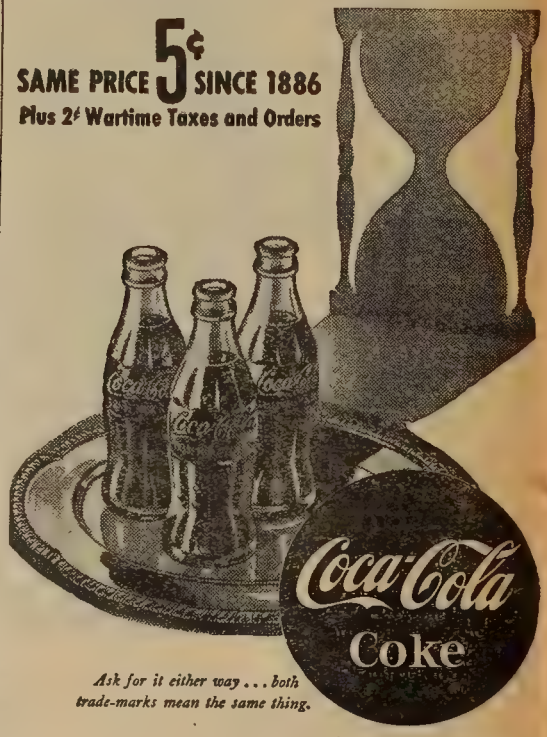
Evidently sex is not intended to play a particularly important part in the lives of these creatures. I can't see much future in a happy home full of the patter of small car batteries and electrical tensions. Perhaps the power of thought makes sex unnecessary, at least in its more physical aspects. (Come to think of it, what other aspects are there?)

At present, the amount of actual thought given to any specific subject by Dr. Ashby's pride and joy is somewhat limited, to say the least. As a matter of fact, I would be quite willing to meet this machine in mental conflict, at any time, anywhere, and on any subject the machine or Dr. Ashby cares to choose. (How do you like them apples?)

Naturally, the good doctor is as proud of his car batteries as a father of a new-born son. If you speak nicely to him, he will upset the "condition of electrical balance" wherein the machine "feels" most comfortable. This condition, oddly enough, is known to the scientists as the "most favorable situation."

When the balance is upset, however, the machine resourcefully readjusts its many parts to a new favorable situation. Then Dr. Ashby proudly pats it on the head and puts it to bed.

As one scientist put it, "that's not much thinking, but pretty good for a machine."



Dr. Ashby, I can list any number of machines which have not only taken it upon themselves to think, but also actually to outwit mankind. You ought to see what my typewriter does to me sometimes.

As a matter of fact I think we have more to fear from a race of vengeful typewriters sweeping over the world in demonical fury than

Frosh Team Win Robinette Debates — Retain Senate

The first-year team of Jack Geller and Bert Bloom is the winner of this year's Robinette debates. Geller and Bloom defeated Alex Dixon and Al Noble yesterday in the final debate of the Robinette series, "Resolved that the Canadian Senate should be abolished". The winning team upheld the negative.

Al Noble, first speaker for the affirmative, argued that the Canadian senate is an anachronism, a body no longer necessary in Canadian life. He defined the senate as "a piece of window dressing, a nice green pasture for old war-horses."

"The Canadian Senate fulfills the purpose of stability", stressed Bert Bloom, first speaker for the negative. "It is a bulwark against the eccentricities of voters. Hasty legislation can be reviewed and studied in this body." Bloom took exception to the description of the senate as a pasture for old war-horses. He cited divorce legislation and the margarine question as two examples of senate action as opposed to House of Commons inactivity.

Alex Dixon, for the affirmative, compared the Canadian Senate to the Senate of the University of Toronto. He pointed out that Controller Balfour attacked the professors of the university, not the senate. Thus, he maintained, the senate appears to be unnecessary. "How much more so is the Canadian Senate?" Dixon pointed out that the Senate was established when Canada was a colony. Now that Can-

Fillmore Named Editor By Varsity Staff Vote; SAC Approval Required

In the elections for next year's Editor-in-Chief of The Varsity held in West Hall yesterday the staff vote gave Stan Fillmore, II Vic, a majority over three other candidates on the first ballot.

The four candidates will be interviewed by the Publications Committee of the SAC today.

The Editor-in-Chief of The Varsity is appointed on the basis of a simple majority vote in an SAC meeting. The Council must consider the recommendation of the Publications Committee but need not accept it. The Publications Committee usually makes its recommendation on the basis of the out-going editor's recommendation but it need not. The editor's recommendation is guided by his own conviction and the staff vote.

Dorothy Herring, III Vic, Dave Armour, I SPS, and Bill Gagnon, III UC, were the other candidates.

Opens Door To Inner Sanctum

He had come to see the President, but knew that he had little chance of obtaining an interview. Somehow, he thought that he would try anyway. He approached the receptionist's desk, and asked boldly, "Could I see the president please. I haven't got an appointment."

The secretary did her duty. She informed the young man that the President was a busy man, and he could send a letter if he wanted. But the President's door was open and he heard the words of the little lady.

The busy man opened the door and said, "I can't have a man writing a letter to me in my outer office. Come in and let's have a chat."

This was Sidney Smith.

Queen's Engineer To Tell Institute Of Canal System

Dr. L. F. Grant, Associate Professor of Civil Engineering at Queen's, will speak before the Royal Canadian Institute Saturday night in Convocation Hall. The lecture, to which the public is invited, will deal with the development of engineering in Canada.

Educated at Royal Military College, Kingston, and Queen's University, Dr. Grant has at various times worked with railroads, carried on a general engineering practice, served in the Canadian Army and instructed at both R.M.C. and Queen's. From 1940 to 1944, he was General Staff Officer with Military District No. 5. Laval University awarded him an honorary doctorate in 1947, the year in which he was president of the Engineering Institute of Canada.

In the Saturday night lecture, Dr. Grant proposes to trace the progress made in Canadian life through the development of the engineering profession in this country. Significant, he will maintain, has been the evolution of a great canal system which may culminate soon in the proposed St. Lawrence-Great Lakes waterway. If this is brought into being, the Great Lakes will be open to more than 90 per cent of the world's shipping.

Progress In Canada

Further points to be dealt with in the lecture include the erection of our modern highways system, railways and bridges, the twentieth century urban skyline with its steel frame-work and high-speed elevators.

US Summer Tour To Other Lands Open To Canada

Canadian students are eligible to take part in the United States Summer Tour and Travel Scheme, Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, President of the National Federation of Canadian University Students, announced yesterday.

The scheme includes study tours, work camps, summer schools and two seminars. There are study tours through Holland, England, France, Scandinavia, Italy, Switzerland, Eastern Europe, and South America. Work camps are held in Holland, Finland, Britain and Eastern Europe. There are two seminars: one at the University of Utrecht on "The Future of Western Civilization, Theory and Practice", and the other at Sorrento on "Roman Culture."

The average cost, covering travel and tours is about $550. Two ships are to leave, one about June 15, and another about June 30.

Application forms, which will be available from NFCUS representatives are used as the basis of selection. "In essence, from the answers on the application forms, we judge the applicant on the basis of his preparation in the areas and the subjects he studied, his language ability and his extra-curricular activities," USNSA officials explain.

Applications should be made to the International Commission of USNSA, 18 Brattle Street, Cambridge 38, Mass., By March 15.

Blatz Reveals How To Pass Examinations

"There are three ways to pass an examination", said Dr. Blatz of the Phsychology Dept. in his address on "The Psychology of Examinations". He was addressing the last discussion group on Mental Hygiene. The three ways are: (1) Write legibly, (2) Never bluff; "If you can bluff the examiner, you should be teaching the subject not learning it", he said; and (3) Be succinct.

"A state of anxiety before examinations", he said, "is not necessarily pathological. A state of anxiety is inevitable." Individuals in most cases, he said, have a sense of insecurity because they don't know what is to be on the test.

On the subject of examinations, Dr. Blatz said that they are "an outstanding example of infantile supervision by authorities". He called them an extreme form of preserving and infantile attitude towards education. He said that the only place where an examination would be any good would be in the final year of the Medical, Dental or Engineering Courses and then only as a safeguard to the public, not as a means of grading the students. He deplored the economic and social aspects attached to exams, emphasizing that they should be nothing but a check for the student on his academic progress.

"Everyone had a pretty good idea how he will do on the exams," he said, the important thing is being able to accept the result. Anyone not prepared to accept the result will probably employ a deputy agent to surmount the difficulty, he said, and that agent is usually hysteria.

The people who break down emotionally at the prospect of an examination, he said, are the ones who habitually obtain high grades in their work and are striving to maintain their social and academic ranking, with the accent on the social aspect.

JOHN ROGERS

St. Michael's College yesterday lost one of its better-known students in the death of John F. Rogers. Throughout his high school career at De La Salle "Oaklands" he had been recognized as an athlete particularly in hockey. His death was due to an illness which handicapped his participation in athletics this year. Last season he played goal for the Varsity Junior Bees.

De La Salle grads will remember his connection with the now disbanded cadet corps of which he was the commanding officer for the year 1946-47. Recently John received a commission in the Irish Regiment in which he had planned to make his career. His twenty-first birthday was two weeks ago.

UC Rotunda Colorful Scene As Students Hold Campaign

Chorus lines and other evidences of pre-war gaiety will feature the UC Lit's pre-election rally in the JCR Monday noon. The UC rotunda resembles a colorful circus midway, and JCR habitues are being entertained with records and transcribed campaign speeches.

Candidates for Lit President are Jack Houlihan and Jack Tinker. Norm Chalmers and E. H. Orsler are in the running for SAC rep. Voters will choose between Wally Fram and Bob Sutherland for Literary Director, and G. R. Wallace and R. L. Strom for Athletic Director.

Four Candidates

Indications are that the race for the position of Publicity Director will be one of the most interesting of the election, with four candidates, A. Isaacovitch, W. Francis, B. Marcus and D. Gilmour aspiring to the office.

Two positions have been filled by acclamation, that of Social Director by J. S. Bull, and Treasurer by R. Hands.

Three-Way Race

R. Grant, D. Ross and M. Kertzer are candidates for Secretary, and in another three-way race J. Casse, G. Hodgson and R. Taylor are running for NFCUS representative.

There are three candidates for fourth year president, four for third year president, and four for second year president.

Musician Born In Russia To Discuss Native Music

An address on Russian music, probably dealing with its general development for the last 150 years, will be given to the Russian Club next Friday by Boris Berlin, of the Royal Conservatory of Music of Toronto, a club spokesman announced yesterday.

His address next Friday will be given in Women's Union at 8.15 p.m.

Born in Russia

Mr. Berlin was born in Kharkov, Russia, and began study of piano at an early age. He left Russia at the end of the First World War to continue his studies in Germany and Switzerland. He came to Canada 23 years ago and has been with the Conservatory during the last 20.

He maintained his interest in Russian music, gathering what he terms "probably the largest collection of Russian music in Canada." In 1935 and 1936 he visited his native land in order to attend festivals of music and drama held there in those years. While there, he met and became acquainted with some of the leading Soviet composers, such as Prokofieff and Shostakovich.

Music in Russia

When asked Wednesday for a survey of music in Russia today, Mr. Berlin stated that it is completely in the tradition of old Russian masters, like Tchaikowsky. Russian composers and music lovers are also well acquainted with and influenced by Western music, he said. He added, "Due to radio and records it is impossible for a modern nation to be musically insular."

Explains Criticism

This was his explanation of recent criticism in Russia of some composers: "This disciplining has not been mainly directed by the

Boris Roubakine

A piano recital of highest quality was given in the Conservatory Concert Hall last Monday. The pianist was Boris Roubakine, a newcomer to Toronto whose talent, no doubt, will soon find widest recognition throughout Canada.

To analyse his playing is next to impossible: technique and musicianship, intellect and temperament are so perfectly blended that one cannot be separated from the other. The performance was neither excitingly individualistic nor impersonally detached and reflected perfect control and classical simplicity. In short, I was conscious of Mozart, Beethoven, and Franck, not of Mr. Roubakine.

One point of criticism: The ornaments in the first movement of the Mozart sonata in C major would have sounded clearer had the lid of the piano been closed. The rarely heard sonata in E, op. 109, is one of Beethoven's most romantic works. Its message is wonderfully summarized in its last two bars.

Three short piano pieces by Villa-Lobos, Guarnieri and Segueira gave a picture-postcard impression of the musical landscape of Brazil. The Cesar Franck Prelude, Chorale, and Fuge suffers from a nervous hothouse atmosphere and an unbearable chromaticism. I wonder whether anybody could by ear identify the Fugue as such. Fortunately the encore, Brahms' Intermezzo, led back to healthy diatonic harmony in the "radiant C major" key in which the recital had opened.

Equally impressive as the performance is the cause its proceeds are devoted to. It will help to send some 25 student delegates to the symposium of the International Federation of Music Students in Boston. Toronto should watch this unique exchange of ideas (in and about music) with great interest since in 1950 the symposium will meet in Toronto for the first time.

T.S.O.

The Hungarian violinist Joseph Szigeti appeared with the T.S.O. in a beautifully balanced and varied program consisting of works by Sibelius, Tartini, Mendelssohn, Beethoven and Ravel.

Mr. Szigeti showed superb technical mastery in the Mendelssohn concerto in E minor, playing the second movement with beautifully restrained sentimentality, but it was in the rarely heard D minor concerto by the early eighteenth century Italian master Tartini that his exquisitely singing tone was heard to best advantage. This work was a delightful surprise, to this reviewer at least, with its serenely classical mood and poignant overtones. We were most struck by the amazing dexterity of Mr. Szigeti's bow arm and the tonal purity of his high notes.

Why Beethoven's Fourth Symphony has not enjoyed the same popularity as his Third or Fifth is an interesting problem. Certainly it is not because it lacks melody and charm. It has a fresh buoyancy and joie de vivre instead of the stormy agitation which we have come to associate with many of his symphonies.

The program began on a rather savage note with one of Sibelius' Four Orchestral legends, "The Homecoming of Lemminkainen" and closed on a note of irony with Ravel's "La Valse". The orchestra maintained a high level of performance throughout the evening co-operating artistically with the soloist and attaining to dramatic

Two Russian Films

Last Sunday afternoon the Film Society presented its members with two Russian films: Three Songs of Lenin, a sort of film-poem designed, in its showing of Lenin's gifts to the backward peoples of Russia, as an elegy on Lenin's death; and along with this Eisenstein's famous silent film Battleship Potemkin which depicted a mutiny in the Russian navy in 1905.

The Three Songs of Lenin was disappointing and has certainly been over-rated. Such a piece of unabashed, treacly propaganda pretending to be a song was surely never before devised. We were shown in brief rhapsodic glimpses all that Lenin accomplished; "our collective farms, our illiterates, who can now read, our stratospheric balloon which has floated higher than anyone else's," and so on. At one point, while showing us a backward Moslem mosque, the camera danced up and down like a dervish for no reason at all. This was typical of this film's technical pretentiousness all the way through. Surely an elegaic film should have been a much more modest, simple affair and so escaped, as Three Songs did not, the fault of never ringing true. The scenes of Lenin's funeral with their dreadful exaggeration reminded me of certain funeral scenes in the novels of Charles Dickens—say, that of Little Nell. If Three Songs showed us anything, it did show us the manufacture of a new religion, a religion centred around a corpse placed in a temple, (Lenin's Tomb) whose scrubby ugliness did not shine when compared to the Tsarist buildings surrounding it. Chopin, Tschaikovsky and Beethoven, those eminent bourgeois composers, provided a gerat deal of this film's music.

Battleship Potemkin had one or two great scenes, but these lost their impact because they were surrounded by very slow passages intended to be symbolic, whose meaning was either clear too soon or never clear at all. The spectacles left behind by the ship's doctor, the stone lions, things like these seemed to take up too much time. But the scene where the marines were ordered to fire on the sailors huddling beneath the sail cloth, the great scene on the Odessa steppes where the Cossacks massacre the civilians, these were wonderfully accomplished things. One thing that failed because of its being too realistically managed was the scene where the people of Odessa came out to view the dead sailor. It failed to ring true.

A rather disappointing bill of fare, but an example of what all film societies must run into; foreign films that have been overpraised.

government, and only unhealthy influences are being criticized. By unhealthy, I mean music written with the intention of creating a sensation rather than for the sake of art. The music is noisy merely to be different. For instance, there was the "Iron Foundry" symphony, written in the early '30s. It was written merely as a musical joke but its style has been adopted by young Russian composers."

He said that it has been proved that Russian composers are not being persecuted by the fact that one of the criticized men, Shostokovich, is going to make a tour of North America this year.

ment. What separate the two groups? "Why, movement, for one thing." But all plants turn towards the sun, and some actually swim. Plants, just as animals, have hormones, and both have coordination in growth. Technically, of course, there is no difficulty in dividing the two. For those who, at this point, aren't sure whether they are a rose or a bee, this display will be doubly valuable.

Greenhouse Display

Some of the other displays include a greenhouse display, the systematic identification and classification of plants (Taxonomy), and Plant Pathology. This last is a study of the diseases that affect plants and their prevention and control.

There will be guides present to conduct tours so that the public will receive the maximum benefit from the displays.

Dr. Ashby's moronic "favorable situation finders."

I suspect, however, that this will never come to pass. A typewriter is an awfully dependent sort of thing. And, as the good doctor says, a thinking machine which can sustain itself might "ultimately conclude that man is unnecessary and destroy him." Provided, of course, that man hasn't done the job first himself.

"How will it all end?" Dr. Ashby asks. "I suggest that the simplest way is to make the thing and see."

Please control these foolish impulses.

Peaker

The second in a series of four organ recitals was presented by Dr. Charles Peaker in Convocation Hall. The program ranged widely as regards chronology and style from Hindemith to Bach in that order.

Paul Hindemith with his excessive flair for dissonance and chromatics is generally considered, and rightly so, as the very antithesis of Bach. Yet his Sonata No. 1 in places bore a classical resemblance to Bach and the old masters which is not found in any of his other works. Dr. Peaker was no less aware of this than I was and interpreted the sonata accordingly. The French Santaisie might remind one of the famed Piese Heroique especially in the Andante Moderato passages.

The recital took a new twist with the gay Staccato Canon in B minor of Schumann and what conclusion could afford a better contrast than the popular Passacagalia and Fugue in C minor of Bach? A very effective treatment of the latter included alternate variations of strings, flute and diapasons and reed entries of the subject further elaborated the Fugue.

Unfortunately there was only the usual small audience to appreciate Dr. Peakers skillful mastery of this difficult program.

Kenneth Davis.

to three consecutive championships, the first of which started at Ajax, and the last two, while he was with Senior School.

"It's good," said Johnny when asked how it felt being with a championship team for three years.

Pat McLoughlin, manager of the St. Mike's team praises the Engineers, "They certainly were the best team on the ice and they deserved to win."

Johnny McCreedy also thinks his team is great and remarks, "The players had as much fight as any of the teams I've played for and that was the reason we won." Johnny should know what he's talking about since he played with the Toronto Maple Leafs when they won the Stanley Cup a few years back.

McCreedy had a well balanced team for the finals and in the last game on Wednesday, the Mikemen gave them little trouble. Five of the players have been veterans of two Jennings Cup finals and four other members of the winning squad played with the championship team last season.

Line-ups:—

S.P.S.: Goal, Sutherland; defense, Steed, Short; centre, Veenis; wings, MacDonald, Sedgley; alts., Wiacek, Murphy, Shultz, Watson, MacKay, Coates, Graham, Lye.

St. Mike's: Goal, Wainhouse; defence, Mulvihill, Robertson; centre, Baxter; wings, Duffy, Coghlan; alts., McIntyre, Prendergast, Kelly, O'Hara, Daly, MacDonald.

individual's point-of-view being respected in a college—she felt that denominational colleges suppressed rather than encouraged these necessary views. This point was further stressed by Don Belway, IV Philos. & Eng., speaking second for the opposition who cited Trinity as an example of a college where religion was too absolute.

Friendly Rivalry

For the affirmative Catherine Sheehan, I St. Mike's, spoke second making the point that friendly rivalry already exists in the University to make for unity.

Two votes were called, one on the merits of the speakers, the other on the motion. The first of these votes went 37-7 in favor of St. Mike's Senate Club, the second was 44-8, also in their favor.

Pitching Sportshoes

The Victoria College Union executive yesterday whipped the UC Lit executive by a score of 3-0. Registering the shutout was Vic's beautiful blonde secretary, Phoebe Templeton. In a surprise move, both teams fielded girl players as well as men.

The game was a fairly clean one, with only two penalties handed out. Phil (Slim) Downie was banished for cross-checking and Belva Barker got the gate for charging rickety Hal Rosenthal. Hal offered to go off with her, but the referee put the skids under that idea.

Bill Kitchen started things off by popping a screened shot in past UC goalie "Jolly Jack" Hollihan. Love and Belva Barker finished off the scoring in fine fashion. UC pressed hard in the second (last) period but failed to dent the twine behind Miss Templeton. Joan Hume for UC played well and was dangerous at all times, as were Rutledge and Dusty Cole.

"Our goalie was bigger than theirs!" alibied Rosenthal.

ada is a middle power (quoting Mackenzie King), the Senate was no longer necessary.

Jack Celler, second speaker for the negative, pointed out that in 1914, the senate objected to sending four ships to England. He maintained that it was this action of the senate which is responsible for the present Canadian navy. He stated that the only time when the Canadian Senate could be abolished was the "great day when the Canadian people would really know what they wanted". Until that time, he stressed, the Senate must remain to protect the people from themselves.

Porter Not

"Mr. Porter was anxious that we discuss all the problems in the brief fully and urged us to stay until we had done so," said Gwynne-Timothy.

Both Gwynne-Timothy and Miss Hazard told the minister they felt the implementation of schemes set forth in the brief would not be a change in government policy, "but rather a continuation of the policy now in effect."

For those of our readers who are interested, we'd like to pass on the word that there's to be a monster Bingo game at the Maple Leaf Gardens next Tuesday night. This exciting bit of news came to us in the mail this morning along with a cordial reminder that our income tax payments were now overdue. Until this morning, we'd been rather disturbed by the growing strain in our relationship with the Receiver-General of Canada but now we can see a way out. We're just surprised that we hadn't thought of it before. For six months now, we've received invitations to these Bingo games on the average of at least once a week without ever realizing the wonderful possibilities they hold. Next Tuesday night, without fail, we're going to plonk ourself down at the Gardens, spray our throat and get set to holler "Bingo!" Why, in just one game we can win $500.00, pay our income tax and have enough left over to join the local branch of the Progressive Conservative party! What we'd like to know, is why no one else never thought of this!

SPS Take Mikemen On Ice To Retain Jennings Cup

By ED SOKOLOWSKI

The Senior School interfaculty hockey team defeated St. Mike's squad two games straight to win the Jennings Cup for the second time in a row. The Engineers won the first game by a score of 5-3 and swamped the Mikemen by an 8-2 score in the second game played last Wednesday afternoon in the Varsity Arena.

The game on Wednesday opened at a very fast clip and within twenty seconds Roy (Boui) Steed put the engineers ahead by a hard drive from the blue line. Pat Duffy tied the score twenty five seconds later on a pass from Bob Baxter.

Bernie Wiacek broke the deadlock on a beautiful set-up by Gerry Sedgley, and beat Paul Wainhouse completely. Al MacDonald added another goal to the Engineers score with Frank Watson getting the assist.

Ken McKay scored the neatest goal of the game at 15.45 when he carried the puck from his own end and beat Wainhouse close in. The Engineers were also playing a man short at that time with Bob Short resting in the penalty box. Nick Lye, assisted by the man from Chapleau, Roy Steed, increased School's score to 5 in the first period.

Jim Shultz for the Engineers was the only man to score in the middle frame with his wingmate, Bernie Wiacek setting up the play.

Jim Shultz and Bernie Wiacek did a repeat performance of their second period goal at the 4.04 mark of the final stanza. Ten minutes later, Roy Steed chalked up his second goal of the game, while Jim Shultz gained another point for the assist. Bob Baxter added a goal in the losing cause for St. Mike's with Pat Duffy helping on the play.

Both teams started at a very fast pace and before very long the Irish began to slow down a bit while the Engineers kept up the pressure. The Schoolmen seemed to be in top shape and were able to press the attack during the entire game. They also played a good checking game and it was only a few times that an organized Irish attack went near the Blue and Gold net.

Defenceman Roy Steed, and Jim Schultz, with two goals and an assist each were the top scorers of the game. Bernie Wiacek, Al MacDonald, Ken MacKay, Dick Veenis and the entire team played well to bring the cup to School.

Suds Sutherland played a very nice game in the net for the Engineers. Bob Baxter, Pat Duffy, Joe Prendergast and Ken McIntyre were full of fight until the last whistle for the St. Michael's team.

Johnny McCreedy, coach of the Senior School team, has lead a team

MASTERSON OFFERED $8000

Bob Air-Speeded To West For Talks With Bombers

By HANK WESTCOTT
Sports Editor

Bob Masterson, popular football and basketball coach of the Varsity Blues, is flying back to Toronto from Winnipeg today with an $8,000 coaching offer from the Winnipeg Blue Bombers. The Varsity learned from Warren Stevens, director of athletics, early this morning.

He was tendered a two-year contract, it is reported, at $8,000 a year.

"Bob flew to Winnipeg yesterday, Thursday," said Stevens, "and he phoned me at 1.30 this morning for advice. I told him to take the first plane back so we could talk it over calmly."

"I was talking to him for nearly 20 minutes and he promised me that he would make no decision until he got back, and when he talks it over, he may decide to stay."

"He'll have to make the decision," Stevens added, "but we can't match a price like $8,000 that Winnipeg is offering. Football isn't that important to us. Salaries here have to be kept in line with those of other staff members. We do, of course, give other things besides money, such as enough prestige to make Winnipeg offer that $8,000. I wouldn't like to say how much we could pay Bob."

"There's also much more security here. When we appoint a man we keep him, but the job out there might blow up in a couple of years. Look what happened to Bob Sandberg, last year's coach of the Blue Bombers. One bad year and he's apparently looking for a job."

Contrary to reports in The Globe and Mail, there was no meeting of the Athletic Directorate last night to determine whether Varsity could match the Winnipeg offer, Stevens said.

Long Lay-off Dulls Timing Game Ends In 5-4 Score

By BOB DNIEPER

The Varsity Junior Bees last night dropped a close decision to the Marlboro Juniors in a hard checking, rugged contest by a score of 5-4. This was the first game of the best of three finals for the Good Humor Cup. The Blues were not beaten because the Dukes were better, but because Varsity was worse. Both teams played an inept and pathetic game at times, laced with a few minutes of action only here and there.

The week and a half lay-off imposed on the Blues, while Marlies eliminated Corner Boys, put their timing off completely. Their passes and goal-mouth plays just were not clicking. They out-shot Marlies 54-37 but Lady Luck and goalie Vern Buffey thwarted their efforts.

What the game lacked in finesse, it made up in roughness, for the boys went at each other hammer and tongs right from the opening whistle. Arrowsmith was cut on the head in a corner scramble and had to leave for repairs. The only well played goal of the game came off the stick of Al Conboy when he took a well placed goal-mouth pass from Art Holmes. Marlies came right back to score their first three minutes later. Varsity kept pressing but were outlucked at the pay-off wicket, and were cooled off when Vernon was banished.

With 30 seconds to go Porky McDougall slammed Gord Boniface into the boards heavily with a legal check with the result that Boniface was carried off unconscious with a broken ankle.

The second period was comparatively tame and the two fights that broke out were quickly quelled. In spite of the slamming play, the referee did not crack down with penalties. If Varsity had played last night the way they played against Corner Boys during the season they would have won by ten goals.

The third stanza brought the best action, six goals being scored. Most of the counters went in through scrambles of players, and the netminders had little chance to save. Forty seconds before the end of the game Varsity got a break when Bill Livingston of the Dukes was placed in the cooler for tripping. Coach Bill Wade pulled his goalie and put six forwards on the ice, but Buffey held off the intense pressure to keep his team's lead.

Vic Gals Win Tilt, But Lose Title

Volleyball Title Won By PHE I, Rap UC 33-25

PHE I took UC I for a 33-25 ride on Wednesday night to claim the women's intramural volleyball title which Physio won last year. Physio was knocked out of the playoffs by a two point margin in their semi-final game against UC on Tuesday.

PHE had the lead for the whole game, winning 22-7 at halftime, but the UC team put up quite a battle and the result was long volleys and an exciting game.

The first half was played non-rotation, which meant that the Fizz Edders could make good use of the excellent spiking at the net of lanky Thelma Henderson. However in the second half the all-round UC team fared better when both teams were rotating round the court. Marg Doyle's tricky serve and Bunny MacPherson's long, hard shots, sparked the Fizz Edders. Betty Bates and Mickey Allen played well for UC.

PHE Nip Hockey On Goals; Vic Held Crown 7 Years

Vic women came back with a bang yesterday to take the second playoff game from PHE I, 3-1, but lost the hockey championship on goals. PHE added up four goals to Vic's one in the first game, giving them the hockey cup by one goal.

Vic I opened the scoring late in the first period yesterday when Di Rogers evaded the Fizz Ed defense to pop the puck in unassisted. The red and golds had a decided edge throughout this period and the game. Jean Myers on defense and Jean Rose in goal had a lot to do with their superiority and score, thwarting many PHE scoring attempts between them.

The second period was fast and furious with Vic pushing hard throughout. PHE got two penalties in this period, but were able to stem the rising Vic tide crested by the nifty stick-handling of Peg Taplin.

Despite a five-minute major at 2:23 in the third, the defending champs put on a terrific drive. Alison Jeffries swung back into the style that gained seven goals for the All-Varsity team and sizzled in two goals in this last period. She went out all-out, but it was too late to match Fizz Ed's lead in goals. She might have scored more if it had not been for the excellent netminding of Joan Summerville.

In this last frame, PHE missed the on-the-spot defense work of Irma Bullock and the drive of top-scorer Ferne Watson who were both hurt.

Hope To Tie For Second

REDMEN AT ARENA TONITE

By HAL HOLDEN

The rough and ready Redmen from McGill are in town today hoping that before heading back to Montreal they will wind up the 1948-49 Intercollegiate hockey season in a second place tie with Varsity Blues.

A tie is the best McGill can do. The Redmen are two points back of the Blues and a win tonight at Varsity Arena will lift them up into a second-rung deadlock. However, a victory for the Blues would give Varsity the second spot all to themselves.

In games between the two clubs this year, Varsity has won two and lost one. In the last meeting two weeks ago in Montreal, the Blues played some of their best hockey of the year to outskate and outbump the rugged Red Machine and gain a 5-3 verdict, although they needed some great goalkeeping by Paul Hutzulak to hang on.

Since that game, each team has played the champion U. of Montreal Carabins. Varsity was edged 6-4 as Montreal clinched the title. Last Friday, McGill amazed everyone by handing the speedy Frenchmen a 16-4 drubbing in the Forum. It was only the Montrealer's second loss of the year. Varsity beat them in the first game of the season here 5-2.

So far no word has seeped out of the Quebec metropolis explaining the surprising upset of the Carabins. Perhaps the champions were only playing out the string after nailing down the title. McGill of course are still full of vinegar in their effort to tie the Blues for second place. Whatever the reason for McGill's late season display of power, tonight's contest should conform to the ding-dong affairs which all Varsity-McGill games have become this year.

The Redmen boast the leading scorer of the league in Reg Sinclair, clever centreman of the Red and White. Sinclair had a field day against U. of M. last week, gathering three goals and seven assists. This splurge sent him roaring ahead of Georges Emblem and Andre Charest of Montreal with a total of 32 points for 11 games. Emblem and Charest have 25 and 24. Varsity's Bill Spence trails Charest by one point and will be gunning for some more tonight. All he needs is three points to finish in second place in the scoring race as the Montrealers have completed the schedule.

Ace Bailey will dress everyone of the Blues tonight and will still have to use a defenseman up front to fill out his forward line combinations. Wilf Digby will perform on right wing with pivotman Rich Howson and Johnny Fox. Captain Harry Boyd will centre another line although still bothered by an attack of blood poisoning in his right arm with Ernie Frey and Pete Ferguson as wings. Cec Turcott, Bob Henry and Bill Spence round out the attacking threesomes. Bob Cooper, Bud Hayes, Gord Ecclestone and Paul Kavanagh form the blueline patrol.

There have been so many switches in the lineup this year that many of the Blues are just on the borderline of the 60 per cent games played required to win their letter. They will all be out there working for a favorable nod from the skipper tonight although facing McGill there isn't much need for incentive.

"We'll be out there fighting," said Bailey, "when the chips are down, anything goes."

Varsity Student Union

South Elevation: This conception of the proposed student union for Varsity comes off the drawing board of Stan White in his final year in architecture. It shows the elevation from Hoskin Avenue. The building bends around Queen's Park crescent to meet the west corner of Holwood House. The large plate glass area in the centre is the main lounge. The flag pole with the projected chapel behind it make the memorial nature of the Union always apparent.

Drafted by Stan White

S. Kurisko Elected As VCU President Heavy Ballot Cast

Stan Kurisko, 1948-49 publicity director of the Victoria College Union, was elected president of the VCU in Friday's elections at Victoria College, it was learned Saturday.

A Comfortable Majority

Harry Green, vice-president of the 1948-49 VCU executive, declined to give the exact figures of the vote cast in the presidential election. He said it was against VCU policy to do this. Kurisko was elected with a comfortable majority over the other candidates, Green said.

The following candidates were successfully elected to fill the remaining positions on the VCU executive: Phoebe Templeton, III Phil., associate president; Don Lawson, II C&F, vice-president; Jess Nugent, II House Ec., secretary; R. Carruthers, III C&F, elected by acclamation as treasurer; J. Birkenshaw, III M&P, social director; Marjorie Mills, II Pass, social directoress; Al Strike, III Mod. Hist., athletic director; Di Rogers, III Mod. Hist., athletic directoress; Doug Thomas, III Pol. Sci., male SAC representative; Ruth Manning, III General, female SAC representative and Bruce Bone, II Arts, publicity director.

Acclamations

Both positions of secretary for the Men's and Women's Athletics respectively were filled by acclamation. John Rhame, II Arts was elected as secretary of the Men's Athletics and Ina Chuhaldin, II Arts, as secretary of the Women's.

Stephen Rodd, II Arts was elected male NFCUS representative by acclamation. There were no nominations for the female NFCUS representative. A by-election will be held next fall to fill this position.

Debating Parl. Results

Prime Minister elect for the Victoria College Debating Parliament is F. McFadden, III Hist. The Associate President and leader of the opposition in the Debating Parliament is Vida Taylor, III Arts.

Members at large elected to the Assembly are as follows: for 5T0, G. Bean and D. Weatherhead; for 5T1, B. Farlinger, J. Finlay and K. Fleming; for 5T2, J. Toogood, K. Prittie, Wm. Sharpe and J. Currie.

Green said the voting had been heavy this year but not as heavy as last year. Last year had been an exceptional year, he said. "About 55 per cent of those eligible voted this year," Green stated.

State Medicine Debate Topic Tomorrow

"Resolved that the Federal Government should provide a system of complete medical care available to all citizens at public expense" will be the topic of a debate Tuesday night at the Orchard Park Hotel. Four Victoria College debaters and debate chairman G. W. Thomson will be guests of the East Toronto Optimist Club for the event.

The debaters, W. B. Glenesk, S. K. Kurisko, D. D. Maxwell and F. C. McFadden, will also represent the college in a competitive debating festival at McMaster, March 12 in which 50 colleges and universities from Canada and the United States will participate.

United Church Minister To Speak On New Books In Hart House Tonight

Dr. Stanley Russel, minister of Deer Park United Church, Toronto, will be the guest speaker at the Hart House Library Evening, 7.30 tonight. The topic of Dr. Russel's address will be "Some New Books."

A native of Scotland, Dr. Russel is a graduate of Aberdeen University. For some years he was a leading figure in the English Congregational Church. In 1929 he came to Canada and soon after assumed the position as minister in Deer Park Church.

Co-Ed Union Plans Seen By SAC Head As Starting Action

Plans for a Student Union building drawn up last week by a fifth year Architecture student, Stan White, brought praise Thursday from SAC President Gordon Gwynne-Timothy as a landmark in years of work by hundreds of students that will transfuse new enthusiasm into the student body toward the hoped-for co-ed memorial.

Enthusiasm Will Result

Gwynne-Timothy emphasized the amount of faith and effort that has been put into development of plans for a Student Union during the last two years. But he also stressed the importance of finally creating something the students can see and easily understand: "These plans of Stan White have a three-fold significance. For the first time the students will be able to visualize the union they want, since the plan was drawn up on the basis of what the students indicated they wanted. Secondly, seeing that the union can be a reality will create new enthusiasm for it. Thirdly, it is an indication of the sincerity and care with which students are working on the project."

The SAC head illustrated the amount of work applied to the planning of the project and the number of people involved in it by making the following statement:

Outlines History

"Student Union is not a new idea Toronto. In 1947 the SAC held a poll asking what could be best done in memory of the war dead. An overwhelming vote indicated a co-ed union.

"In 1948 an SAC committee was created to discuss implementing the project. However it was not until fall of 1948 that actual working committees were set up to investigate all possible phases of union activities. Help came from every corner of the campus.

"Committees with a total of 200 students on them were set up. The girls of OT and the men of Knox worked on possible intellecual aspects of the union's activity. Medicine and nursing students studied food problems. Appropriately enough, engineers worked on mechanical problems. The union is an all-Varsity project."

He then continued to outline the compiling of the committees' work into the report as used by White as the basis of his plans.

Student Authors' Work Is Termed 'First Class' By Journalist Judges

In announcing last week the results of the Brotherhood Week Literary Contest, judges John Yocom, Assistant Managing Editor of "Saturday Night," and Rodney Grey, Assistant Financial Editor of the same publication, said many of the entries "were of first class literary standards."

The top prize of $25 went to W. S. Elliott, IV Trinity, for his short story "Some of My Best Friends." John Smallbridge, II Trinity, received second prize ($15) for a poem. The third prize of $10 was given to C. J. Small, IV UC, for his essay, "On Diversity and Toleration."

Elliott and Smallbridge are both students in the English Language and Literature course. Small is in Political Science and Economics.

Officials said the poems, essays and short stories entered in the contest may be picked up by the authors who wish to do so at the S.A.C. office.

METRAS GETS HELP FROM YALE MENTOR

London—John Metras will be getting some experienced football assistance next fall. Earle Zeigler, coach of the Yale freshman football squad has been appointed as assistant coach for Western. He will commence his duties July 1.

In addition to football, Zeigler will coach the wrestling and swimming teams it is expected. He has been a member of the Yale faculty since 1943.

On The Drafting Board

Varsity's Co-ed Student Union

By HARRY K. RASKY

The much talked-about student union has already been built. You won't find it in brick and mortar, but rather in the eyes of Stan White.

Stan White is a fifth year architecture student, who has spent his sleeping hours for the last several days drawing up a plan for a student union for the University of Toronto. Although they probably will never be used in their present form, the plans represent the most advanced work to date on the student's design for living.

Watching, pencil-thin ("I won't tell you my weight"), five foot seven, Stan describe his planned building is almost like observing a mother talking of an expectant child.

There is nothing ethereal about the building-to-be. Stan's plan is complete with furniture in some cases. The plan was drawn with an eye on the contour of the land and the buildings around it. The architect-to-be can tell you the exact number of trees and the number of square feet in the location.

From his residence room in Wycliffe College he can look out the window and observe the land. While he points to the proposed location, in his rolled-up white sleeves, he can almost make you see the building in front of you.

Command Performance

Gravenhurst-born White is 23, but looks far younger. ("I've been kicked out of several of Toronto's bars—but not often".) With a high forehead, chain smoking cigarettes, he sat like a very lean Buddha on his sagging residence bed. He tells how he first started on the plan. It is a thesis for his graduating year. He had originally planned on doing a two-million dollar summer hotel, and then a cathedral. Prof. Arthur and Gordon Gwynne-Timothy asked him to do the union drawings. His results can be seen elsewhere on this page in pictures. This is the story in print.

His building is designed to fit in the space bounded by philosopher's walk on the west, Holwood House on the east and Hoskin on the south. Its design fits into the roll of the land. Far from cluttering up the green areas of the campus, its spreading profile would almost seem part of the corner.

With Tudor-Gothic Trinity staring down from the west and Renaisance Holwood glancing over its shoulder from the right, there has been no compromise made in the design. As White will tell you there is nothing Medieval about the student's Valhalla. It's as modern as a new-fangled can-opener.

Startling Shape

Here is what Stan sees in his mind and what he has drawn on paper. The general shape is that of a quarter circle. The main entrance to the building is on Hoskin, near philosopher's walk. There is not much glass in the front. But as you enter the main entrance you are surrounded by glass. Opposite the door on the left is the Memorial plaque; it is as obvious as Sam the Hall porter is when you enter Hart House. On it are the names of the men who died to help build this necessary student union.

Let's look at the social end first. It is in the circular part of the culture-construction. The first thing you notice is the intentional absence of internal corridors. (Please note Mr. Warden).

Downstairs there is the check room, study room, and overflow from the commuters lunch room, washrooms and various services.

Dream Lounge

Upstairs, the chapel projects over the face of the building. Here students can come to meditate, and pause for silent thought. Continuing on we enter the fabulous, student's dream lounge which is faced with many windows overlooking Queen's Park. Its 5000 square feet can be turned into a ballroom at the drop of a silver slipper.

Still further in the same wing is the dining room which will seat about 500 people at tables for four. Like all good dining rooms it can also be converted into a ballroom for rugby weekends.

There are also two separate lounges for men and women having a folding wall between them which folds like an accordion to make yet another ballroom. Here also there is a private dining room.

Back to the entrance. Here we note the reception desk, and the office of the union director. The business part of the building borders philosopher's walk. This part of the culture centre is rectangular in shape, and three stories in height, plus basement and sub-basement.

In the basement are such things as the commuter's lunch room, the co-educational coffee shop, a book exchange, a repair shop, and a workshop for the building of sets for college shows.

The Varsity Office

On the first floor are the S.A.C., housing, employment offices. There are the much needed committee rooms, three of them with folding walls to make one large room (just in case the S.A.C. becomes a legislative body someday). At the end of the hall (and with a separate entrance) are The Varsity and Torontonensis offices.

Radio addicts will be happy to hear that there is a radio station. It is directly above The Varsity office. No space has been reserved for television.

Also in the wing are: a lounge and offices for graduates, 12 bedrooms, and the director's suite. Here, also there is an elevator.

This is the building. It has about 50,000 spare feet and would cost about $700,000. The plan is drawn, the die is cast. If we stop now, the building will never dawn, and the plan will die fast.

Why Political Clubs?

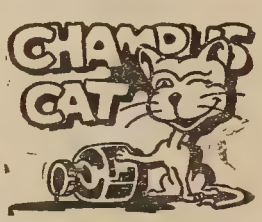
Our university has been compared, at various times and by various people, with what we call a community. The comparison is a valid one. So much so that we often think of ourselves as a well-knit community. That is, we are a group of people socially united, having interests in common and having common goals to achieve.

In any community every single person does not think and feel exactly as his neighbor does on any and every phase of social living. Wide individual differences of opinion exist on many topics, but still the community continues to function more or less efficiently. Many of these differences of opinion are of such a nature that they reflect a strong, vigorous community. People holding similar views form a group and elect a spokesman so that they can more forcefully express their opinions about what is good for the community. Opposing groups are similarly formed. In our society these groups are called political parties and their purpose is to enact legislation that transcribes abstract principles into concrete regulations for the governing of behaviour within the society. The conflict between opposing parties spurs many of the individuals onward to greater endeavour, and social advancement is achieved. Unfortunately many individuals—either through lack of foresight, narrowness, pursuit of selfish interests, or just plain laziness—appear to be content to let the affairs of the community drift willy-nilly where they may.

Our university community holds a unique position in society. Through state subsidies and through grants and bursaries by individuals, society aids greatly in providing us with buildings, equipment, and teachers—the means to an education. We in turn are expected to provide useful service to the society as leaders in our chosen fields. It's sort of an unwritten reciprocal agreement. We are here to equip ourselves to face the problems that will face us when we leave this community to enter the larger sphere of society as a whole, and political problems are not the least of these. Our well-being and that of our children depends on how well we meet these responsibilities.

There are political clubs in our community whose role is to unite people with similar opinions, to crystallize these opinions into a practical, working platform, and to develop leaders who will direct that platform.

It is the responsibility of the student to ally himself with the campus political club of his choice and to work within the framework of that club to promote the well-being of the community. And happily the responsibility, though a serious one, is not an unpleasant one. The reward is the highest—the feeling of accomplishment that comes from knowing the good of the community has been advanced through one's own efforts.



COLLEGE DANCES—

White tie or sports jacket, sweater or evening gown . . . a college hop is always a happy social interlude. Men who are light on their own feet win a girl's approval—and everyone goes for a fresh, cool Player's at time-out.

On Seeking Employment

Icky had never seen so many forms since he had been a lifeguard. Such foolish questions as, where were you born, how many children have you, how many years did you spend in public school—it seemed if the applicant had not the memory of an elephant and the computing ability of an adding machine he might better stay in university where they told you some of the answers to their questions.

"How many people were under you?" Icky found this question very puzzling. In the army he slept in the top bunk and there was only one under him. As a lifeguard perched up on a lofty stand he had many youngsters under him, especially during rainstorms. Those who drowned while he was on duty were always under him. After all what was more important, that his hair get wet and go out of curl, or that the population be depleted by a one count.

Experience?

"What experience have you had?" Well now, that is a good question, besides taking too long to tell it is none of their business. "Will this experience help you in your future caree?" How could he answer that question? He had neither met his future employer nor his secretary.

"Do you wear glasses?" was another foolish question. He remembered one time when he wore glasses. They were small ones and he was able to stick one in every belt loop. That was a wonderful evening! He was a cowboy and the glasses were cartridges which had to be reloaded every time he took another shot.

What was this active file and inactive file to which those forms kept refering? The only inactive file that Icky could remember was the little one that broke before the iron bar even seemed to have a

Carabins Burn At Dismissal Of News Staff

Montreal, March 6 —(CUP)—The dismissal of the managing board of the University of Montreal's Le Quartier Latin last fall has led to complications. Since the first board were dismissed another has been appointed; however the supporters of the former board are taking up a petition around the campus asking that the former board be reinstated.

Board number one faced a public trial at a meeting of the AGEUM (Association Generale des Etudiantes de l' Universite de Montreal) Feeling is so strong on the campus that a Montreal lawyer, Charles Lussier, was recently approached by supporters of the first board and is now studying the case with a view to taking it to court.

Dissatisfaction at the "snobbish intellectual policy" of the managing board at the beginning of the academic year brought about the trial last October, when the students overwhelmingly voted confidence in the managing board.

Charges then made were that the policies of the paper were too snobbishly intellectual, that it devoted too much space to features material and artistic news from outside and too little space to campus happenings.

Varsity Graduate Appointed To Fill McGill Doctorate

Toronto-born Dr. Wilfred Cantwell Smith, brilliant young Canadian scholar, has been appointed professor of Comparative Religion on the divinity faculty of McGill University, Montreal.

The chair he will occupy was endowed by Dr. W. M. Birks, senior member of the board of governors at McGill and long-time supporter of theological training.

Dr. Smith, 33, was educated at Upper Canada College and then spent some years overseas at the Lycee Champollion, Grenoble, France; University of Madrid, where he gained a certificate in Spanish studies; and the University of Grenoble, where he won a certificate in Frenc studies.

He returned to University of Toronto and took his B.A. degree in 1938. He won his M.A. at Princeton in 1947 and his Ph.D. degree in 1948. He is holder of many European and Canadian scholarships. He is married and has three children.

The quiet scene above, showing the front of University College is familiar to all of us. We probably wish we had a nickel for every time we passed by the famous Norman archway during our University careers. Some have called the architecture of the building hideous, but its image evokes nostalgia in the hearts of every UC grad.

Majority of Freshmen Fail In Term Exams at Osgoode

Osgoode Hall's term tests revealed that of the 310 first year students, 210 failed to make the grade in one or more subjects. Several sons of prominent Toronto lawyers and Reid Scott, CCF member of the Legislature, were among those who failed to meet the requirements. Students at Osgood Hall must pass in each subject on the final exams.

"These tests are indicative of final results this summer. It only proves the battle between the benchers and the faculty is not over," one student claimed. "It is a duplication of last year when so many veterans were failed at Osgoode Hall. It looks as though they are going to do the same thing again this year," he went on.

The assistant secretary of the Law Society, Mrs. E. Huckle, said the tests did not count. "The boys will still have time to pull up their marks, as these tests are not final exams. We don't know how many failed in one subject, or more, but there were 41 students who failed in all four subjects. We must wait for the final results, as we feel that statistics at the present time won't show anything."

Canada Lagging Behind In Education Exchange Says Occupation Officer

Edmonton, March 6 —(CUP)— Mr. John Phoskie, Senior Control Officer of the Food and Agriculture Committee of the Military Government of Western Germany told The Gateway, University of Alberta student newspaper that Canada is far behind Britain, France and the United States in the exchange of students, professors and technical personnel.

Russia, he declared, is schooling German youth—in an effort to spread Marxism in Germany.

NFCUS Air Plan For Trips Abroad Runs Into Mishap

Difficulties which have arisen because of a misunderstanding between the National Federation of Canadian University Students and Trans-Canada Air Lines may cause curtailment of the NFCUS scheme to fly Canadian university students to Europe next summer.

ISS Fund Drive Failure Force U. of Manitoba To Drop Exchange Plan

Winnipeg, March 7 — (CUP) — There will be no foreign students at the University of Manitoba under Displaced Person or exchange scholarships. This was the decision of the ISS committee after assaying the poor results of the recent drive conducted on the campus.

About $1,250 was turned by canvassers. The aim of the drive was $1 from each student. Harold Buchwald, chairman of the ISS committee, released the following statement to the Manitoban, the U. of M. newspaper: "The campaign results indicate the Manitoba committee has not received a sufficient mandate to proceed with

Dave Archer, who is Secretary of the Toronto Labour Council and C.C.F. Federal Candidate for Davenport, will be guest speaker at a meeting of the U.C. C.C.F. Club today at 1 p.m., in Room 4, of U.C. Topic: "Why the C.C.F. Fights the L.P.P."

Plane Shortage

At a meeting of the "Action Committeee" of NFCUS held Saturday in Trinity College, Quebec Vice-President Gilles Trahan, who is responsible for the travel scheme, explained that it will not be possible to get the number of planes originally asked for. Arrangements have been made with the United States National Students' Association to share whatever planes are available, however, and a limited number of Canadian students will be selected to fly to Europe It is possible that in addition to the planes contracted for by USNSA an additional plane will be given NFCUS.

Because of this no applications will be accepted by Trahan after March 15. Those who are interested in further information on the scheme should write to Gilles Trahan, 690 Sherbrooke St W., Montreal. Round trip fare will be about $350, and the first flight is expected to be about June 10.

Name Action Committee

The Action Committee, consisting of National President Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, Quebec Vice-Pres. Gilles Trahan, Ontario Vice-Pres. Gene Levigne, and Secretary-Treasurer Don Seldon, decided to give active support to the International Students' Service program which will bring about 35 displaced persons to Canada next year to study in Canadian universities. The decision came after the committee heard Dr. Marcus Long explain that the best assistance which NFCUS could render ISS would be in the form of aid to secure room and board for the displaced persons.

Need Free Rooms

Local NFCUS committees will be asked to find free rooms and board for D.P. students, in order that ISS can bring as many D.P's to Canada as possible. It was suggested that fraternities, residences and private individuals could all assist in this work.

The committee decided that no action could be taken on a request from Canadian Committee of The World Federation of Democratic Youth which asked NFCUS to sponsor a proposed visit to Canada of officials from The International Union of Students. The letter from the WFDY stated that Joseph Grohman and Tom Madden, President and Secretary of IUS, would be visiting the United States this spring and would be prepared to visit "selected Canadian universities" to explain IUS to Canadian students and answer questions on IUS.

Request From IUS

Members of the Action Committee felt that such a request should come from IUS, if Grohman and Madden are to represent that organization on a visit here.

The committee also: Appointed Henri Schmidt (Laval), Ross Hamilton (Dalhousie) and Gene Levigne (Ottawa) as official observers to the IUS Assembly to be held in Europe next summer. Two of these will have their expenses up to $500 paid by NFCUS, provided member universities vote the necessary funds to the project.

Took a move to support and assist a proposal to establish a Canadian Committee on Friendly Relations with Foreign Students. Such a group would meet foreign students on their arrival in Canada and help them get settled here.

Endorsed the USNSA Travel and Tours project in which Canadian Students are eligible to participate (The Varsity, Friday, March 4).

Asked member universities to pay their NFCUS fees as soon as possible.

Investigated the possibility of having a permanent Secretary-Treasurer, paid by NFCUS. Such a move would involve raising the per-capita levy from the present

A TTC Trip

Grandma Rides A White Horse

By HERB WOOD

In the old days, people walked to work whistling and swinging their lunch pail. Now a days the majority ride the T.T.C. "red-rattler." And my goodness what a change in the people . . . so says my Uncle Henry. He's the friendly one, you know.

Uncle Hurley is 61 and retired now. From force of habit he gets up every morning at 6 a.m., so you see he has a lot of time on his hands. Regularly he takes a street-car ride down town in the mornings just to get the old feeling of working again. He's something like the work horse on Sunday . . . lost when out of harness.

Bargain Day

Uncle Hurley has come to some conclusions about the morning passengers he sees. "A morning trip on them 'red rattlers' reminds me of a bargain sale." But Unk, how could a street car full of people in the morning remind you of a bargain day? I asked, playing straight man. "Well, it's this way, everybody is going but nobody is lettin' on to his neighbour . . . they don't exchange one word."

But you know, some of these lovely sunny mornings I can't help but turn to my neighbour and remark how dry the streets are. Nine times out of ten, he makes a one syllable reply, or in the tenth case, just looks amazed and automatically repeats my question but begins it with yes . . . You should think people were scared to talk for fear someone would hear them. As for me, I don't care who hears me.

Pshaw . . . anything I ever overhear is so dull and so guarded.

Talk is Dull

For instance this morning I overheard a feller talking to his niece. " . . . and how is grandmother?" he said.

"She's fine but still has those ailments."

"Oh, she looked fine the other day I saw her," he said. "I've been sick, did you know?"

"No, what did you have?"

"Flu. Just getting over it . . . still feel a little shaky."

"That's all I bothered listening to . . . certainly was dull, huh? Now, if I had been him, I would have said it differently."

"You don't mean exaggerate?" I said.

"Oh no, nothing as bad as all that. Just improve on the facts. Everybody listens, too. Now when he said that he saw his grandmother she shouida said . . ."

Granny Quite Gay

"You know, I saw grandmother yesterday . . . she was riding a white horse down Yonge Street. Did you know she's working part-time in a livery stable? She's only supposed to walk the horses down Rosedale Ravine, but sometimes she gets lost and tired. Then she climbs aboard and looks for the first young handsome policeman to show her the way home -- or rather back to the livery stable.

"Grandmother had a chance at a better job, you know. She coulda worked in a brewery. But Gram's old-fashioned. What would the neighbours say? Besides she signed the pledge last time she was thrown in jail. Let me see, that was when that young whipper-snapper, Henry Ford put out his first model-T."

Rare Disease

"I've been sick, did you know? It was one of them rare diseases thr had all the doctors baffled. I almost died. Don't I look a little peaked, eh? You know it kept me awake i night and during the day I had to sit in a darkened room with my feet in warm water and a towel around my head. Made me sleep, though, and soaked off all my callouses too."

"But Unk, who would believe you?" I said.

"Well, I don't really know . . . but it would make some of those petrified people open their eyes—might even make them smile."

French Plays

Last week the campus French clubs offered three one act plays. Trinity College French Club presented a comedy by d'Hervieliez, A Louer meublee. The play, which concerns two burglars, a police commissioner and his wife, should have been ideal for a student production in a foreign language. It could have been ideal had various members of the cast taken an extra five minutes to learn their lines. However, it was saved by the delightful acting of Michael Shenstone as the timid burglar, and the good support from co-burglar Charles Salter, both of whom moved easily about the stage and through the language.

Les Irascibles, a French adaptation by Anton Chekhov, was entertainment part of the evening. Presented by the UC French Club, and involving the farcical situation of father (Fred Thorpe) and daughter (Loretta Proctor) quarrelling with, and yet anxious to secure, the neighbour M. Grattelard (David Shaw) as son-in-law, this play had a verve and polish unusual in French Club productions. The actors more than met Chekhov's challenge for caricature. It is no wonder that they have been invited to present their play at McMaster, a precedent so far as we know.

The hosts of the evening, St. Michael's French Club, presented a light, feathery eighteenth century comedy, Les Propos interrompus by Henri Gheon. But the pleasure of hearing their almost perfect French was somewhat spoiled by the actors speaking only to themselves, and rudely ignoring the audience. Nevertheless the colorful costumes, the whimsical trees, and the accompanying music produced the dream-like quality inherent in the play.

Ballet

This week ten groups from across Canada gathered to take part in the second annual Canadian Ballet Festival.

Vancouver's Panto-Pacific Ballet Company presented "Degas Rehearsal," a sprightly satire on a ballet practice. Dainty and well done, it would have been more effective with even greater precision in the corps. The dancing master while maintaining the spirit of the ballet, missed several opportunities to establish his character more precisely. Prokofieff's "Classical Symphony" to which the ballet was danced is light, delicate and full of fun, and this ballet was a fine interpretation of the music.

The Ruth Sorel group from Montreal showed depth of understanding in portraying human emotions. Sincerity which seemed based on a careful appraisal of the manner of expression was the essence of their work. Miss Sorel made every motion a further development of the mood and story very satisfying to watch.

This group presented "La Gaspesienne", a French Canadian folk ballet. While the plot tended to be unbalanced, the costumes and decor established atmosphere as did the music, in places reminiscent of Gaspe folk tunes. "Mea Culpa Mea Culpa" done by this group was an unusual handling of the sinner-redemption theme — a morality play in ballet. It was danced to Toccata and Fugue in D Minor, one of Bach's most majestic organ pieces. Simeon Joyce played the number sympathetically, but since the rhythm had to be changed to suit the ballet medium, it lost some of its majesty in relation to the choreographic interpretation.

"The Red Ear Of Corn" by Volkoff Canadian Ballet, an Indian Legend with its practical application in a modern corn-husking bee, produced exciting choreography. The costumes will satisfy Canadians of even the most nationalistic sentiments. It is a great work of which we should be proud. Volkoff worked with a large group attempting to establish a series of intertwining themes, but with the exception of the Indian chief, the braves didn't seem to convince the audience of the intensity of the powerful thing they were portraying. The corn-husking bee was completely delightful, full of the human touch, well and enthusiastically danced.

The score for this ballet was a new Canadian work by John Weinzweig. It was imaginative and danceable, symbolic of the various themes represented rather than a direct interpretation. Lacking the fullness of much modern composition it would be difficult to appreciate the color and brilliance of the ballet spectacle.

For this person's ballet tickets "The Magic Flute" by the Volkoff School was one of the highlights of the festival, an exquisite, sincere and finished performance. The interpretation of the music was balanced and the well directed movements ensured complete flow of the theme. The decor and lighting suggested the moist coolness of a wooded glade. The costumes reminiscent of violets and lily-of-the-valley completed the mood—an absolute pleasure to watch.

The Winnipeg company seem to have stolen the show. "Visages" with choreography by Gweneth Lloyd and score by Walter Kaufmann is a highly polished presentation of modern ballet. It is the story of two young lovers and the emotions of indecision, jealousy, lust, fear, greed and hate. The conflicts of these emotions are resolved through the ballet medium with an

After careful consideration of the performances we have witnessed at the movies this year, we should like to recommend the Telephone in 'Sorry, Wrong Number', for an Oscar as best supporting player. We have yet to see any player, human or otherwise, equal the Telephone's unruffled calm under such trying circumstances, or bear up with such magnificent fortitude under the assorted violence of screams, hysterics and desperate wringing that Barbara Stanwyck wreaked upon it. The only possible exception to this would be the audience. In any event, that Telephone looked more like a telephone than the one in our own hallway, and we suppose that Don Ameche was never more proud of his invention than the day he watched it strangle without complaint in Miss Stanwyck's sweaty little hand. We were deeply impressed with the Telephone's all-round versatility and were completely enthralled as it ran the gamut of emotions from ADelaide to WAverly. Even on anyone else's exchange we're sure that it would have rung the bell.

PEACE EFFORT

The Editor, The Varsity:

Here are my views on the "world events are alarming" situation.

If there were another war, individually we would all surely lose our lives, or at least be permanently weakened or maimed. Then, from the standpoint of common sense if nothing else, war is impossible for our continuation as a normal civilization.

Peace—It must be obvious that we do not have it now—How can we attain it? We may have it only by a great gamble. We have everything to gain and nothing to lose that we would not lose more destructively in war.

Only by friendliness and good will, not hostility and suspicion, regardless of hostile neighbours, by healthy thinking and reasoning have we the chance of living together with other nations as friends rather than enemies. This attitude works! I know, because I have tried it.

Now we have the method. It is certainly worth a try. I speak personally now to each one reading this: Would you rather just keep on hating and be mercilessly destroyed, or take a reckless chance in the hope that you might live, and live in peace?

Floyd C. Barnes, B.Sc.

FAULTY LOGIC

The Editor, The Varsity:

Mr. Barnes' worship of the scientific method apparently does not extend to the elementary basis of that method: simple logic. He tells us we must not close our minds to Communism or Fascism because there is something good in each of them. Well, Mr. Editor, there is no doubt something good in most garbage cans in this city, but I don't propose, and I'm sure Mr. Barnes doesn't propose, to eat the entire contents of the can to get the part that is good.

Anyway, the virtues listed by Mr. Barnes as belonging to communism and fascism are not peculiar to them. In our own democratic system, creaking and inefficient as it is, we have self-sacrificing service to causes — the war, for example, Mr. Barnes, which was to smash the fascism of which you think so highly.

The main difference here is that we do not put the cause ahead of all human rights. The same thing goes for the sharing of property—Mr. Barnes' astounding three-word simplification of Marxist-Leninist-Stalinist doctrine. Modern democracy, with social security measures, state medicine, excess profits taxes, pension plans, floor prices, etc., etc., is moving inevitably in the direction of a more equal sharing of property —and without the thesis that sharing and efficient administration of the sharing must be put ahead of all human rights.

Mr. Barnes will no doubt think I have a closed mind. My house also has a closed door, with a lock on it. That is to keep out burglars and hold-up men, many of whom no doubt love their mothers, and thus have "some good" in them as well.

LATER SONNY

The Editor, The Varsity,
Dear Sir:

I quote from the pamphlet "Liberals on the Campus", which is currently being given free distribution by members of the Canadian University Liberal Federation:

"One of the most refreshing and welcome developments in recent Canadian political history has been the keen interest shown by our university students in the domestic and foreign affairs of the nation."

This is the opening sentence of a prefatory letter, over the signature of the Rt. Hon. Louis St. Laurent.

Some days ago, on the basis of reports appearing in the only Toronto newspaper favoring the Liberal government, I wrote the following letter to Resources Minister J. A. McKinnon:

Dear Sir:

I am an ex-service student, completing a course at the University of Toronto. I am not a member of the L.P.P., or any similar group.

I want to express my shock and amazement at the dangerous and equivocal attitude of the Government with regard to the condoning of the "false passport" admissions to Canada of men wanted for trial by the Government of France, and what is more, wanted on charges of collaboration.

In my opinion, the government's defense of its actions, or lack of them, has been miserably weak. Failing an honest and open approach to this matter, consistent with its responsibilities to veterans and allies in the recent war, the Liberal Government will not be considered for my vote, or those of many other veterans, who are dismayed by this policy as well as by the "Everything before housing" policy."

Mr. McKinnon sent me the following reply:

Dear Mr. Yelland:

I have your letter of February 24th. As your whole letter is based on a lack of knowledge of the matters referred to, I think little can be gained by entering into correspondence in connection with this."

Carl M. Yelland, IV Poli-Sci.

REMEMBER . . . F. J. WATT specializes in Sportswear but they've plenty of bright things in the way of immediate wearable crepes and date dresses Skirts and blouses are another department which Watt does competent work to collect and in the department of Spring suits you can go fatrther and fare much worse. Budget arrangements are not unusual at Watt's . . . you'll like their brand of co-operation. More and more Watt's is becoming the campus shop.

SCHEUER'S at 131 Yonge Street believe in cash sales, hand on book-keeping costs to customers in value. Have a look at their ring values and decide for yourself. Scheuer's are the oldest diamond merchants in Canada, have made a point of offering two groups of specially priced engagement rings, both at a hundred dollars, which they believe are values you can't improve on. One a three-stone ring, the other a solitaire. Have a look compare, and decide for yourself.

TEASDALL'S TEN PERCENT cut on suits and overcoats for students makes good reading for the man who knows the value of saving dollars for more vital purposes. Teasdall's are quality people, your guarantee is their very good name. Drop in for small items or study their suit and topcoat values without any obligation at all. They want you for a customer, don't mind letting you warm up slowly. 804 Yonge St.

And this being Tudor Ice Cream's first Springtime, it is likely that more acclaim than ever is going to be heard for this new ice cream which is a little more expensive, a great deal more pleasant than the former types. Tudor Fruit Salad ice cream for instance is cream loaded with delicious summer-ripe fruits, other Tudor flavours are equally distinctive, more rich, and yet more digestible.

THESE LAST COLD DAYS of winter don't fool the weather-wise . . . any moment Spring suits will be on the prowl without overcoats, and looking very pleased about the fact that they are out there first. It's an idea to take a look around in time to know exactly where you are going in the suit question. Joan Rigby does a service to the school gal by setting up a standard which is a pretty good measuring stick for suit-styling anywhere you care to take it. Drop in at 54 Bloor St. West, they'll be glad to see you.

Book Review

Second Lost Generation

Vera Brittain's Born 1925 (Macmillan & Son $3.50) is the story of two children who grew up during the tension and turmoil of the thirties. Their parents, an actress and a somewhat unorthodox clergyman are skillfully drawn and provide an excellent study in contrasts. Despite the similarity between the backgrounds of the two generations, a gulf grew up between the children and their father which was intensified by separation. This situation Miss Brittain seeks to explain in terms of wartime complications.

Interwoven with this main theme is the story of the growth of a large pacifist organization which continued its activities in England during the war. Born 1925 has the disadvantage of being written around a central situation which is psychologically unconvincing. Most readers will, I believe, agree that, whatever the international situation may be, the relations between parents and children are always governed by that important ingredient of life called experience. The problem the Carbyry family faced is not peculiar to the generation of 1925 as Miss Britain would have us believe.

The Strength Of The Hills

Robert Finch, winner of the Governor General's Award for Poetry in 1946, has published another larger and even finer collection entitled The Strength of the Hills (McLelland and Stewart $2.75). These poems are marked by the surer touch of a mature poet. Here Mr. Finch has achieved more than technical perfection, for one can see that his philosophy has crystallized and given his work a new depth and fire.

The first section of The Strength of The Hills is a unit devoted to mountain poetry, which is uniformly excellent. Skillfully interwoven are correspondences and striking images like the following: "The desert like a rose on which there stands— The skipping mountain with its clapping hands," or "Because they move toward that dawn, When dancing they shall lay their tablets down." Here is a poet who approaches nature not with the dreamy-eyed gaze of an escapist seeking solace, but with ideas, attitudes and emotions gleaned from his own experience. Using nature as a background he superimposes his own aesthetic philosophy. Well over half the selections included in this volume are nature poems. Concentration of thought and imagery throughout and polished precision are unmarred by the occasional evidence of immaturity found in some of Mr. Finch's earlier poems. Particularly well handled are the snow-pieces, which show the author's attachment to the thematic progression technique used so effectively in the earlier "Bees Thistles and Seas." Where else could one find a better definition of snow than Mr. Finch's "the tangible feathers of inherent beauty." The most exquisite of the nature poems is "The Hole in the Day". Here one sees the author's imaginative powers reaching their fullest expression. Imagery, subtle tone contrasts, thoughtful whimsy, and fine patterning, all are exploited to the full. Yet Mr. Finch's techniques are never obvious any more than are the influences his work has undergone, for he has the rare ability to make assimilated knowledge his own.

"For Then" represents the high point of the "reminiscence poetry". Prof. McCallum's remarks are particularly applicable here — "A certain reticent and chaste exploration and revelation of the secrets of the human heart . . . still in part veiled from itself."

artistry of interpretation that held the audience spellbound. It was fluid fast-moving and danced with a pleasant decision. Jean Mackenzie as the girl was particularly convincing.

Allegory, another Winnipeg production carried on the themes as laid down in "Visages". This production also choreography by Gwenelh Lloyd deals with the post-war depression and man's inhumanity to man. Cesar Frank's Symphonic Variations brilliantly played by Marian Grudeff, provided the basis which is so necessary for good ballet. Jean Mackenzie danced as the Goddess of Music and her first entrance was a masterpiece of delicate enchantment.

"Finishing School" also by the Winnipeg ballet was the portrayal of a rebellious young lady who upset the staff and school and fell in love with the dancing master. We're not surprised she did, for he turned in one of the most polished performances of the evening, highlighted by sensitive characterization and fine technique. The whole ballet was full of fun and good humor and technically satisfying.

scratch on it. Oh yes! There was a larger file that his mother once broke over his head when she found him filing a suit. (Groan!)

The question which demanded the most research was "What is your Bus. Tel. No?" What was a "Bus. Tel. No"? Perhaps it should be "Bus. Say No"? Why don't they "Standing room only in this bus"? Why didn't the conducter just shout "No" and save the poor bus all that effort. Having concluded that this form was an abbreviation something like the nfcus copy, Icky searched in comic book after comic book until finally Superman informed him that the phrase meant "Bustles Tell No Tales". At last the light dawned, his eyes opened (curse those policemen who shine flashlights in people's eyes, disturbing a delightful slumber on a park bench). All those creatures with tails refrain from wearing bustles; therefore by proposition 13 (the one for which he was slapped last night) only women wear bustles even though they carry tales. Hence, the meaning to that very difficult question must be "male or female". That just goes to prove thought Icky, how the modern world leans when a complicated phrase like "Bus Tel. No." has to be substituted for the simple word "sex".

Appendix: A recent survey showed that word "sex" in the application forms had to be substituted by a more clearly understood phrase as ninety percent of the answers consisted of the word "Yes".

McGILL BEATEN IN OVERTIME

Sinclair Top Scorer Spence Runner-Up

By JOHN MOYSE

Reggie Sinclair of McGill is this year's Senior Intercollegiate Hockey scoring champion. The speedy centreman counted two goals and an assist against the Blues last Friday to stretch his total to 35 points, ten more than his nearest competitors.

Last year the Blues dominated the scoring parade with Bob Henry and Don Bark sharing the leadership. Two years ago Carabin Jean Paul Gignac edged out Varsity's Ed Kryzanowski, now with Boston Bruins, in the battle of the rearguards.

Sinclair ended his fourth season on the Red squad with a scoring spree which netted him ten goals and ten assists in his last three games. Altogether he fired 21 goals to walk away with the honors in the sniping department ahead of Rich Howson of the Blues and Don Murray of the Gaels, each of whom sank an even dozen shots. His 14 assists were equalled by Bill Spence of Varsity and Georges Emblem and Gregoire Giguere of the Carabins.

The Blues' point production was led by their first line of Spence, Henry and Turcott. Left-winger Bill Spence, who headed the Blues for most of the season, racked up 25 points to tie Emblem for the runner-up position. Henry notched 21 points from his right-wing spot, while pivotman Turcott followed with 20.

McGill's big blue line pair of Doug Heron and Gordie "Goose" Gosselin top the defencemen in scoring. The 220-pound Heron showed the way with ten points to Gosselin's nine.

The Redmen led the league in scoring by virtue of their 16-4 massacre of the champion Carabins. Varsity took defensive honors thanks to ace netminder Paul Hutzulak. The blond dentist fanned on only 49 shots in his 12 games, while Jack Gelineau and Tony Dobell of McGill fished 53 pucks out of the net. Gelineau boasts a better average than Hutz, but it should be recalled that a more wide open brand of hockey was played in the latter half of the season after the Red puckstopper switched to Boston.

PHE Swimmers Win 7 Times

The Fizz Edders cleaned up in the intramural swim meet in Hart House Saturday with 40 points. Vic placed second with 24 and UC took third spot with 10.

PHE won seven of the ten events and broke one record. A team of Marg Harrington, Anna Spence, Betty Moore and Norma Pinnock knocked four-tenths of a second off the time of 57.2 which the Fizz Edders recorded last year for the 100 yds. medley relay.

The high point-getters were Marg Harrington and Ruth Pullan of PHE who tied for top spot with 13 points. Tied for second place were Pam Perrin, Vic, and Jean Cossar who got nine points for Physio to give them fourth place in the meet. Trinity was fifth and Meds, St. Mike's and Nursing were tied for sixth.

Junior Bees' Second Test Tomorrow

The second game of the best of three finals for the Good Humor Cup will be played at Varsity Arena to-morrow, Tuesday March 8. In the tilt the varsity Bees will again take on the Marlboro team, to whom they lost the first go, 5-4.

From all indications this will be a red-hot contest, as the boys' tempers were frayed to the breaking point the last time they were together. Varsity should have their passing plays up to par again, because coach Bill Wade is really driving his men to counter-act their pre-series lay-off.

So don't forget — Tuesday at eight strokes of the timer at Varsity Arena.

The M & P Rockets outsped the Aeronautical Spitfires 11-3 last Friday afternoon at Varsity Arena.

The undefeated Rockets will be available next Thursday afternoon. Any course possessing ehough audacity to challenge them should contact John Moyse at MI 0418.

Spence, Henry Star As McGill Lose 7-6

By HAL HOLDEN

With Bob Henry and Bill Spence playing hero roles, Varsity Blues staged a thrilling uphill battle to gain a 7-6 overtime victory in the final Senior Intercollegiate hockey game of the season at Varsity Arena Friday night. Spence potted the tieing goal for the Blues with less than a minute of play remaining in regulation time and with goalie Paul Hutzulak yanked in favor of a sixth sharpshooter while Henry counted twice in the extra session to give Varsity victory.

Blues Second

The win put the Blues all alone in second spot in the final standing of the loop. Before last night's game the Redmen had a chance of tieing Varsity for the second rung. U. of Montreal won the title two weeks ago.

Varsity was trailing 5-2 going into the third period as McGill had all the play in the first two frames. Only during the third and overtime periods did the Blues begin to click. Up till that time they were made to look particularly inept by the bruising Redmen. At one time during the second period when McGill counted the only three goals of the frame, the Redmen were two men short but still managed to hold Varsity off the score sheet.

Wilf Digby started the Blues off on their driving comeback as he looped a screened shot past Dobell in the McGill nets at the 4.13 mark of the third period A few minutes after big Bob Cooper hit the goal post Rich Howson put the Blues within one goal of the Redmen, batting in Gordie Ecclestone's rebound, and set the stage for Spence's game-saving tally.

Remove Goalie

With about 43 seconds of playing time left, Ace Bailey removed Hutzulak from the Varsity goal and put six men inside the McGill zone for a faceoff. Cec Turcott won the draw and slipped the puck over to Spence, who rifled it home.

In the overtime, Bob Henry of Varsity and Charlie Hayward each scored once before Cec Turcott again engineered a Blue tally. Turcott grabbed up the puck in the Varsity zone, carried it the length of the ice and deked the defense before passing on the left wing to Henry who took lots of time to set himself for the shot and sent a scorcher past Dobell.

McGill put on the pressure in the two minutes that remained and came very close to tieing it up again.

Pete Ferguson opened the scoring for the Blues in the first period when he cashed in a pass from hard-working Ernie Frey who made a great play, shoving over the puck after he fell and was sliding along the ice.

McGill counted the next two goals with Reg Sinclair, leading scorer of the league, and Dave Hackett being the marksmen. Hackett later received a misconduct penalty for elbowing referee Pearcey Allen when the official handed him a two-minute penalty for clipping Bud Hayes who upset the quick-tempered American with a bone-jarring bodycheck.

Sewed Up

McGill looked to have sewed up the game in the second period as the Redmen scored three goals without a reply by the Blues. Gordie Gosselin scored on a long shot that Hutzulak had beaten all the way until the puck bounced in off a player. Sinclair then scored his second goal of the night while Rocky Robillard took advantage of some sloppy clearing by Varsity to count McGill's fifth goal, less than three minutes before the period ended.

Besides Henry, Ernie Frey and Harry Boyd went well up front for the Blues with Bud Hayes coming up with some great plays on defense. Tony Dobell starred in goal for McGill with Gordie Gosselin, Reg Sinclair and Ross Parsons also standing out.

UC Sinks SPS In Aqua-Polo; Playoff Starts

When UC firsts won their 26th straight game in interfaculty water polo Friday with a 7-4 verdict over SPS firsts, it gave them a stranglehold on their fourth straight championship. Second game of the best-of-three series goes today.

And SPS came within a couple of flutter kicks, and a whisker of halting the UC three-year win record at that.

Playing their best game of the year, the Schoolmen came from behind a 4-1 deficit in the third quarter, and looked like nothing could stop them. But they capsized when UC rocked their dreamboat a trifle roughly, with a three-goal wave.

John Lowndes scored twice, Sig Wigle, Ed Lindgren, Marv Lester, Norm Mortimer, and Rudy Horwood once each for UC. Les Curry with two and Chris Arnold and John Fydell with one apiece were the SPS triggermen.

Question Of The Moment—Will This Plea Be Heard?

"It certainly makes me feel very nice," Bob Masterson said last night when he learned of the support the students are giving him as he decides whether to coach in Toronto or Winnipeg next fall. "It's very hard to consider leaving a place you know and like, even though the monetary rewards are better.

"And incidentally the monetary rewards involved are closer to $9,000 than the $8,000 quoted in the newspapers," genial Bob reported. "Also it might have been on a three-year basis."

"I had no intention of applying for another job, or even shopping around, when I was approached by Winnipeg. I went out to talk over their proposition, but before I did anything I phoned Steve (Warren Stevens). There's still no definite thought in my mind, but there'll likely be an announcement after the meeting of the athletic directorate Tuesday night."

In an informal campus poll Friday, most usual comment was "we hope he doesn't go, but we can't blame him if he does." A few like those above were all for meeting the Winnipeg price to keep him in Toronto. Said Mary Richmond (second from right), "Varsity should put up the $8,000 to keep him, since he brought Varsity its first title since 1937."

Photostating material for student theses keeps G. Carter (above) of the University Photographic Service working overtime during the spring months. The University Photo Service, under the direction of Prof. K. B. Jackson provides specialized photographic services from moving picture projection to photomicrography. A recent order from the Pathological Museum of the University of Saskatchewan requires the photographing and hand-tinting of 2000 life size prints of specimens.

Discipline On Other Campuses

Comparison Proves We Lag Behind

By JACK GRAY

Although some students on this campus feel the Students' Administrative Council as presently constituted represents student government by students, a comparison with the systems in force in other Canadian universities shows that the University of Toronto is sadly lacking in the degree of responsibility which it allows its students.

Recently the Toronto committee of The National Federation of Canadian University Students sent a letter to all Canadian universities asking them what degree of control over student activities and discipline their student councils were allowed.

"There is no course of conduct over which the students . . . could not exercise control," says a letter from The University of British Columbia. "The students have complete control over all disciplinary questions", at Macdonald College. At other universities the degree of control is not as great. At St. Francis Xavier a Student Committee on Discipline "sits on all faculty meetings concerning student discipline." At The University of Alberta disciplinary action in the form of fines up to $15 and the right to make recommendations to the university administration for stricter measures is exercised.

Students at all universities which answered the letter have more control over student discipline, than students at the University of Toronto except at Laval University, where ". . . the Student Council directs activities, but not discipline, because there is no need for it."

At The University of Toronto the Students' Administrative Council has no word at all in matters concerning student discipline. It is interesting to compare this situation with some other Canadian universities.

The University of British Columbia: At UBC a complete system for the regulation of student discipline has been set up under the Alma Mater Society, which corresponds to our SAC. The degree of control extends to recommendation to the University authorities of expulsion.

Responsibility for discipline is in the hands of a Judicial Committee, composed of students. Provisions are made for speedy trials, which hear all cases first. If either prosecutor, defendant or the Court asks for a Full Court trial it is held.

The Full Court acts as "a judge and sentencing body." It has the power to impose fines up to $5, and impose such penalties as the court may see fit. Appeal may be made from the Full Court to the Student's Council, only at the request of the defendant.

To put teeth in the system, any student who does not pay a fine imposed on him does not have his examination marks released by the University Registrar. "Fines are invariably paid", states our UBC correspondent.

McMaster University: "The regulation of discipline in the University is delegated by the Senate to the Chancellor and Faculty, and by them is entrusted largely to the Student's Council . . . aided where necessary by members of the faculty . . . The students council may summon, hear and discipline any member of the Student Union for a misdemeanor. Any member so summoned shall be confronted by those bearing testimony against him. All decisions in such cases shall be referred to the Chancellor."

The University of Montreal: Here a by-law gives the Association of Students the right to judge the conduct of a student and to recommend to the Vice-Rector of the University "l'imposition d'une sanction qui peut aller jusqua l'expulsion de l'Universite."

The University of Alberta: "General student discipline is, in the last analysis, under the control of the University Administration. However, for some years in the interests of responsibility and student self - government the University authorities in conjunction with the Student's Council have set up what is called a Student Discipline Committee . . . Just Tears But No Beers

In an attempt to bring "Civilization" into Hart House, Martin Shubik and Harvey Hay will celebrate the first annual Shubik-Hay Day today at 1 p.m. in Hart House.

At that time Messrs. Shubik and Hay will seat themselves at the head table of the Great Hall, and produce a beer stein and a cigar each.

Because of the beer ban the malt exponents will drink Pepsi-Cola—but only as a symbol of their true wants.

Shubik said that this event will be celebrated each year on the second Wednesday of March 'till beer is allowed in Hart House. On the day that victory is won, and beer is near, he will buy the first bottle—a mug of Drambuie.

200 OCE Grads End Teacher Dearth States Acting Dean

By WILS HARRISON

The shortage, which has existed in the secondary teaching profession since the war, will be almost at an end when this year's class of 200 students at O.C.E. graduates in the spring, Dr. John Long, Acting Dean of the Ontario College of Education, said yesterday.

Scarcity After War

"During the war there was a scarcity of both secondary and elementary teachers. However, this year's class will fill up most of the jobs available in the secondary schools," Dr. Long said. He said there would be about 200 graduates this year.

Dean Long said there was still a shortage in the elementary teaching profession and advised Pass students to go into this field by taking the Public School option if they contemplated entering O.C.E. He said if they did this and were unable to get employment in a high school upon graduation, they would be able to teach in a public school.

Need Specialists

Dr. Long said there was still a shortage of secondary teachers in the following specialist fields: Household Economics, Classics, Agriculture, Science, Maths, Physical Education for Women and Commercial. In the classics field only one student was enrolled this year, he stated. Last year in the Commercial specialists they could have placed three times as many grads as they had.

When informed that 800 ex-service students had signified their intention of entering O.C.E. upon their graduation from the University of Toronto, Dr. Long stated that perhaps about half of these would be in their graduating year. Even so O.C.E. would be able to handle them. They could take up to 600 applicants, he said.

In 1934 there had been 430 students at O.C.E. Of that group 230 were graduates of the University of Toronto, he continued. Toronto generally has about half the total of the number of students at O.C.E., Dr. Long said.

Method of Selection

In explaining the method of selecting the applicants, Dr. Long said each applicant appeared before a Selection Committee composed of three members of the staff at O.C.E. and one member of the Teachers' Federation. Three or four of these committees were set up to interview the students.

If the student is not accepted after being interviewed by the first committee, he can appeal his case to a second committee. If they corroborate the decision of the first group, the student is advised not to continue.

About one student in 15 or 20 is advised not to continue, he said.

Students, who fail to gain admittance to O.C.E. for either medical reasons or otherwise, have their transportation paid to their home and their application fee refunded.

Essential Qualifications

The most essential qualifications for success in teaching are the ability to direct the activities of others cheerfully and effectively, good health, sound mental health,

Optimist Group Vote Down Motion On State Medicine

The motion "Resolved that the Federal Government should provide complete medical care available to all citizens at public expense" was defeated last night by a vote of 31 to 11 when the four finalists in the Victoria College Thomson Debates spoke before the East Toronto Optimist Club.

In defending the motion, Douglas Maxwell, IV C & F, maintained that medical care was available according to the individual's ability to pay for it. "In the interests of humanity and the nation's health, medicine must not be left on a Robin Hood or pay-as-you-can basis," he said.

First speaker for the negative, Fred McFadden, III History, declared the advent of state medicine to Canada would lower the standards of the profession. "Doctors would be reduced to the level of mere bureaucrats under any such system," he said. McFadden asserted the majority of illnesses were cases of the common cold or of disabilities caused by accidents. Neither of these kinds of illness, he said, was preventable by any action of the medical profession itself.

Supporting the motion, William Glenesk, III Pass, refuted McFadden's statement that state control brought "a mountain of inescapable evil".

"If this is so," he said, "let us hand back to private enterprise the post office, the army and navy and the Hydro." All of these agencies, he said, were efficient in their fields. Citing figures relating to the annual cost in labor loss through illness, Glenesk declared that Canada could not afford this loss. "Humanity, in any case, is worth more than dollars and cents," he concluded.

Stan Kurisko, III Poli. Sci., was the second speaker for the negative. He pointed to the voluntary health insurance plans in operation in Canada as adequate to the situation.

"FRAT AND FIDDLE"

Wayne and Shuster, Canada's leading comedy team and originators of "The Frat and the Fiddle" will be special guests at tonight's presentation of the show in the Kingsway Club. Sponsored annually by the Beta Sigma Rho Fraternity, this year's review is produced by Burny Dales, and directed by Irv. Pomerantz and Bill Freedman.

Old Vic Site Now Asylum; Profs Argue Merit In Change

Victoria's annual faculty debate will take place Monday, March 14, at 8.00 p.m., in Alumni Hall The event has become one of the more lively Vic traditions Professors make the most of their chance to prove that they can pack enough laughs into a debate to put Skule Nite and the Bob out of business. Former topics have ranged from, "Resolved to draw a line," to "Resolved that there is Methodism in Victoria's Madness."

The motion before the House this year will be, "Resolved that Victoria would have been happier on the 'Old Ontario Strand'." For those not steeped in the history of the college the last phrase refers to the little town of Cobourg where Vic was situated before affiliating with the U of T. The former Vic is now a mental hospital.

The speakers this year are, for the affirmative, Prof. Sissons, Professor Emeritus of Ancient History, and Dr. G. W. Fields of the German Department. Mrs. M. H. Thompson of the English Department and Prof Leslie, Associate Professor of Ethics, will take the negative. Prof. Sissons is well-known for his lifelong connections with the college, and for his concern to uphold her traditions. Dr. Field comes from Cobourg, alias "The Old Ontario Strand."

During the first half hour before the Faculty debate the finals for the Impromptu Debating Competition will be held, and Mrs. Thompson will present the trophy to the winner.

Boost In Fees, Lack Of Culture Alberta Worries

Edmonton, Alta.—(CUP)—An increase in tuition fees at the University of Alberta may be in the offing, The Gateway, U. of A newspaper, reported recently. This year, fees had been raised 15 per cent to meet increased costs of operation, and another raise for the next year was being considered by the Board of Governors in view of still rising costs.

One reason for the pessimistic view for the coming year's costs was the expected decrease in service students with the resultant loss of government subsidization which makes up a considerable part of the university revenue.

Socialism Best For Canada Trinity Debaters Decide

"That socialism is the best policy for Canada" was the motion upheld by the Trinity College Literary Institute in a debate in the Trinity chapel last night.

Points to CCF

First speaker for the government Harvey Hay, IV Pol-Sci, defined socialism as a program of social ownership at an accelerated rate, and pointed to the COF party platform. "When we have this, we will find in this country a new spirit, the spirit of democracy where people will feel they can do something, where people will demand, criticize, and suggest.

Planned Economy Needed

Michael Hicks (IV Hist) said a planned economy was necessary to prevent the boom-bust cycle of the present system, to insure economic freedom and the rights of the individual, and to keep overall planning in the public control. "It is blasphemy to suggest that man will work only for subsistance," insisted Mr. Hicks.

Encourages Emmigration

Speaking against the motion, Hugh Rowan (I Soc & Phil) asserted that socialism stifles initiative. David Stanley (IV Pol-Sci) said that the COF socialism is the best type of socialism, but that it is not suitable for Canada because it is materialistic, incomplete, and encourages the emigration of our best people to the U.S. Socialism has only worked on islands where dissatisfied people are hemmed in by a surrounding sea.

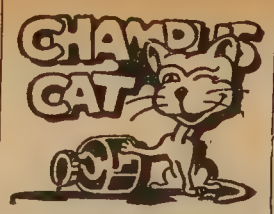
A Dollar-Conscious Culture?

If present trends are any indication, the "humanities" or liberal arts courses seem destined to pass into oblivion before very long.

The type of training which, for centuries, has been the hallmark of the cultivated mind is apparently becoming increasingly unpopular in the minds of those who guide tthe fortunes of institutions of higher learning in this country.



Faced with the never-ending struggle against increased financial burdens, our universities have become places in which commercial considerations have become increasingly important. The gradual transition of universities from their traditional role of cultural institutions to mass-production schools of vocational training is already well advanced. And the increasing influence of business men in shaping the policies of our universities is speeding up the transition, a transition which is already moving at high speed in the universities across the American border.

Unfortunately, the general public seems to be falling into line with the new pragmatism. Commenting on the increasing financial burdens of the University, the Midland Free Press-Herald last week asserted: "The Board of Governors of the University of Toronto, a university supported very largely out of tax funds drawn from every part of the province . . . has sagely determined that it would be a waste of our money to attempt to perpetuate the early educational concepts of its founders."

"Toronto's Board of Governors, after weighing the decision carefully, have determined that 'the Humanities' which seem to thrive best on the more rarefied atmosphere of Gothic towers, broad campuses, and intimate student-professor relationships, have less place in Ontario's expanding industrial and political capital than the much more practicable university courses which are designed primarily to fit the student to make a living."

One might well question the "sagacity" which considers the early educational concepts of the founders of this university to be "a waste of our money". It is the same type of sagacity which led the president of the Association of American Colleges to protest recently when he charged that American colleges and universities are "surrendering academic freedom to counting-house ethics".

Here too, the commercial viewpoint is increasingly reflected in the educational policies of our universities. And the effect is deteriorating the cultural health of our universities.

Aids To Everyday Living

THE SALTED-NUT ADDICT

Yesterday we received the following letter from the mother of an acquaintance.

Dear P.B.:

You are our last hope. Harken to what I have to say and help us.

Six months ago my son Tommy, your buddy, brought home a half a pound of salted nuts as a present for me. (They were assorted). We ate them with relish, Tommy especially almost making a hog of himself.

Advised Him

I advised him of the value of temperance in all things and so was amazed when two days later he brought home another half a pound. (Assorted again). He must have eaten three-quarters of these all by himself. Within a week, he was bringing home a box of nuts every day. (Sometimes assorted, sometimes just one kind).

I exhorted him to fight off this habit which would only drag him down to the gutter and make his friends turn against him. He did stop as a result of this, but only for two days, giving in after that time and buying half a pound of cashews, (his special weakness).

Within a month he was eating two to three pounds of salted nuts a day, and went without lunch at the office. (I learned this through an office fellow he had eaten lunch with in the old days). In two months, he was bringing home a three-pound box of nuts regularly every day. He would eat them instead of his supper, and usually refused to pass them around.

Dangerous Course

Both the doctor and I advised him of the danger of the course he was pursuing, and I even had the minister drop in for a short chat. All this advice went unheeded. He only went out the next day and bought two pounds of almonds (shelled).

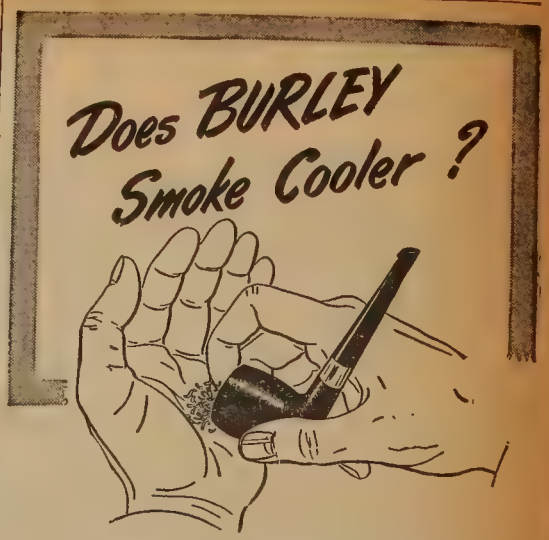
After that he would often stagger home, his stomach distended with salted nuts and water drunk to quench the horrible thirst this habit creates. Two weeks ago Tommy was fired. He told us that he had been laid off, but I telephoned his boss. He told me a story of the slow disintegration of a fine character. First, Tommy had only nibbled on salted nuts a bit during office hours. Gradually the habit got a grip on him, and he would duck out for a half a pound of pistachios two or three times a day. Finally, the constant movement from desk to water cooler and back combined with the exasperating crunch as he bit into harder nuts like Niggertoes became so irritating to the rest of the office staff that he had to be fired.

Rarely See Him

We rarely see Tommy nowadays. He sleeps here but is up early every morning, goes down to wait for the nut store to open, and hangs around there all day. Hardest blow of all is the fact that Tommy is down to eating peanuts.

Please, please help us. Have a chat with Tom, try to make him see the error of his ways. Bring my boy back to me.

Yours in hope,
(Mrs.) Faith Jones.



Unfortunately Tommy is not alone in his addiction for salted nuts, Mrs. Jones. It is the old story of realizing too late that you have gone too far. A friend of mine who can take or leave salted nuts at will was introduced to them in the following manner. On my friend's 21st birthday, his father took him to their sideboard where a large bowl of salted nuts reposed. His father told him "There they are, son, I have kept them from you until your 21st birthday but now you are on your own. Beware of excesses".

Iron Will Needed

In Tommy's case only an iron will and the sympathy of his family can save him. Try to treat him as a normal human being. Get him to attend church. And always remember that a relapse is not a battle lost.

Obtain Ship Berths To Recoup Loss Of Plane Space

Steps are being taken by the National Federation of Canadian University Students to secure ship space for students NFCUS will be unable to send to Europe by plane, Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, National President of NFCUS, announced yesterday. The number of students who can be accommodated is not yet definite.

Arrangements for the berths will be handled through the NFCUS Travel Office. Enquiries should be addressed to Gilles Trahan, 690 Sherbrooke St. W., Montreal.

Fare To Be $280

The round trip ship fare will be about $280. The ship will sail from Quebec City about June 30 and will return from Europe at the end of August.

The new development in the NFCUS plan to arrange transportation for Canadian students who want to go to Europe came after NFCUS officials learned last week that they would be unable to obtain from TCA the number of planes originally hoped for.

Consultation with travel agents revealed that it might be possible to obtain some space on a student ship leaving Quebec City June 30. Although no definite guarantee has been made by travel agents that the space will be available, they expressed the opinion that they thought they would be able to obtain space.

NFCUS officials responsible for the travel scheme moved quickly to make up for the lack of plane accommodation caused by the misunderstanding between Trans-Canada Air Lines and NFCUS. Originally NFCUS hoped to secure as many planes as needed for taking students to Europe.

Vic Lays Plans For Variety Show Early Next Term

Preliminary plans for a variety show to be held early in the fall term were laid at the Vic Assembly meeting on Monday. The plans call for a three-day show to be held either in Hart House or the Museum Theatre exhibiting Vic talent entirely.

The producer and director for the variety show will be appointed at the spring meeting of the Assembly. The producer will sit on the Assembly until the completion of the show. The Assembly may hire a director in an advisory capacity. The director and producer will be responsible only to the Assembly and otherwise will have a free hand in production.

Hoolihan Elected Lit. President; 30 Per Cent Vote

Jack Hoolihan, this year's third year president, has been elected President of the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society. The results of yesterday's election showed that approximately 30 percent of the students participated in the voting. In one instance, officials said, an important position was decided by a one vote margin on the second count.

Results released from the Lit and Athletic Office late yesterday afternoon were as follows: Jack Hoolihan, President; Bob Sutherland, Literary Director; George Wallace, Athletic Director; John Bull, Social Director; Bill Francis, Publicity Director; Earl Orser, SAC Representative; Dave Rose, Secretary; Bob Hands, Treasurer (accl.); Joe Casse, NFCUS Representative.

Year results were: G. T. Ciglen, 4th year President; M. J. Mowbray, secretary-treasurer; Murray Cohl, Athletic Representative (accl.); J. Novitsky, 3rd year President; D. Rotenberg, sec.-treasurer (accl.); P. A. Niblock, Athletic Representative (accl.); John Christensen, 2nd year President; K. Davis, secretary-treasurer; B. Davis, Athletic Representative.

Vets To Ask Gregg Widen DVA Aid To Needy Scholars

Jack Gwynne-Timothy, IV Trinity, Secretary of the National Council of Student Veterans, will leave for Ottawa this week-end to present a brief to the Minister of Veterans Affairs. Other members of the delegation are Peter Kohl, McGill, President of NCSV, and Donald Matthews, Queen's, the Treasurer.

The brief embodies a cost of living survey carried out by NCSV among the 22,000 veterans enrolled at Universities across Canada. Results of the survey show that considerable difficulty is being encountered by student veterans seeking to complete their university re-establishment training. With the facts resulting from the survey, the NCSV delegation hope to secure a raise in the basic cost of living grant..

Recommend Plan Extension

Also included in the brief will be a recommendation that the University Training Plan be extended to offer financial assistance to all deserving students, on a basis of scholarship.

The Government will also be asked to implement the extension of the present facilities in Canada for post-graduate studies. This should be done, say the NCSV, in an effort to arrest the continuous emigration of Canadian graduates to the United States.

Other recommendations the NCSV will make to Minister of Veteran Affairs Milton Gregg are that rent control be continued in an effort to ease the housing situation; and that preference in civil service jobs be offered to all veterans who served in Canada during the war, as well as to those who served overseas as is now the case.

Deny Book Brief Given To Board; President Smith

Rumors that the Book Brief, submitted by the SAC to the President last month, had been turned over to the Board of Governors were denied by President Smith yesterday.

The President said the Brief would not be sent to the Board of Governors this week. It has been sent to the Board's committee of the University of Toronto Press, he said.

The Brief would not be sent to the Board of Governors until after the Board's committee of the Press had met. President Smith said he didn't know when this body would meet.

Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, president of the SAC said twenty-five copies of the Brief had been sent to the heads of the various faculties, this week. Gwynne-Timothy said the president had sugges ed this action at the close of a meeting last week which was attended by SAC Chairman Dr. Phil Ashmore, E. A. Macdonald, Pres'd nt Smith and the SAC president himself.

Communists Act For USSR Not Workers, Archer Claims

Giving his reasons why the CCF fights the LPP, to the CCF Club in Room 4, UC, yesterday, Mr. D. Archer, Secretary of the Ontario Federation of Labor and CCF candidate for Davenport at the coming elections, said that the state in the USSR today is not a Communist state. The philosophy of Communism is good, said Mr. Archer, but the USSR is a police state, holding terror for those who do not obey the authorities. Communist designs on the rest of the world are not in the interest of the working class.

Communists all over the world give their first allegiance to the USSR and not to the working class.

The CCF, which Mr. Archer described as a democratic socialist party, has tried to co-operate with the LPP when both parties were sympathetic to the same issue, but the results are necessarily disastrous. If a CCFer makes a compromise for the sake of the cause at stake, it is considered a weakness. And there is no assurance that the Communists will stick to their arrangements, because they follow the party line which is directed by the actions of those on the top.

In addition to the fact that the CCF is interested in the cause of the worker and the Communist in Soviet foreign policy, Mr. Archer said that there is no reason for attempted CCF-LPP unity because they are two separate parties with different ideologies. On the basis of practical politics, union is poor strategy, because the CCF is likely to lose over something in which it does not believe. The only way to do a good job for the Canadian worker is to do it yourself.

Says School Sex Teaching Answer To Pervert Offenses

The only answer to the problem of prevention of offences by sexual perverts is proper sex education, Dr. J. D. Griffin, Medical Director of the National Committee for Mental Hygeine, told the Psychology Club Monday afternoon. Dr. Griffin advocated a program of such education in the schools, feeling that training the child was better than waiting for an offence to occur before help was given.

Sterilization and other physical changes did not lessen the tendency to perversion in the individual, he said. Certain types of psychotherapy have been found to be effective but there is little of this therapy being used in Canada. In this country, Dr. Griffin said, the offender is treated only as a criminal but in the United States, some states prescribe an indeterminate sentence and a period of hospitalization for treatment.

Dr. Griffin was speaking on the sex pervert as an offender because he said, it is only these individuals who become known to the courts and the social workers. He pointed out that what is considered sexually abnormal in one culture is not abnormal in another and that even in our own culture, certain groups consider some sex practices normal and others consider abnormal When speaking of perversions, he said, one must refer to the legal categories for these are the only ones that can be prosecuted and thus be recognized by the whole culture.

In our society, Dr. Griffin said homosexuality is generally overlooked while any heterosexual offence is condemned.

Hart House Library

....And So To Sleep

By PHIL K. MOORE

In the main entrance, up the front stairs of Hart House, first door on your left, and there you have the library.

Hart House library, where school books and coats must be left outside. Hart House library, where you don't talk above a whisper and red carpets with nap a half-inch thick deaden all foot-steps. Hart House library, where the deep leather chairs and roomy chesterfields are conducive to study — and sleep.

Pssst—pssst— Hey bud!! Well you needn't look so startled. Never had a book talk to you before? No —I can tell by the look on your face you haven't. Allow me to introduce myself:

HH
580
Da 6.

Quite a monicker, eh? That's not my real name, you understand. Full and complete name: A Naturalist's Voyage Around The World. See why I prefer the short form?

I come from quite a distinguished family. My father was Charles Darwin, (ah, you recognize the name) and my mother was the voyage of the Beagle around the world.

But, I don't want to talk about myself. I want to tell you about what I see every day in this room.

I get to see a lot of what goes on in here. I'm not awfully popular—no, no, I don't want your sympathy —and I don't get taken off the shelf very much. So, as I say, I see a lot.

Now take for instance that child of G. B. Shaw on the shelf over there. An Intelligent Woman's Guide to Socialism and Capitalism. It would amaze you if I told you just how popular that thing is!! Most everyone of the fellows who sees that name picks it up to hear what it has to say. Really just the name that catches their eye. "Intelligent woman," they sneer. "This I've got to see." They try to be cynical, but the name still gets them.

Guess you like to spend your spare time in here. Don't blame you. Nice and quiet, nothing to bother you except the occasional snore.

One thing I'll tell you, though, that I don't like about this place. It's that door. Notice how it squeaks? Disturbs everybody. Squeak, squeak, squeak, all day long! You'd think somebody would fix it, wouldn't you.

There it goes again—oh, oh!! See that fellow that just came in? Comes here every day between 12 and two. Pass Arts student. Watch him now—he'll pick up a book from that table where you leave books after you take them off the shelfs. See, what did I tell you? Now he'll go over and sit in that big armchair by the window. Look at him stretch out—same thing every day. He never gets past the first ten pages before he'll be fast asleep. I figure that student has started to read more books than any other around this university.

There's another regular customer —the one sprawled out on the chesterfield. That book covering his

Brotherhood Posters On Display At Press

To be on display this week in the University Press Bookstore are posters from the Brotherhood Week poster contest. They include the four winners: Gerry Oakley, III Trinity, first prize; Herb Vise, IV U.C., second; Jane Carson, I Trinity, third; and Helen Prendergast, III St. Michael's, fourth.

Judges were Profs. H. R. MacCallum, aesthetics lecturer, C. F. Comfort of Art and Archeology, and G. Tatham, faculty advisor to the SAC Intercultural Relations Committee. Final decisions were reached last week after much difficulty due to the generally fine quality of the entries, the judges said.

Prizes amounted to $50 in cash and merchandise and were sponsored by SAC, Simpson's, Curry's Art Store and the Art Metropole. Prizes and entries may be picked up next week at the Hart House SAC Office.

Movie Review

The Mozart Story

"The Mozart Story" is yet another in the series of films dealing with the great composer and, though I am fouly dispirited at having to admit to it, it is on the level already set by the films of the lives of Schubert, Chopin and Handel.

I am informed that this was an Austrian production with an English (well that's what they said) sound-track, but if this is an example of the American "drang nach Osten", (Culture division, film sub-division?), then I deplore it. I am also unashamedly surprised to find that Europe should have swallowed so much of what Hollywood is pleased to term: "Ars gratia artis".

The filming technique was saved from the dreary by two interesting montages, the first of which was historically incorrect and designed to tear-jerk the lower-middle brow hausfrau whilst the second was quite pleasant and artistically handled.

My companion informed me that he derived the maximum of pleasure from this film by shutting his eyes and concentrating on the music, which was played by the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra.

It was however not a little strange that although "Mozart's treatment of the concerto may be justly regarded as the chief contribution to the growth of musical forms" — (Grove's Dictionary of Music and Musicians) — and although he wrote nearly 50 symphonies, some of which are justly famous, we were not treated to any of them.

The treatment of personalia, by which term I include not only the incidents, appearances but also the historical settings and details was without doubt unworthy of its subject matter.

Since it is not possible for me to see into the mind of the producer, I cannot authoritatively declare whether the inexactitudes were from invincible ignorance or wilful transgression but at all events they were lamentable. The worst example was that of the meeting of Beethoven with Mozart in Vienna, at which the former regaled the latter with a minute's worth of the "Sonata Quasi Una-fantasia" (popularly known as "The Moonlight Sonata"). Permit me to refresh your memory by another reference to Grove's, which dates this meeting to 1787, at which time Beethoven was mere 16 (O Patrician Films, O Paramount Productions), whilst the "Sonata quasi una fantasia" was not composed and published until 1802. "O tempora O mores". Yet here we have a Beethoven of at least 25 playing a Sonata with 15 more pre-natal years ahead of it.

The Villa Bertramka episode (Prague) is another example of this utter disregard for historical truth which is so deplorable in a medium which has such great propaganda power, and which more is serving an introduction to Mozart for many people.

En passant, I noted with amused dissatisfaction, the lack of synchronization of sound track and film which reminded me of the occasion when I was taken to see "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" with a French sound-track in Lausanne.

Much more could be said; I could animadvert on the characterization of Schikaneder, on the gross inflation of the importance of Salieri, on the real reason for Mozart's return from Prague to Vienna, or on the actual circumstances for the lack of enthusiasm over Mozart's opera "La Clemenzia di Tito" but I shall not do so; just let me say that Rachmaninoff's accolade: "Eternal sunshine in music, thy name is Mozart" is in no way made credible. I wept.

"SPRING THAW '49!"

A NEW MUSICAL REVIEW OF THE CANADIAN SCENE

After the opening night of the NPS Spring Review last year, the critics recovered in time to greet the presentation with remarks like—"One of the funniest reviews on record;" ... "Hilariously entertaining;" ... "Gay as a pinwheel;" ... "If laughter had been maintained at maximum intensity everybody would have gone home with lockjaw" ... and several of them said it, "should become an annual event".

Literally hundreds were turned away from our small theatre during the rest of the run. Believing that everyone should have the opportunity to join in this good Canadian fun, this year we are taking the advice of critics and public—and presenting an entirely new Review for two weeks!

HILLEL

For the past few days we've been engaged in a not too violent controversy with a young lady of our acquaintance. She insists, much to our horror, that when a woman marries, and continues to work, then nothing can rightfully be expected of her in the line of domestic duties. Naturally, from our point of view, her argument doesn't hold water. Primarily, if she intends to marry in such circumstances then she must also be fully prepared to meet the additional responsibilities that her marriage will entail. Her husband-to-be, we're sure, will not be particularly interested in the fact that she puts in eight hours a day at the office when he gets home at night to find the dishes piled up, the beds unmade and that supper won't be for more than an hour. A man has a right to expect that when he marries, usually at great personal sacrifice, he will have a home and it is up to his mate to provide one, without, we may add, any prolonged exhibition of gloomy martyrdom. For some obscure reason, we feel that marriage is not necessarily for the convenience of woman alone.

Ontario Society Of Artists

The Ontario Society of Artists' Spring Exhibition now on display at the Art Gallery of Toronto, affords a pleasant surprise to the viewer. The O.S.A. seems finally to have decided that the public is not as foolish as it seems and that it would appreciate some intelligent painting. There are no examples of that morbid ingenuity, such as produced the famous pink bull of last year.

The abstractions with one or two exceptions are pleasing and are the products of intelligent mental experimentation. In "Don Quixote", by Mr. Harold Town, there is a weird but undeniably effective use of colour. In his degradation of the Christian religion, "Christ Bearing Cross", Mr. Oscar Cahen represents Christ as an angular, suffering moron.

The most interesting features of the show, to me, were the many attempts to combine the simplicity and directness of the abstraction method with representationalism. Outstanding among these attempts are Mr. Donald Sexton's "Trees" and Mr. William Winter's "Church of St. Anne", which is also the pick of the show.

The portrait of Howard Dunnington-Grubb, Esq. by Mr. Cleeve Horne is excellent, but it suffers from lack of support from its background. The viewer will also have to ask himself just what purpose the flower in the bottom left hand corner serves. A much more effective use of the background will be found in Mr. Alan Collier's "Martha". Here the background intensifies the theme of the picture.

I found the show both stimulating and satisfying. I expressed this opinion to a small, fussily dressed middle-aged female and was sharply reproved. Although she was, she informed me a lover of beauty, she would not exchange any picture in the show for one of her own collection. I would not either, but for a different reason; I liked the show.

"Curse You" — Mavor Moore

"Curse you, Jack Dalton" is a Gay Nineties melodrama produced last Saturday night by The University Extension Players in the Women's Union Theatre. Mavor Moore was guest and prologue to the play. The play came off with a few sparks but on the whole was a trifle dull.

Chief reason for this was an absence of honest conflict in the inter-play of roles. Lines came through with too much exhibition and not enough punch. Winifred Currie and Freda Burke as mother and fiancee respectively of the hero (Jack Dalton), set the mood of melodramatic farce from the first scene, with a fine use of rapport. But it did not last long. David Cargill as Jack and Pat Powers as the Maid, both uttered lines with no apparent purpose or mood in mind. They gave too much time to stage business and not nearly enough to putting the plot across.

Some jackass two rows behind us, like Stentor the Bull, shouted advice (boos and hisses) throughout the play. Heads of fair hair (Jack and his brother-in-law), toted handle-bar beards of jet black. Nature's mistake, no doubt.

"Our aim is to provide a repertoire like the English theatre at Old Vic and to present two or three plays at the same time," said the New Play Society's Mavor Moore.

After he deplored "The Drunkard" type of play, flayed Merle Oberon, Hollywood and Tallulah Bankhead for exploiting personality instead of acting as a craft, producer Moore advise the budding actors to go south if they wanted that kind of play.

Canadian acting involves largely radio acting, and a performer is rare who can avoid this paradox, according to Mr. Moore. He held that morality can be learned in the theatre as well as in church. Mavor Moore broached the element of genetics by revealing that everything you inherit is from your parents—but no ones knows "what". I wonder who else we can inherit from except our parents. Mr. Moore went on to misquote "Hamlet" (shame) and in closing advised that a true genius will convert his audience to his manner—advice that Mr. Moore might well take himself.

He said nothing original or new, and pulled two boners, one in genetics, the other in a play he should know something about. Whatever his virtues as an actor, producer and director, Mavor Moore knows little about the art of effective public speech!

face—a book of cartoons. Always the same one. I'll bet he could draw those comics by heart now. He looks at them often enough. Every morning after his first lecture he comes in, picks it off the shelf, sits down on the sofa, and looks at a few pictures chuckling to himself. He always ends up by stretching out and going to sleep with the book over his face. Funny thing about that lad. He has a strong conscience. See those signs about not lying on the chesterfields? Well, before he goes to sleep, he always looks at the sign sort of apologetically before he covers his face with the book.

The most interesting part about all these students, though, is to see them on the nights that the House is open for dances. They use this room as a "sitting-out" room. You should see all those sleeping beauties then. Wide awake and quite the little intellectuals. That chap over by the window, the one who never reads more than ten pages, well I saw him in here one evening not so long ago, showing his lady-friend around. "This is the library dear," he said, "The place where I can honestly say I pick up more culture than anywhere else around the college." Sure, he picks it up but it falls in his lap before he absorbs any of it.

And that other fellow, the one stretched out on the sofa. Well sir, I saw—hey bud—psssst—what do you know—fell asleep on me.

TUDOR ICE CREAM is talked about these days by people who watch developments on the food market. Tudor is better because it costs considerably more to make, costs a little more to buy, but rewards the discriminating shopper by providing a dessert that might have been kitchen-made in your own good freezer out of your own good ingredients. When you try it you'll see what we mean. Tudor is a new development in commercial ice cream quality.

HAPPY THOUGHT for Spring, the way the Gaberdine crop of suits at Northways keeps walking out of the Fashionland Department indicates that Gab suits are right on top in fashion preference, this being good news because the stuff won't crush, wears like steel and in the groups featured by Northways you can pick a good one for as low as thirty-nine ninety-five.

THERE ARE SOME splendid light wool suits at the Evangeline Shops, just in, which run around the 19.50 to 29.50 brackets which merit your attention. Greys and beiges in classic lines, these are crease-resisting, excellent basics for any of the new blouse necklines. You'll find plenty of these new blouses at the Evangeline too, new suave lines which make it a pleasure to shed your suit coat and step out in blouse and skirt, neatly clinched with a costume belt.

JOAN RIGBY'S is more popular than ever just now because the time for suit-wearing is drawing near, and a Joan Rigby suit is still a solid foundation around which to build a wardrobe. OUR READERS WRITE

WHY IRON CURTAIN?

The Editor, The Varsity:
Dear Sir:

May I remind you that I signed my last letter in the usual manner with name and initials and had nothing to do with any additions.

Mr. Morrison's personal references I will treat with the disregard they deserve. He has the advantage of me. All that I have been informed about Mr. Morrison is that he has a preference for some country other than Canada.

One may suspect the reason but his purpose is not quite clear in imputing to me ideas and intentions which certainly did not appear in my letter. In fact my record of welfare and community service in two countries might even be found to exceed Mr. Morrison's contribution and make his implications look silly. When he talks of jails and lashes he must be describing some mental picture of a police state in a distant land —certainly not this Dominion. We are proud of our police force. The police in British countries are the protectors of women and children, and the best friends of good citizens. Again when he speaks of insecurity and bad housing his mind must be wandering back to a land like Soviet Russia where there is no security for anyone, not even for the bigwigs, where the dreaded police invade home and factory, and where the housing conditions of the poor Russian workers would be cons.dered unfit for animals by Canadian standards.

When I spoke of the low standard of living in Soviet Russia I was prepared to give specific quotations dating back to the days when instead of fighting Hitlerism they were sharing the plums with our enemy. Today members of the United Nations have their standards of living listed. Soviet Russia has not filed hers. Why?

If Mr. Morrison is honestly interested in this subject, I suggest that he read some of the expanding volumes of books, articles, etc., by people who have escaped to a free country with free speech. Anything written within the iron curtain can be trusted as much or as little as a Soviet pledge.

For a further example of Soviet standards we can take the Soviet agents living here in Canada. They are paid $25 a week. This appears to be the Kremlin's idea of a good recompense.

What I said in my previous letter about the Russian army and civilians when they mistook the German invader for a deliverer was common knowledge among our Intelligence Branches, and certainly appeared briefly in print here at that time but was soft pedalled for obvious reasons. I am not convinced that it is a good thing to broadcast the facts even now. Certainly no apology is due unless it be from Joe Stalin and his fellow slave drivers. We have to remember that 80 to 90 per cent of the people in all communist countries are against their government and are held down by force and fear, and the kind of police that Mr. Morrison dreams about.

To reply to Mr. Morrison's personal slush and his flagrant fabrication of my unexpressed views is somewhat degrading but if a few historical facts, both past and present, hitherto dimly realized in some quarters have been profitably brought to light, then this correspondence has had some merit.

My fundamental question has received no consideration, but the answer becomes more manifest with every glimpse at those dark lands—Why the Iron Curtain?

B. H. Geary,

LETTERS TO THE EDIOR

The Editor, The Varsity:

In your editorial, Academic Freedom—Unlimted, you hold that Communists should teach students in order to give us a better society. Ridiculous. You use the catch words "free speech" and "free search of truth". You say it is better we be pure Communists than not support any party rabidly. Again ridiculous.

Did it ever strike you that the Communists are using Democracy as a tool to destroy it? They are indignant when their free speech is curtailed, but they say nothing about their methods of stopping free speech in the countries they have usurped. They are not better than a gang of racketeers who stay just within the law when it suits their purpose, but who would murder a person who got in their way. Should the supporter of such a gang be allowed to teach us?

The Liberals, Conservatives, and the CCF believe in party politics. What does it matter if a person shifts his allegiance from party to party? We know that whichever one we choose we will have a chance to vote again. If the Communists get in we will have a chance to vote again, but only for a good Communist.

Recently Tim Buck was asked if his party intended to oppose the government in case of war, as the American Communist party has vowed it will do. After hedging a bit, he admitted that if Canada became involved in a war of aggression the Communists would sabotage industry. This means that if Canada tries to uphold her end in the North American Alliance, the Communists would interfere with our war effort. It is not a rosy picture to realize we are harboring a potential enemy. And you want this kind of person to teach you.

R. W. Cumming,
II SPS.

Ed. Note: We suggest reader Cumming reread the editorial. Any suggestion that "Communists should teach students in order to give us a better society" exists only in Mr. Cumming's mind.

BOUQUETS

The Editor, The Varsity.
Dear Sir:

On behalf of the SAC Committee on Inter-Cultural Affairs I would like to praise the keen student participation in the activities on the campus in sympathy with Brotherhood Week. Quite apart from the attendance at the actual events, the way that people all across the campus, from the Skulemen who set up the lighting for the Sunday evening Folk Festival concert to the people who trudged the streets securing donation prizes for contests, and everyone else in between worked long and hard at a time when essays, tests were crowding in, astonished even the least cynical. Indeed, we are told that the program at the University was, when compared with the City of Toronto, out of all proportion to its size. Special praise is due, if it can be placed anywhere, to the editor of "The Varsity" for the wide and efficient coverage given to the week by his paper, in news and in editorials, and for their co-operation in the matter of ads, pictures, advances.

Yours sincerely,
Susan Burgess.

K—AS IN AUGUSTUS

Dear Sir,

I think a student union would be a Good Thing. I think a student union would make a Good Memorial. I do NOT think anybody "died to help build this necessary student union." Many more doses of the rhapsodic prose of Harry-Augustus-Rasky however, and somebody will die for the Cause.

Fashion Magazine Choose Two Reps On U of T Campus

Joanne Stoddart, II UC, and Mrs. Nancy Turner, IV Trinity, have been chosen as two of the winners in "Mademoiselle" fashion magazine's yearly hunt for talented young women to serve as college board members.

Nancy has served on the board for two years, assisting "Mademoiselle" in its research on college fashions and trends. She is in the general course, and hopes to get into radio writing in Vancouver, where she and her husband, who is a senior Meds student, plan to take up residence this summer. Nancy thinks it was largely her wealth of extracurricular activities which cinched the contest for her. She is secretary of ISS, and was a delegate at the ISS conference in Cambioux last summer. She also took the campus radio course and thinks it will be valuable in getting her a job in her chosen field.

Joanne Stoddard hopes that she will be one of the 20 chosen by "Mademoiselle" to go to New York in June to serve as junior editors in preparing the fall college issue. Although Joanne is in Sociology, she wants to make advertising her career. She intends to be a career girl and says she isn't interested in marriage. Joanne looks forward to being chosen for a European student tour this summer. She attributes her success in the contest to her summer's experience in copywriting for Canadian Homes and Gardens magazine.

GENUINE EDUCATION STRESSED BY ALBERTA SENATE COMMITTEE

Edmonton, Alta. — (CUP) — "No student should graduate with mere technical training as opposed to genuine education" declared a University of Alberta Senate committee last month. The committee recommended that a better balance be established between the study of humanities and the specialized and professional subjects in the technical courses.

The faculties of Medicine, Engineering, Dentistry and Agriculture admitted the need for more general education in their specialized courses, foresaw difficulties in altering the curriculum to allow for more cultural subjects.

"No definite ruling has been laid down for preference to veterans, but generally the selection committee give them some consideration," Dr. Long stated. "Most Boards of Education do the same thing when they are hiring the veterans. They give the vets an increase in salary over other graduate applicants by allowing teaching credit for their service time," he said.

Dr. Long pointed out that elementary teachers had an advantage in the salary situation when they graduated. In Toronto, he said, they start out at $1,800 in their first year of teaching and move up $200 per year until the maximum is reached. Whereas the secondary teacher started out at $2,000 per year after spending three years at university and one year at O.C.E. The elementary teachers were ahead of the game. Of course, the secondary teacher can climb to a higher maximum, Dr. Long stated.

O.C.E. does not operate any placement service, he said. Nor does it recommend students for certain positions upon their graduation. If the boards ask their opinion on a certain student's qualifications, they give it, Dr. Long stated.

MASTERSON TO STAY

Grid, Hoop Mentor Turns Down Offer Of Winnipeg Club

By BILL ROSS

Robert P. "Bob" Masterson, ace sports mentor, yesterday provided Varsity sports fans with the best news since he lifted the Intercollegiate football crown from its then perennial resting place on the head of the Metras Mustangs. Masterson announced his intentions of remaining at the University of Toronto in spite of an offer from the management of the Winnipeg Blue Bombers to coach their team for a salary which reputedly came close to the $9,000 mark. The announcement was made during a meeting of the Athletic Directorate at which UWO sports prexy Johhny Metras, who is in town on a speaking tour, was a guest.

Big Bob, a former All-American end and professional performer, expressed satisfaction and pleasure with the all-round co-operation which he has received from both officials and students of the university since his arrival two years ago. It was this reason as much as anything which influenced his decision to stay, he stated, when interviewed by phone last night. He was high in praise of the athletes with whom he has worked during his stay so far and last year's pep rally demonstrations rate a lot in his estimation.

Athletic Director Warren Stevens announced that Masterson was voted a somewhat higher salary due to a twofold reason. "His two successful years with us rate a raise in the first place", said Stevens, "as well as the fact that he was offered a lucrative sum elsewhere".

Stevens went on to say that the Varsity salary does not approach the sum named in the Winnipeg offer, but other considerations are involved in Masterson's decision. Bob stressed the fact that at no time had he severed his connection with the University, but that the Blue Bomber offer was so lucrative that it merited careful consideration.

The new figure at which Masterson has been retained by the University remains unknown, as regulations do not permit that it be made public. He is not under contract, but is appointed to the post in the same manner as a professor.

Bob's popularity around the University was never in question at any time in the two years he has been here. On Monday night when he was announced as a guest speaker at Ajax, he was given a terrific ovation to let him know that he is appreciated and very much wanted here.

The Mustang Tamer

Bob's coaching skill and new ideas paid off last year on the gridiron, but his talents as a basketball mentor are not to be overlooked. The senior loop Blues ran up a very creditable record this year, finishing second to the Western Mustangs.

The PHE I and St. Mike's A's will enter the final round of the inter-faculty major basketball championship by virtue of their respective wins yesterday. The musclemen downed their brother-quintet, Sr. UC by a 47-39 margin while the Mikemen eliminated Jr. UC with a 46-32 setback. The blue basketeers also gave the gate to the UC III on Monday afternoon to advance to the semi-finals. UC had three out of a possible four teams from their stable in the semi-final competitions.

The Physedders trailed their senior foes all the way through the hard-played encounter until approximately the three-quarter mark. The seniors, with five men on the bench with five personals against their names, lost their grip on the play and the PHE quintet rang up enough points to win by their comfortable margin.

Gayman was tops for the winners as he pushed in seventeen counters and Artie "Mitty" Bell hooped ten to rank second on the PHE scoring list. Kettle sank eight while Strom's six, Genise's four and two points by Gordon rounded out the winner's total.

McPhedran, with nine, led the seniors followed by Goldberg and Simbrow who netted sixes. Three was the really popular net for the night, with Slim Tisdale, Montayne, Cooper, Bockneck and Cohen contributing this number to the UC cause.

The double blue A squad took an early lead and never relinquished same till the final klaxon as they dropped Jr. UC from the big race yesterday by a 46-32 decision. The red and white, however, were within striking distance of the leaders throughout the better part of the game but the closing minutes brought a determined scoring effort by the Saints to assure a clean win.

G. "Bags" McKeown led the list of St. Mike's scorers when he put in an eleven point effort while dragging down an impressive number of rebounds from both boards. Bill Figel counted nine for the Mikemen while Ray Ryan took seven and Dewey and Kane sank sixes. Steve Carr showed well around the backboards and hooped four points during his short stays on the floor.

Kuzmocha paced the juniors with eight points while Ron Barber scored seven and Gibson six. Barber tall UC centre, was deadly on foul shots, sinking five without a failure. Badner and Young contributed fours while Kennedy got two.

In the Monday encounter the St. Mike's A quintet won a decisive contest with the UC III by a 53-36 total. The Mikemen dominated the encounter although their third period shooting left something to be desired. Three eleven point totals were run up in this game with G. "Lugs" McKeown and Bill Figel leading St. Mike's and Harrison potting the same number for UC.

Third year Civil handed the UC VIII minor entry a 45-12 lacing yesterday to climb a rung higher in the upstairs league playoffs.

Bees Defeat Dukes 8-6 In Overtime Thriller

By BOB DNIEPER

The Varsity Junior Bees fought a long uphill battle last night to win a thriller from the Marlboro Junior club. This win ties the series for the Good-Humor cup at one game each. The final game will be played at Varsity on Friday at eight chimes.

A sizzling performance by the Dukes in the first period combined with an inept Varsity showing to pile up four goals for the Marlies without an answering shot from the Bees. They managed to shake off their lethargy to score at the seventeen minute mark while they were short-handed.

The second period brought out what seemed a different Blue team. Right from the face off the University men took charge of the situation and rapped in five well played tallies. The period ended with the score 6-4 for Varsity, and the Blues were threatening to increase that lead.

In the third stanza the Dukes came back full blast and blazed one past Leuty to cut Varsity's lead to one. With a minute to go they tied it up on Lionel Barber's fast effort.

With a little over five minutes gone in the first ten minute overtime period Varsity slammed in a goal when Al Conboy snagged a pass and duped the Dukes' defence to score from the corner. In spite of heavy pressure the Blue-men held on to their lead for the rest of the game. With thirty seconds left, Vern Buffey was taken out and an extra Marlboro forward was put in. From the face-off the puck was shot out to Mac Clement who made no mistake and whistled it down into the open net to put the Bees up 8-6. That finished the game. The outstanding star of the game was goalie Vern Buffey, who saved many sure goals. It was his efforts that kept the Marlies in the running. Art Holmes and Blake Sinclair played well for the winners.

That's All

Today's issue marks the last edition of The Varsity for the current year.

For 100 issues the columns of The Varsity have turned out a steady stream of words, words meant to justify the fond hopes and great ambitions that filled us back in September. Looking back over the 100 issues, it is obvious that we fell short of our goal.

In our second issue we pledged ourselves to keep students informed and to "keep abreast of the teeming activity of undergraduate affairs". In addition, we said: "We will take positive stands on various issues and though we may, at times, provoke your wrath or disapproval, we will do so because we feel it to be in the best interests of the student body."

In trying to carry out those major objectives we weren't always successful. But any shortcomings must be chalked up to human frailty rather than deliberate intent. Our sins of omission and our treatment of news may have been considered inadequate at times, but if the labors of a conscientious, energetic staff are any criterion we could ask for no greater effort.

During the year we did take "positive" stands on issues which we considered important to students and, to judge by many of the letters you wrote, we were often out on a limb alone. Some of you may have felt we wandered from the academic path by discussing issues of no immediate concern on the campus. We did so because we felt that university students, more than most, had a vital stake in problems that would be of direct concern to them as citizens. And we felt that those problems should be considered now because the opportunities for mental stimulation are probably greater here at the University than they will ever be in later life.

It is hard to assess the effect we had on you. It would be asking too much to assume that we convinced you of anything. Certainly there were no tangible results, no earth-shaking tremors. But if we did no more than help to prod some of you out of the primrose path of academic insularity, then we didn't fall too short of our goal. We like to think so, anyway.

As we close the door on Volume LXVIII, we do so with gratitude. Any success we did achieve this year could not have been possible without the interest and helpful criticism of the student body, the patient tolerance of University authorities, and the sustained loyalty of our staff members.

Beardless Boys Buy Booze In Bistro

Eastern Ontario was shocked and sorrowed by the disclosure last night by the Toronto Evening Tellemgram that several University of Toronto students were seen drinking orange pop in a dimly lit room in the east end of Toronto.

Disguised as a Fuller Brush salesman, a Tellemgram reporter entered the secret dive late last night (about 7:30). The reporter in question is 20 years old and has not yet begun to shave. He said that a scruffy-looking waiter who slightly resembled Tony Galento served him a coca-cola without once questioning his age.

The two students drinking orange pop, and wearing University crests, appeared to him to be about 19 years of age but were served openly by the same scruffy waiter, who was seen to wink slyly at one of the youths as he put the bottles on the table.

Later in the evening three Varsity coeds, wearing blue and white jackets, entered the dive and called the waiter over (the scruffy one). In whispered tones they ordered bottles of coca-cola each and were served without question although they both appeared to be less than 20 years old.

When questioned by the Tellemgram reporter about serving drinks to persons under the legal age, the waiter (still scruffy) just shrugged his shoulders and gave a wry smile. "Business is business", he is reported as saying.

The five Varsity students conversed in quiet tones and none appeared to be affected by what they had drunk (although one youth made a trip to the lavatory). Four older people, dropping in after a show, ordered milkshakes and commenced to be quite noisy. Throughout the evening the younger people quietly sipped their drinks and chatted. In all five bottles of Nu-Grape, three of orange pop and two of coke were consumed by them.

About 9:15 they put on their coats and quietly left.

Commenting on this disclosure, a Toronto Minister said: "Thank God for the Tellemgram! It is not my part to say that young people today have not minds of their own but this throwing of drink in their paths by unscrupulous bistro operators must cease. It is a disgrace to the University. Let us hope that police action is quick and efficient."

Watch the Evening Tellemgram tomorrow night for a bigger, better scoop! We print all the News that's fit to—get circulation.

Local Committee Announces Dates For ISS Seminar

Plans have been drawn up for the ISS summer seminar to be held at Bouvigne Castle near Breda, Holland. The seminar topic for this summer is "The Individual In Society". Tentative dates for the Seminar have been set for July 11 to Aug. 15.

Students will be chosen from their second to the last years. The basis of selection will be high academic standing and qualities of leadership. Application forms for the seminar will be ready at the registrar's office and from the local ISS committee. The students must be willing to come back and assume leadership on their respective campuses with regard to the local ISS campaigns.

Professors from Canadian universities and prominent European professors will comprise the permanent staff. Assisting them will be outstanding European lecturers who will not be at the seminar for the full five weeks.

New Union From The Air

Here is what the tentative plan for the student union looks like from an aerial perspective. Stan White, the student architect responsible for the plans revealed in The Varsity last week, notes that this perspective is from the corner of Queen's Park Crescent and Hoskin Ave. The new Union lies between Trinity College and Holwood House.

A lobby, a sunken garden in the gallery, a main lounge that can be used as a ballroom to accommodate 500 couples, a radio studio are among the features of the proposed union.

Appoint Ex-Osgoode Head To Be Dean Of Law School

Dr. Cecil Wright, who resigned as Dean of Osgoode Hall law school in January, has been appointed Dean of the School of Law at the University of Toronto. Dr. Sidney Smith, U. of T. president, made the announcement following last night's meeting of the University's Board of Governors.

John Willis and Bora Laskin who resigned as full time lecturers at Osgoode along with Dean Wright also will join the University of Toronto staff, Dr. Smith said. They will be professors in the School of Law.

"Acceptance of the University posts by these three men benefits not only the University of Toronto but the whole cause of legal education in Canada," Dr. Smith said; "otherwise, in view of their resignations, they would have been attracted by offers from law schools in the United States or by opportunities in private practice. They will join the staff July 1, 1949."

Coincident with the new appointments, Dr. Smith announced the retirement on June 30 of W. P. M. Kennedy, present Dean of the School and his appointment as Dean Emeritus.

Dr. Wright's resignation as Dean of Osgoode Hall came after the benchers of the Law Society of Upper Canada ordered more practical training in law offices for Ontario law students to balance their theoretical education.

Now 44, Dr. Wright was born at London, Ontario. His father was the late T. A. Wright, a milling company executive. His mother resides in London.

Dr. Wright was a gold medalist in political science at the University of Western Ontario in 1923. He graduated from Osgoode Hall with another gold medal.

He went to Harvard where in one year he obtained the degree of Doctor of Juridical Science, although the course usually takes two years. Only three other men in Canada hold the same degree.

During the war he was chairman of dozens of boards of conciliation in labour disputes and since then has acted in many arbitration proceedings. "I believe that labour and management still trust me," he says.

Three More DVA Pay Days

Pay dates for student veterans on DVA assistance were announced this week by the Department of Veterans Affairs.

The February-March pay will be distributed on Tuesday, March 15, while the March-April pay will be on Thursday, April 14. Both these pays will be at the usual places and will follow the usual procedure.

The final pay for the April-May period will vary in date and place. Details will be announced by the various colleges and faculties.

GRADUATE STUDY

"Student veterans graduating this year whose plans include training at post-graduate level, should, if they have remaining service entitlement, get in touch with the DVA as soon as possible after graduation in order to make the application which is necessary in such cases.

"It is suggested that, prior to graduation, the veteran record and discuss his plans with a DVA Counsellor or with the executive secretary of the Advisory Bureau for Ex-service Students."

The Varsity's New Chief

Reporter To Editor In One Year

Stan Fillmore, II Vic, was appointed Editor-in-Chief of The Varsity for the 1949-50 session at Wednesday night's Students' Administrative Council meeting.

Fillmore, 23 years old, spent last year as a news and feature writer for The Varsity. He received his primary and secondary school education in London, Ont., and Toronto. He is presently enrolled in Pass Arts.

"We intend to continue The Varsity policy of campaigning for a greater degree of student government at the University of Toronto," stated Fillmore yesterday. "Although a certain amount of progress has been made in the past year along this line, there remains a great deal of work to be done."

Will Plug For Union

"The Varsity will actively support the proposed Students' Memorial Union. We will attempt to keep student interest in the Union at a high level through publication of all steps taken toward the realization of this project, and by again featuring articles on the unions which other universities have successfully built.

"We hope to try and get a little more color into our news stories, but the look of the paper will remain much the same.

"The Varsity will continue to uphold the interests of the general student body. A university newspaper which serves a campus where so many diversified types of education are pursued can not always serve each individual group. But we will try to ensure that all get the maximum possible coverage, and that every point of view gets a fair presentation.

Will Support SAC

"The Varsity must support the students of this university, through The Students' Administrative Council and will defend the rights of students wherever and whenever these rights are threatened.

"The paper also serves as a training ground for potential journalists. This aspect of The Varsity's activities will be maintained in order that we not only give the students as good a paper as possible, but also so that The Varsity staff obtain the maximum benefit from their work."

Fillmore takes over The Varsity reins from retiring Editor Mark Harrison, who intends to go to Columbia School of Journalism in New York City next year.

SAC Fees Increase Possible Next Year Councillors Decide

By JACK GRAY

It may be necessary to raise the Students' Administrative Council fee next year, the Finance Committee of the SAC reported at Wednesday night's SAC meeting. The committee stressed that no decision could be taken on the proposed raise until the estimates for next year's budget have been considered.

Publication Costs Increase

Members of the Finance Committee would not make any definite statement on the matter, but they pointed out that the expected reduction in registration next year, and the greatly increased costs of printing Torontonensis and The Varsity mean that a balanced budget will not be possible next year unless some increase in revenue is obtained. The main way to do this is to raise the SAC fee.

The current fee is $3 per year. Students at the University of Toronto obtain more for this, claims E. A. Macdonald, Secretary-Treasurer of the SAC, than students at any other University in Canada.

Among the activities which the SAC supports from the $3: The Varsity, for which students do not pay; Torontonensis, which had to be subsidized to the tune of $6,675 last year; the Symphony Orchestra and Chorus; the Housing Service which cost about $3,500 last year; the Employment Service, $2,700 last year; two loan funds; the Band; ski excursions; Debaters; the National Federation of Canadian University Students (a straight levy of 6 cents per student); a matriculation scholarship for $300; Honour Awards; and the countless smaller services which the SAC authorizes and supports.

SAC "Big Business"

Macdonald pointed out that the fee for auditing the SAC books was, in itself, almost $700 last year. "We are a big business", he declared.

Many of the services which the SAC sponsors are revenue producers. The Varsity takes in a great deal of money on advertising. The proposed book exchange will be run on a non-profit basis. But this year it has been necessary to charge for The Handbook and for Torontonensis.

If the level of services is to be maintained, and in some instances where it is necessary, expanded, then it will probably be necessary for the Finance Committee to recommend an increase in the fee.

Toronto Fees Among Lowest

At present the University of Toronto SAC fee stands as one of the lowest of any university in Canada. At The University of British Columbia for example, a referendum was held yesterday to raise their fee from $16 to $20 per student per year. Included in their plans if the students approve the increase is a clause to make their year book free to students.

Some members of the Council said at Wednesday night's meeting that they would like to see any increase in the fee large enough to include the payment for Torontonensis. While no figure can be definitely stated, a raise of at least a dollar, and possibly more will be necessary if the SAC wants to stay in the black.

The SAC will take a step to secure a greater say in student discipline next week. A report presented at Wednesday night's Council meeting by Mary Stevens, School of Social Work, indicated that such a move from the Council will be supported by members of the Caput.

Caput Gives Encouragement

Miss Stevens interviewed various members of the Caput and the encouraging replies given her questions prompted the Council to investigate the problem further. It is hoped that before the end of the year a proposal will go to the Caput to enable the SAC to effect a closer liaison between the SAC and the Caput on questions concerning student discipline.

New Text Mart Operated By SAC To Open May 1st

The new SAC operated Book Exchange will open May 1st in the Torontonensis office in the COTC Drill Hall, SAC Student Service Commissioner Jane Hazard stated yesterday.

The exchange, which will be open between the hours of 12 and 2.00 p.m., Monday to Friday, will operate for the purpose of building up a stock of second-hand texts, she said. The actual selling of the books will not begin until September, when a manager has been appointed.

Will Set Policy

As yet no definite policy has been set regarding the commission to be deducted by the SAC for handling the books, Miss Hazard said. However, she expected it would be between three and five per cent. "In all events it will be operated on a cost plus maintenance basis," she said. "We will try to operate it with the maximum of benefit to the students."

Torontonensis would be moving out of their offices around April 8 or 9, she said. When they moved out, the SAC would begin building shelves to hold the incoming books.

During the spring months the exchange will be staffed by members of the SAC staff. When it opens in September, it will be operated by a student manager and two student helpers.

The position of manager will be open for applications at a date to be announced later. The manager will be paid a set salary and the two student helpers will be paid on an hourly basis.

Responsible To SAC

The manager of the book exchange will be responsible to the SAC through the Finance Committee of that body.

Four Europeans Come To U of T Under ISS Aid

The International Students Service will be able to bring only four European students to the University of Toronto next year, because they were able to collect only $4,000 of the $10,000 asked for in the Toronto ISS campaign, Mary Stevens, School of Social Work, told the Students' Administrative Council Wednesday night.

Three D.P. students, two of them Czech refugees, and one European Exchange Student, will be brought to Toronto. It is hoped that three men and one woman will come.

The D.P. students are being brought to Canada by ISS and will remain in the country after their year at a Canadian university. The Exchange Students must return to Europe at the end of their year here.

The local ISS committee asked the SAC for active support of their scheme, either in the form of a grant or a per capita increase in student fees which could be used to finance a greater number of scholarships for D.P. and European Exchange students. The request has been forwarded to the Finance Committee for investigation.

Features Tell Many Things Of Students, Skunks, Kings

By HARRY AUGUSTUS K. RASKY

Like lace on a valentine, a feature is probably not a necessary thing, but it's pretty to have around. The feature in the newspaper is the colour around the black and white.

The news story is the clear statement of fact. The feature is saga of the people behind the news. It is the history of the man who bites the dog, and probably the obituary on the dog.

According to any standard, this has been a feature year.

The Varsity has met many queer people, and seen many odd things. Early in the year, we carried on an investigation into skirts and things. We found queer noises coming from the Zion church on College; discovered cancered chickens and church mice. We also find Petunia — a sweet smelling skunk.

Professor Satterly condemned the Kissing machine, and termed it a "silly thing". Found many local learners who had spent their summers in places like Alaska, and Africa. The nose for news sniffed and found pep in the pep rally and popcorn in the playing field.

We investigated student unions around the continent. Declared a short year ago, "The dust in the Monument room, the unread names on the memorial wall, the infrequently used Hart House tower chimes are evidence of the last memorial. The student union, active and alive will be the monument for the future."

This year we tried to let the reader in the secret workings of the various campus courses. P.H.E., Nursing, O.T. & Forestry all were pulled apart and replaced in good condition.

Probably most interesting were the various personalities discovered. Old and a tradition in himself, Prof. DeChamp, a man with a beard, who has been on the staff for half a century. Pop Taylor is a locksmith and bowler. U.C.'s careful caretaker proudly declared, "I made custard for his lunch." In Hart House the checkery offered to check a man's dog or coat.

Frank Lloyd Wright, a beardless Bernard Shaw, spouted with a sweep of his cane and declared about Convocation Hall, "An immense sprawling turtle."

Ralph Campbell is moving from Foxboro, Ontario, to Oxford, England, on a Rhodes Scholarship. K.G.R. Gwynne-Timothy was compared to a nervous grasshopper and a jet-propelled frog. We had considerable trouble trying to discover if Joe Potts was a genius, gentleman, or jerk. No conclusion. On a Montreal Weekend with something to say, found Joe biting his moustache furiously; he had been missed by the photographers.

There were many stories in the seemingly dullest place — the library. The barber shop and the dental clinic came under our observant eye. Miss Jones and College Smith met in a feature story. The story behind The Varsity was told with the help of a missing nose. The J.C.R. counterman observed life over a mustard bowl. Mr. Microphone Mclean was declared to be a very "alliterate" fellow.

There is a story in everything. Anybody who condemns the University as a colorless place, had better look again. There is poetry in the people.

Increase In Membership Shown In Political Clubs

By J. A. KNIGHT

This year's activities of the political clubs on the campus were marked by a general increase in membership. Important government officials have addressed the various meetings which lacked the displays of political fireworks evident in former years.

LPP Club

Perhaps the stormiest meeting of the year was Tim Buck's address to an open meeting of the LPP Club. The club was also addressed by A. A. McLeod, who spoke on his trip to Europe. Their regular Monday open forums discussed a variety of subjects including the Atlantic War Pact, Cardinal Mindszenty and the LPP National Convention. At the club conference on Jan. 3rd four resolutions were passed. They were (1) To rally the masses of students for democracy and peace under an independent party program, (2) To fight for the economic needs of students and the democratisation of education, (3) To fight for a democratic campus, (4) To raise the ideological level of the club.

Liberal

The U. of T. Liberal Association held five open meetings during the year addressed by Brooke Claxton, Joe Smallwood, Paul Martin, R. H. Winters and Milton F. Gregg, V.C. Three closed meetings were held, one addressed by Lester B. Pearson, and the others for the discussion of resolutions and the election of officers. Four resolutions were passed calling for a Provincial convention in Feb. or March of this year and every four years thereafter: the abolition of fees and assistance to students faced with financial difficulties; a comprehensive immigration policy; and the immediate institution of the 1945 Housing Proposals.

P. C. Club

The U. of T. P.C. Club, with a membership of 160, held five open meetings addressed by Premier Kennedy, J. M. Macdonnell, Donald Fleming, Ivan Sabourin, and Leslie Blackwell. In addition, the regular discussion groups were held each Wednesday. Many of the members attended the National Convention in Ottawa last October, where they took an active part in framing the party's policy. Delegates also attended the Annual Conference of the P.C. Student Federation in Montreal last February. The club held a full scale membership drive in Jan. featuring rallies and discussion groups.

CCF Club

The speaker at the five public meetings of the C.C.F. club included E. B. Jolliffe, F. A. Brewin, Reid Scott, Wm. Temple and C. H. Millard. The resolutions passed by the club included a request to the provincial and federal governments for increased aid to the universities in order to acomplish a lowering of fees and a motion of regret in view of the tendencies towards restriction of freedom of speech in the university. Delegates attended the Co-Operative Commonwealth University Federation Convention and the CCF (Ontario Section) Convention. Reid Scott, a former president of the club, was elected as MPP for Toronto Beaches, and Harvey Hay, this year's president, was elected to the CCF provincial executive.

Student Veteran On His Way Out —2500 Graduates

By FRANK MORITSUGU

The day of the sober-sided, grizzled older student is slowly declining. The student veterans are going.

Out of an approximate total of 4,500 U. of T. graduates-to-be this year, nearly 2,500 are ex-servicemen, the largest graduating group of student veterans in University history. Since total veteran enrolment for 1948-49 at the U. of T. and affiliated colleges was 6,715, the graduates will cut down the total heavily. Only a mere trickle, much less than this year's 200-odd first year student veterans, is expected to enter U. of T. in the fall.

Judging from registration figures at Simcoe Hall, the classes of '50 and '51 will contain substantial groups of ex-servicemen, after which the classes of '52 and '53 will see veterans in a distinct minority.

The trend in the lessening of student veterans was shown this year in various college elections, where ex-service rep nominees were few.

Activities of the National Council of Student Veterans were somewhat curtailed this year, with maximum effort devoted to a nation-wide survey of student veteran cost-of-living figures which was used to draw up a brief asking increases in DVA allowances commensurate to the rise in cost-of-living. This brief was presented to Veterans Affairs Minister Gregg last week-end in Ottawa.

Extension of the government-subsidized University Training Plan to include all deserving students, on basis of scholarship, was another recommendation of the NCSV brief.

Ajax Leaves Varsity Scene But Skule Doesn't Forget

By PETE NEWMAN

During the summer of 1945, the University of Toronto was faced with the difficult problem of providing accommodation for nearly twice the number of students as had been registered in the previous year. To cope with this situation, the University leased part of the shell-filling plant at Ajax, twenty-five miles east of Toronto. Ajax was quickly converted into a self-contained university community. Due to the completion of two new buildings in Toronto, and because of a drop in enrollment, the "University of Toronto Ajax Division" will be shut down, at the end of the current year.

Ajax Is Memory

Ajax consists of 446 acres and 111 buildings. But to any one of the 8,000, who have ever walked down its windy corridors, it is much more than that. Ajax is an unforgettable experience. Ajax is a memory.

Ajax is the Sunday night walk from the bus-stop on the highway, it's the last "house party" (when Al put his head through the wall, and no one could pull him out, because of his big ears). It is the challenging voice of the "guy down the hall", who succeeded in foiling gravity at two-thirty last night. It's the line-up at the Cafeteria, and the big red dog who refused to eat "Cafeteria meat-balls." It is the sound of the wind, and the sudden black steam-pipe, spitting at you from the darkness. Ajax is the night before exams, when "Jim's got a sure clue". Ajax is the last day when you finally leave for Toronto, and in spite of yourself—look back.

Ajax Is Shanty Town

The outsider seeing the "University of Toronto, Ajax Division" for the first time, is confronted by a modern shanty town. A shanty town clad in grey eminence.

The grey, low-slung, almost desolate-looking buildings, suggest usefulness rather than comfort. Every building owes its shape only to symmetry and thrift. The old residences are "U" shaped huts. The two forks of the "U" hold twenty-five rooms each, while the cross-bar is occupied by a spacious common-room. The residences are uniform in every respect, except for the small black number above each grey door.

Hart House In Suburbs

Besides the thirty-five odd residences, there is the small, but well-equipped Hart House, Ajax, the large "Rec Hall", the post-office the barber-shop, and 72 other buildings. The complete self-sufficiency of Ajax soon becomes quite apparent.

Perhaps the strangest thing at Ajax is the perennial "Green Dragon". These monstrosities are huge, springless, over-crowded, and under-nourished vehicles; which nevertheless provide the link between residences and the academic area

A Successful Experiment

Ajax was opened in order that thousands of would-be engineers, who could not be accommodated in Toronto, might fulfil their destinies. This was the primary purpose, but it is only a minor part of its accomplishments.

Ajax is a successful experiment in education. Ajax is a vivid example of democracy in action.

Every major non-academic decision has been made by the students themselves. Each residence is a separate state, ruled by those in it.

With an average of thirty-two hours a week, the work is hard at Ajax. But all is not work.

Statistics will show what Ajax has accomplished in academics and sports. But there are no statistics for the many friendships begun, and all the good times had, by those who ever were "Jaxonites."

"Down in the Valley" as a ventilating hole in the G & S armour and the second annual student composers' concert last month (Vic Liberal Arts Club).

The graphic arts leave us more or less speechless. No revolutions seem to have taken place but the Hart House gallery and its big brother downtown rarely had a dull week. It makes us increasingly uncomfortable that at least 50 per cent of the student body should be discriminated against on grounds of sex with regard to the Hart House exhibitions. Absurd problems call for absurd solutions if good sense is overgrown by tradition and we suggest a special entrance via a tunnel to be dug at the expense of those responsible. Our joy over the arrival of the Lee collection is slightly dampened by similar considerations.

Politics, Campus Scandals Highlighted News In CUP

By DOROTHY HERRING

Campus life across Canada did not differ greatly from that here at Varsity during the past year. In the political field, Communism was an issue at several universities. Out at the University of British Columbia, Gordon Martin was banned from practice by the British Columbia Law Society on grounds of Communist sympathies, and 1,000 students rose up in protest. At Western, officials were undecided for some time as to whether Stanley Ryerson, Secretary of the Ontario LPP party, should be allowed to address a class in political thought, but finally agreed, to the satisfaction of the students.

The student LPP Club at McGill was denied the use of the McGill student union building for five months, pending investigation of alleged illegal distribution of printed matter. At the University of Alberta, the Social Credit Club withdrew from the campus Mock Parliament, accusing the organization of being a "front" for the dissemination of Communist propaganda.

Campus newspapers steered a rocky course during the year. The Dalhousie Gazette, of Dalhousie University, put out one issue entitled the Halifax Wail, a parody of the city paper, Halifax Mail. The student council promptly recalled the issue, but some copies had gone out, and circulated in the black market.

The Daily Ubyssey was rapped for "fostering inter-university discord", and was termed "detrimental" to the University, while the staff of Le Quartier Latin, organ of the University of Montreal, was dismissed by the students' council in an argument over the paper's policy.

Scandal was rife on the west coast. A picture was taken of two clowning professors at the U.B.C. Engineers' Banquet. Pressure from the Engineering Department deleted the picture from the Ubyssey, but the picture got out in the Vancouver Sun, anyway.

And on the lighter side . . . student council at Dalhousie was faced with the problem of removing an outhouse which appeared on the steps one morning . . . co-eds at Queen's were instructed in the art of becoming burlesque queens in an article in the campus paper . . . U.B.C.'s Costa Rican boys claimed that Canadian girls don't know how to use their eyes for that "come-hither" look, and Acadia's South American co-eds came back with the assertion that with Canadian men as un-aggressive as they are, the womenfolk could well use some eye ammunition.

Varsity Spirit At New High In Year Packed With Action

By J. A. YVON HABEL
News Editor

It is often said that the campus of our university is a self-contained city. A bird's-eye view of the happenings during the year seems to support that contention. If a student took advantage of all the different activities on the campus during the year he wouldn't have to step off the university ground and wouldn't miss a thing . . . except perhaps his academic year.

The happenings are many and varied but the event which seems to stand out is the triumphant return of the Yates Cup to the campus. It was ushered in by a delirious and vociferous season which displayed more zip and spirit than had been seen for years.

Plans are ready for the long talked about students union, the future cultural and social centre for students' affairs. The university broke into print under the pen of Morley Callaghan and had its first homecoming weekend in his-

College Show

The Spectacle

"The Spectacle" opened in Hart House theatre last Monday and closed on Tuesday. It was sometimes pleasant, sometimes painful, and sometimes nothing at all.

The feeling was there, and so was the effort. But too often the quality was lacking. The highlights of the show were the clever lyrics of the songs. The script never left the ground.

The plan of the show centred around Toronto. There was much topical satire that had a pleasant sting. Unfortunately the script-writers often didn't know when they had a good thing and insisted on repeating the same themes.

Ron Sclater—the man who wasn't going to have anything to do with the show — appeared on stage as often as did the curtains. He proved to be a very capable showman, and was as at home on stage as in his own living room. As the voice of Hawgtown he was as mellow as a marshmallow.

Many of the scenes were taken from life and seemed almost realistic enough to be true. A scene aboard a train was as domestic as an old rug.

"Along the Boardwalk" seemed to be taken right from the Casino stage, and maybe it was. Three men at two pianos were interesting. "Folly on a Trolley" was too long, but very funny in spots. "Drewling in the Pail" was funny in spots and sad in others. Paul Levy as a Groucho Marx doctor shows great promise. "Imported Impressions" was the only only-for-optical students scene in the show.

There was an intelligent usage of visual humor, often familiar. When Gordon Steeves grabs hold of the balloons that carry him up, he brings down the house. The all male dancers made for pleasant entertainment.

It is difficult to assess the value of the show, because of the tremendous handicaps encountered (e.g. no women). It would obviously be more entertaining for those in the course than for an outsider.

Enjoyed their program booklet muchly.

Calling Card Re-Examined

In an introductory paragraph last fall entitled "Calling Card," we defined our efforts as aiming to strengthen the readers' muscles "that they may applaud or heave vegetables with greater vigour." More elegantly, Clive Bell once referred to the functions of a department such as ours as ultimately consisting in making readers remember "what intense and surprising pleasures are peculiar to the life of the spirit." How about A.M. & D.?

The question is rhetorical only in the sense that there is no suitable mechanism for the conveyance of a representative answer. It is not so because it did not occur to the contributors to the column to ask it while they were delivering the goods. In being subjected to limitations in space and in time for writing our reviews we share the benefits of exonerating circumstances with the rest of the press, but the enviable freedom from commercial considerations impose greater responsibilities. Before deciding whether they have been met we would ask our readers to consider the frequent and painful necessity for stating principal impressions and omitting qualifying remarks for simple lack of space. This situation is very likely to reduce a review from a level of desirable urbanity to that of an apparently authoritarian outburst devoid of the humility appropriate to the "life of the spirit." It is only with regard to instances where pretentiousness and presumption masquerade under the label of spirit that this blanket apology does not apply. In such cases one may only regret one's failure to have been blunter or sharper as the case may be.

We can safely say that such deplorable occasions have been rare. But that does not give us the right to paraphrase President Truman without reservations to the effect that the state of the realm of muses is good. It has fallen short, or being so, not so much because of things we would rather not have seen or heard, but because of the absence of things we would have liked to see or hear.

The state of drama on the campus and its very obvious problems merit systematic investigation that cannot be supplied here. The relationship of Hart House Theatre and of the several College societies will eventually call for some revision towards a more economical distribution of available energies. As things stand now, we get a definite duplication of endeavour. Perhaps U.C.'s decision to dispense with a major production this year is the right one; the fine quality of their work this season would almost suggest that. But then, the St. Michael's College arena effort may constitute a counter-argument. We do hope that the comparatively greater appeal of the spectacular will not divert the attention of H.H. theatre management from the no less important type of production exemplified by the "Sea Gull." The season at the Royal Alexandra was none too cheering. The failure of the Old Vic Company to show up was complemented by the failure of Toronto audiences to show up for Evans' "Man and Superman."

Native talent invaded the place time: with the "Drunkard" and with Callaghan's "To Tell the Truth," the latter a truly calamitous case of childhood disease to attack the tender Canadian Theatre, one which, we hope, has served to immunize it in that respect. The New Play Society is valiantly navigating between the Scylla of having to adjust itself to the predatory tastes of a city audience and the Charybdis of ridiculously limited stage facilities. We sympathize and hope for the best. The lesser organizations we leave to the perils of a competitive economy with a slightly lighter heart.

Margaret Webster's Hamlet and its noisy reception was no more than a key to audience psychology; the screen Hamlet, possibly the most important dramatic event of the season, was also memorable for the wide and interesting range of verdicts to be gathered afterwards. Speaking of the screen, where was "Paisan," "Day of Wrath" etc? The belated arrival of Symphonie Pastorale does not suffice to clear the "International" establishment up Yonge street of the suspicion of sailing under a false flag.

Opera in this city may be closer to the crossroads than we may like to think. The first generation of Opera School students approaches graduation. And afterwards? Is exile as church soloists to be their fate? One production a year, and so pretty a one as this year's "Marriage of Figaro" is a nice appetizer and probably all that can be carried under the present circumstances, both financially and artistically, but as a permanent ration it leads straight to starvation. It is so plainly a question of dollars that the continued absence of some kind of subsidy would amount to simple premeditated murder.

With four full operatic productions the CBC has been good to opera as it has been good to all forms of non-visual artistic expression. We are disappointed in ourselves for not covering Wednesday Night and other activities in this column as consistently as we had intended to. However, a start was made at least and our successors will surely carry on from there.

In connection with music on the campus we should like to voice a request concerning the coverage of events. Often an artist performs in Hart House or one of the colleges very shortly after his or her city recital with a similar programme, has been reported on. Surely, the principle of university events at all costs can only lead to duplication at the expense of other reviews. If omissions of this kind have been noted and resented they can find their explanation in this situation and no motives of wilful neglect should be suspected.

We assume that the slightly more modest range of enterprise observable in the all-Varsity chorus and orchestra is symptomatic of the shrinking to which this university is inevitably subjected now. We hope that it does not indicate a waning of the fervour that characterized the immediate post-war period. The very beginning of 1949-50 should at last find the Carnegie Record collection accessible to the student body. In the meantime the interesting record-programmes at Wymilwood warrant honourable mention. There works could be heard that would leave any downtown concert hall hopelessly empty. The "Friends of Great Music" had to restrict their activities severely this year for this reason (they are putting on a series in April though) and too few of us can absolve themselves from their share of responsibility for this. Without losing sight of what has been done we venture to say that the chamber music market on the whole is on the bearish side. We believe that the T.S.O. has done its work as the backbone of local concert life rather well, so has the Mendelssohn choir. The fact that composers did not stop working in 1890 is receiving increasing recognition and the soloists attracted by these organizations were of a high quality. Taking a final look at the campus, two events strike us as particularly significant among many worthy ones. The U.C. operetta production of Weill's

THE NEW PLAY SOCIETY PRESENTS

"SPRING THAW '49!"

A NEW MUSICAL REVIEW OF THE CANADIAN SCENE

After the opening night of the NPS Spring Review last year, the critics recovered in time to greet the presentation with remarks like—"One of the funniest reviews on record;" ... "Hilariously entertaining;" ... "Gay as a pinwheel;" ... "If laughter had been maintained at maximum intensity everybody would have gone home with lockjaw" ... and several of them said it, "should become an annual event".

Literally hundreds were turned away from our small theatre during the rest of the run. Believing that everyone should have the opportunity to join in this good Canadian fun, this year we are taking the advice of critics and public—and presenting an entirely new Review for two weeks!

Harrison Sums Up Text Book Problem On U. of T. Campus

By WILS HARRISON
Assistant News Editor

If an indecisive stand, which the various debate subjects and results during the past year indicate, has been adopted by the student body on this campus in their search for a definite social and political goal, objective steps have been taken towards achieving a definite goal in two fields . . . that of a student union and a better book service.

Varsity Investigates

At the beginning of the New Year, The Varsity began investigating a problem which had confronted students for the past 15 or 20 years, the problem of finding a remedy to the rapid obsolescence of texts and to get a method of procuring the new texts for students on a less costly basis.

During the course of the investigation, it became more and more apparent that past efforts on the part of students to find a solution to the resale of used texts had been continually hampered by the rapidity of the obsoleteness of used texts, sometimes for very minor reasons. The second-hand book exchanges, which had been set up by the Women's SAC Office and the Student's Christian Movement in Hart House, had both found this a major difficulty. The students would bring their books in for resale only to find the next year they were of no use and remained unsold. The books would be left on the hands of the book exchanges. Through the course of a few years the number of accumulated obsolete texts reached the stage where the exchanges decided to close their doors. They were cluttered up with unsold texts which were no longer of any use.

Forced To Close

The same difficulty was facing the present day purchasers of used texts. They were not being forced to close their businesses because of the accumulation of texts no longer of any use because they refused to take many of these books. But in the one instance, Mr. Jack Cole was forced to offer low prices to students because he had invested in used books no longer of any use. The Victoria College Book Bureau would not buy the books unless they were on the course. Horner and Bowes tried to cut the number of texts no longer used on the course down to a minimum. They still had a large number on their shelves. But one thing stood out in all the exchanges and that was, the students paid either in the receipt of low prices for their used texts on the one hand or nothing at all on the other.

Offered Discount

Another point, which became apparent, was the discrepancy in the prices of new texts, which existed at the three outlets in and around the campus for these books. Mr. Cole, who operates a private business, was able to offer the student 10 per cent discount on all purchases of new texts. The Vic Book Bureau, operated on a cost plus maintenance basis, was able to offer a reduction in their selling price of new texts over those charged by the University of Toronto Press Book Store. Some books published by the Press could only be purchased in the Press book store. In one instance, the Press refused to sell one of its publications to a book store off the campus which was underselling them. This book was Representative Poetry Volume 1, which the book store in question was selling 50 cents cheaper.

The report compiled by the local NFCUS committee on the text book problem substantiated these facts. It also pointed out from information obtained by a committee, set up by the National Conference of Canadian Universities, that the five to 20 per cent mark-up on American texts was unjustified since there was no sales tax or duty charged on educational books.

Brief Drawn Up

From this information gathered by The Varsity and the local NFCUS committee, a brief was drawn up and sent by the SAC to President Smith, to be forwarded later to the Board of Governors. This brief, which was sent to the president a month ago, is now in the hands of the Board's Committee of the University Press.

The brief submitted by the SAC to the president stressed the following points: that a list of books be prepared by the members of the faculty and submitted to the booksellers in adequate time for them to ascertain the books which would be required for the course for the year; that lecturers and professors adhere to this list; if a new text is published and would be better for the students, the professors should notify the booksellers of the change as soon as possible; that text books be imported direct from publishers in the United States and not through their representatives in Canada, thus avoiding the five to 20 per cent mark-up on American imported texts; that consideration be given to the alteration of the policy of the U of T Press Book Store to one of operation on a cost plus maintenance basis.

The results of the investigation, as yet, are not evident. If what has happened to past briefs submitted by the SAC to the Board of Governors can be taken as any criterion, the results may not be evident for a long time. At least this year a step has been taken in the right direction.

Student Exchange

Wouldn't Have Missed It

By NAN JONES

"We're nicely settled now, thank you — we've made our friends and we're just getting the hang of our course. Why should we give up one of our two or three precious years at a university we know we like for a year at some university we might not like at all?"

Thus a typical first—or second—year student might react to a proposal to exchange a year at another university. Certainly it was our first reaction before we really thought about it — or before we tried it. Undoubtedly there is a lot to be said for staying put at one university, and an exchange program is not for those shy or complacent people who dislike trying new things, meeting new people and finding new ways of doing things.

But for those students who believe there is more to be learned from an exchange of ideas than by any other means, the opportunity to spend a year of university life in a different university, in another part of the country or in a foreign country, is one that bears serious consideration. And those of us who have tried it — well, we wouldn't have missed it for anything.

At present, two exchange programs are being offered at Varsity. Through NFCUS, a Toronto student now in first year pass or second year honors can go next year to one of several universities in other districts of Canada for a year's study on a tuition-paid scholarship — which offsets travelling expenses. More information and scholarship applications can be obtained from NFCUS representatives.

The other exchange is the one with Smith College in Massachusetts, at present the only American exchange available. This exchange, opened to third year honor women, is operated on a student-for-student basis, with all fees being paid at the home university. Inquiries about this program should be directed to registrars or deans of the various colleges.

It is hoped that in another year or so, this program will be augmented by Toronto's joining a NFCUS-USNSA sponsored Canadian-American exchange, which will be tried next year for the first time by ten other Canadian universities.

There are at least three basic reasons why we're glad we took the opportunity to exchange. The first is that adjustment and readjustment is much simpler than might be expected. After a year or two of university experience, and with the added maturity that accompanies it, entrance into a new university is far easier than entrance as a freshman. People have fallen into their various groups, and they welcome new blood. Also, former contacts can be kept up quite easily.

In the second place, a year's exchange helps to shake off that force of habit which dulls perception so dreadfully. To quote a Smith student here on exchange, "It certainly has been an eye-opener. I saw things about Smith and its people that I had never seen before—and about the U. S.! It's a wonderful opportunity to see yourselves as others see you." It is by comparison that one learns—and sees the advantages and disadvantages of both home territory and adopted home.

The last and probably the most important benefit of the exchange program is in the liaison work its participants can perform—a two-way ambassadorship. By learning a few facts and trying to correct misconceptions of both groups, an exchange student in his own small way can help to bring about a better understanding between two groups of people, be they in different parts of a great and diversified Canada or in Canada and the U. S.

International Relations Club At Ottawa

The past year brought many first to the University of Toronto, and a return of many events which have been lacking in years gone by.

The International relations Club set a pleasant precedent by making a safari to Ottawa where External Affairs Minister Lester B. Pearson played host to more than sixty members of the club. Apart from the out-of-town rugby games, the exchange trips between Canadian Universities were increased this term by the visit of Les Caraand Le Bleu Et Or and the return trip of the All Varsity Review cast to Montreal this spring. Intercollegiate Rugby played an even bigger role than usual, with mammoth pep rallies and the presence of the University of Toronto Pipe Band to add the skirl of the bag-pipes to the Rah, Rah, Rah, of the Varsity crowds. The efforts of the SAC's Blue and white society gave the Blues lots of backing from the cheering section. Proof that superstition still is respected by the enlightened student body came with the burning of The Coon Coat by Joe Potts, with the subsequent string of victories on the rugby field.

The Cannon—Mr. Bones

The Femury Gang, as the ambitious medsmen came to be known this year pulled the most spectacular and daring raid of the year by capturing the famous Skude cannon. Hob Hetherington, Vice President of the Medical Association was bimself kidnapped before return of the cannon was negotiated.

Dean Young

The retirement of Dean Young of the Faculty of Applied Science meant a loss to the University of one whose picture has appeared frequently in Varsity in years gone by. His successor, is Kenneth F. Tupper an expert in jet propulsion and atomic research. The formulation of plans to build a supersonic wind tunnel for the University at de Haviland were also completed this spring.

All-Varsity Revue Returns

The return of the All-Varsity Review, somewhat overdue in its arrival, highlighted the student shows and brought back another note of University Spirit typical of the past year.

Margie, Cheerleaders Add Color

Graduation claims pretty Marjory Dun, for three years drum majorette of the Blue and White band. Rain or shine the strains of "Margy" could be heard at half-time, as crowds swarmed from stands to see the baton twirling brunette. Despite beginner's anxiety, Margie dropped her baton only once during her three year reign at the University of Toronto.

YEAR SEES VARSITY SPIRIT ON UPSWING

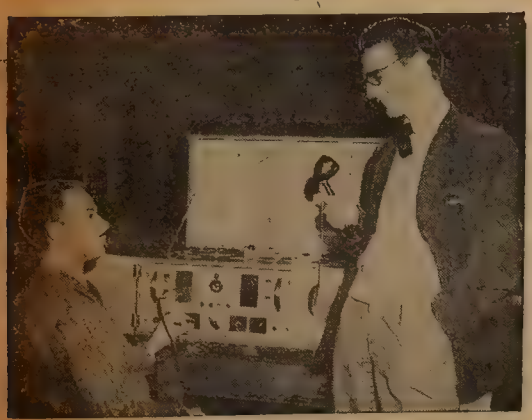
New Book Store

Cramped with space the University Press opened the new book store just south of the old observatory. Construction of the building was quick and the new book store was opened by the first week of the fall term. Here the students of university have room to buy needed supplies of books, paper, pencils and all material used in obtaining an education.

Brotherhood

President Sidney Smith in an address in Convocation Hall proclaimed the last week in February as Brotherhood Week. This week brought to the students' attention the needless prejudices among the various races, creeds, and religions of the world. Typical of the speakers of the campaign was Harold Russell, double amputee of World War II and star of the picture "The Bset Years of Our Lives". Russell's broad smile while speaking to an overflow audience at the women's Union Theatre helped emphasize the need for the abolition of racial and religious discrimination and intolerance.

Dean Bissell



During the past summer, Dr. Claude T. Bissell, was appointed assistant to the president, Dr. Bissel, former dean of US men's residences, returned from war duties to become a lecturer in the English department. Dr. Bissell graduated from the University of Toronto with a master degree in 1937 and received his PhD. at Cornell.

Blues Take Rugby Title

The Varsity rugby team, although beaten at the first of the year, climbed up the hard ladder of intercollegiate competition to emerge victors in the Yates Cup play-offs against the highly touted aggregation of John Metras. In this picture, Varsity's most popular player, Ted Toogood shows the way as he carries the mail during the final game against Western which Varsity won, 18-7. Toogood, Cummings and Waldon were the sparkplugs of Bob Masterson's victorious Blues.

Radio Workshop Test Run

The Radio Workshop was organized this year from the remnants of Entertainment 1 a, last year's radoi activity. Under its new officers the workshop expanded until it was producing, directing and broadcasting university plays with university talent. Under the direction of Paul Fauteux, Peter Dobell, and Mel Breen, the workshop has expanded into an organization worthy of campus notice. The committee set up a workshop on the campus where recordings of broadcasts, voice testings, and other technical aspects of radio are studied.

Hart House Theatre

Robert Gill climaxed another successful year in the Hart House Theatre when he presented "Julius Caesar" before packed houses. During the year Mr. Gill presented three other plays to enthusiastic audiences. These plays were Wilder's "Skin Of Our Teeth", Chekhov's "Sea Gull," and Shaw's "Doctor Dilemma." Every type of play from Shakespearian tragedy to George Bernard Shaw's English comedy were presented by an all student cast.

Varsity Journalists' Pins Reward First Class Work

Adorning the lapels of the typical Varsity undergraduates are a variety of pins ranging from ones indicating membership in a political club to others indicating year and faculty. An observer, not indoctrinated in the significance of college pins, would form the opinion that the typical undergraduate is the most "joining" person in the world.

One pin that is rather uncommon among this colorful collection is The Varsity pin awarded to staff members of the undergraduate daily for journalistic work of a high calibre. The award was first made ten years ago and is usually limited to about a dozen a year.

The pin is about one quarter of an inch high. A blue "V" and the university coat of arms is superimposed on a white porcelain background. Around the pin run the words "The Varsity, The Undergraduate Daily". The distinctive little badge is becoming more and more of a familiar sight in Canadian newsrooms.

The awards are made on the basis of recommendations submitted to the editor by the heads of the various departments of the paper. Most of the pins are given to Varsity staffers who are in their graduating years.

Reflect World Transition In Year's Campus Debates

By J. A. YVON HABEL
News Editor

Standing on the threshold of the oratorical arena listening to the words still echoing in it, and at the same time listeping to the rhetorical murmuring of the outside world, seems to indicate that we, here on the campus, are part and parcel of the years of indecision through which the rest of the world is going through.

They are years of experimenting; years of re-orientation; years of confusion; years of hope; years of fear. We are part of this so-called transitional period. Transition from what? We are not too sure; it is still too close to us. Transition to what? . . . some fear . . . some rejoice.

The year in retrospect shows that our feeling of indecision is an active one and not passive. We are looking, in a trial and error fashion perhaps, but we are looking for a new solution.

Shift of Social Order

One thing seems sure. We are going through the greatest sociological transformation in centuries. As one speaker put it during the year, "the social order is shifting to other and different areas of the population. Years of suffering and insecurity have given a stronger determination to find a new solution."

Various and definite trends can be detected in our search for security. If we look for instance at the questions being brought up for debate and the topics chosen by the guest speakers during the year, this much stands out—Canada is only finding its true inward capabilities and is now attempting to reconcile it with the outward environment of international affairs.

Speakers with a prodigious power of eloquence, unfolded drapes of prose to the effect that, "Canada should join in a political union with the United States;" . . . "That Canada's social service plan is the best in the world;" . . . "that Canada should have a Bill of Rights;" . . . "That Canada should not send military aid to China;" . . . "that we deplore the condemnation of Cardinal Mindszenty;" . . . "that Canada is only an accessory in world affairs;" . . . "that Canada is not a U.S. satellite."

Fear Of War

All of which seems to indicate that Canada is running interference for the bigger countries and defending the smaller ones.

A certain amount of fear can be detected in the year's oratory. Over us hangs the pall of one haunting emotion—the dread spactre of a future war.

There seems to be no question as to what the issue will be. The question is—who is leading who into war and if possible, how can we prevent it. Socialism plays a very major part in this flow of oratory. For instance: "the trouble is, socialists don't trust their leaders;" . . . "Canadian socialism has a better understanding of liberal principles than Canadian liberalism;" . . . "a world union is the only solution to world problems and the best safeguard against war;" . . . "we should have compulsory military training;" . . . "Canada should provide adequate military protection for its people;" . . . "it is wiser to continue discussions, no matter how stupid they are rather than force the world into another war;" . . . "Communism should be outlawed from Canada;" . . . Marxism over-emphasizes scientific planning;" . . . "only in surrendering our national sovereignty can world security be gained;" . . . "the hopes of the world are on the U.N., it alone can give peace;" . . . "we should have a showdown with Russia;" . . . "the U.N. is a Capitalistic tool for war."

Red Deductions

And then we had some people who deduced the character of the university from the petty actions of small groups. "The University of Toronto is a hot-bed of communism," said Kirkconnell. "Balderdash!" said the student body, "I've been misquoted!" answered Kirkconnell. "Let's investigate the University to see if our children are being taught the democratic way of life," volunteered Controller Balfour.

The challenge of physical science undermining religious science and economic science undermining social science came into view this year with the University Christian Mission. "The direct challenges to the survival of hristianity are, over-emphasis on scientific planning and assertion that modern psychology can explain away religious phenomena."

Freedoms Upheld

Looking over the year as a whole, shows a reasonable amount of success. The classic freedoms, which are the rights of the individual were upheld on repeated occasion and if these mean anything in a democracy, why! we're the most democratic thing alive.

And now, after letting in the sea with this talk of freedom of this and that, all that remains to be seen is whether a day may come when it will be too late to check the flood by ordaining its limits.

Only time will tell.

Unearth Promising Talent Via Campus Publications

By PAT QUINN

"In spite of the short existence of The Reporter and the difficulty of the two-week time lag between issues, we feel we have succeeded in providing a badly-needed stimulus to journalism on the campus," said Virginia Nairn, The Reporter editor, this week. Her statement was in reply to the question: "What do you feel the Reporter has accomplished this year?"

Editors of the major campus publications were approached with similar questions and complied with varied and mainly favorable opinions.

New Writers Unearthed

Acta Victoriana editor Doug Fisher felt that his magazine had uncovered "promising writers" for next year, despite the controversial reception of the publication at Victoria this year.

New writing promise was also mentioned by Sam O'Hara of the St. Mike's Trireme executive. He reported a new society for writers had been formed through the Trireme.

"We are proudest of the fact we have published many interesting contributions from new writers," said Garry Clark of the UC Undergrad. "We are proud of their efforts and have been encouraged by the high quality of work received from people who have never written for us before."

Toike Oike Successful

Ed. Sokolowski, Editor of Toike Oike, the SPS organ, declared his staff felt that through Toike Oike, something the students liked had been produced, and that the paper as a whole had been appreciated even more than in the days of the Toike Oike as an annual magazine.

tory. The Lee collection, after years of preparation, was unveiled in Hart House. Two new buildings on the campus, begun in 1946, were opened to some classes. These are the Wallberg Memorial building and the modern Mechanical building.

After many years of attempt at staging, the All-Varsity Revue finally made its appearance on the campus.

NFCUS guaranteed itself years of existence over the Christmas holidays by refusing to link with IUS, the international counterpart of NFCUS, thereby knocking itself back to the position it was two years ago. The organization received a much-needed transfusion through the work of its new National President, Gordon Gwynne-Timothy.

We also had our share of excitement and police hunts. Will the Dean of Canterbury be allowed to speak on the campus? . . . Will June Baker be found? . . . Will Professor McPherson be found? . . . Will Controller Balfour investigate the university?

A decisive step was taken in the direction of national unity and understanding. The Carabin weekend and the subsequent return visit of our university jolted many of us to the realization that Canada is much bigger than the province of Ontario.

A new newspaper, "The Reporter", made its appearance on the campus with a threat of court action on the heels of its first issue. An auxiliary fighter squadron, affiliated with the R.C.A.F., was organized on the campus. Radio took a few steps forward by opening a radio workshop.

A link with the past was kept. Professor Satterey, the showman of the campus, gave his yearly liquid lecture. The classic chariot race took place with a new twist added, merely for attraction. Skule had its cannon stolen by Meds and Meds lost their society president to Skule.

U.C. It's This Way

By HAL ROSENTHAL

After spending four years at U.C. it comes as a sort of shock to realize that one is finally leaving the old college and that everything that has been so much fun and so important to one, will soon become just so many pleasant memories. And yet it is a consolation to know that we'll always be able to hold onto these memories, and that thus we'll always carry the spirit of our days at University College in our hearts:

Things—we'll—never—forget:

The football games—on cold, clear—fall days: with the girls in fur coats—the pennants—the colour and excitement—the rye and rah-rah . . . The crazy, wild football week-ends—staying up all night on the train—the singing and laughter—the tremendous celebrations—win or lose—where every body is everybody else's buddy . . . Sitting on the U. C. steps—in the warm days of early term—doing nothing in particular—just filled with lazy, contented feelings that we'll probably never recapture . . . Strolling along philosopher's path with your favorite play-mate, you probably met her at a Red and White night—or at a tea dance—or in the library line-up—or at the Soph Frosh Banquet . . . The violence and fury of the U. C. parliament debates—where you first realized that you weren't such a tremendous orator that you thought you were—University is a lot different from high-school . . . The wonderful hours spent discussing Kinsey, Drew, Marx, over coffee at Hart House . . . Also the discovery that beer and pleasant conversation are good mixers . . . The music and beauty of the Follies and the great kick that the kids who participate get out of the show . . . The guys or girls congregating in the rotunda on a Saturday morning . . . The campus on a winter evening . . . The end-of-the-world feeling that comes when the fence goes up . . . The Hart House and Player's Guild productions . . . The hoop-la and back slapping of election days . . . the pep rallys, the homecoming weekends and Joe Potts . . . The bewilderment felt while trying to find the right room in the U. C. labyrinth during the hectic freshmen days . . . the Open "Lit" meetings that lasted until 1:30 a.m. . . . The gang around the Junior Common Room . . . The thrill you got out of the big dance of the year—the Arts Ball—when you were a freshman . . . The hundreds of people you met here—all types, all characters . . . your professor's efforts to clear a pathway through a forest of knowledge . . . standing in line—to register, to pay your fees, to buy tickets, to eat at Hart House . . . The mingled feelings of surprise and relief when you see your name in the paper in June or July.

And so we say "thanks for the memories." Maybe these aren't the things one should remember after four years of University training. Still they are the things which I remember and cherish. Never try to explain to people who don't go to university your feelings about your college. They won't understand. Just realize that these have been the "best years of our lives" and that we'll never be able to quite duplicate them. It's been a wonderful experience.

Good luck and best wishes from Joyce Smale and yours truly to all of you.

Consolidation Of Position On Campus Was Goal Of NFCUS National Program

By JACK GRAY

The National Federation of Canadian University Students had a good year. Both on this campus and on the national scene NFCUS made concrete contributions to the student welfare. Not content to rest on past achievements they forged ahead with a full and active program.

The biggest news item that NFCUS supplied during the year was the much discussed, controversial issue of affiliation with The International Union of Students. Having decided in 1947 to affiliate, NFCUS found last fall that her affiliation proposal had been rejected by IUS at their Council meeting in Paris last summer.

Confusion reigned over the problem, and across Canada students asked why we had not been allowed to affiliate. Those sections of student opinion opposed to the move seized the opportunity to have affiliation thrown out.

They were successful. At the Christmas Conference, held in Montreal, NFCUS decided not to affiliate with IUS this year. Observers will be sent this summer to the IUS Congress to re-investigate the possibility of affiliation.

The fiasco of affiliation dealt with, NFCUS got down to problems closer home. In a move to strengthen the Federation they expanded the national program, hoping to show Canadian students that they had concrete benefits to offer.

In four fields they have taken great strides. The whole exchange program was examined and revitalized. Canadian-American Exchange came first. Although students on this campus are unable at present to participate in the scheme, it gives to students at ten Canadian universities an opportunity to spend a year studying at an American University.

Regional Exchange, which allows Canadian students to spend a year at another Canadian university has been plugged. Many students are expected to take part in the plan this year.

The travel service which NFCUS set up to take Canadian students to Europe next summer ran into some difficulty. At least 70 Canadian students will benefit from this service however. Some will go to Europe by ship, and others will travel by plane.

Two aspects of student life which have been severely criticized in recent years were investigated by NFCUS. The problem of the high price of text books was examined by the Toronto Committee. It resulted in the NFCUS brief, which the Students' Administrative Council used as the basis for a report to university authorities here; and on the national level the investigation is proceeding in an attempt to have action taken by large publishers to reduce the price of texts.

The other investigation was on the problem of University fees. Still in the works, this investigation will result in a brief to be presented to the Federal Government, probably at the time of the Annual Conference next September. The Conference will be held in Ottawa.

These four large programs stand as an indication of the work that NFCUS is doing, and point the path to future endeavours.

Hollywood Has Its Oscars Campus Shows Get Praise

By HARRY Q. RASKY

This was a good year for college shows.

Before we get branded as prejudiced, let us outline what we think makes a good college show.

A college show at best is original from beginning to end; its theme is experimentation. Clever satire would be sprinkled with visual humor. Music should be original both in lyrics and melody. Dancing should not include can-cans.

Well, enough editorialising.

We do not intend to attempt a comparison of the many musicals. Each faculty operated under conditions peculiar to itself, with different handicaps and advantages. It is possible, however, to indicate the best in each.

The year opened with the traditional Vic Bob. It was strictly for Vics. Like many college shows it didn't know when to pull its curtain. However, it had good lyrics, and it introduced Jewison—a fine comedian.

The U.C. Follies was a well-balanced show which introduced interpretive dancing combined with excellent lighting. The first student-written piano concerto to be interpreted in dance was presented. It was an experiment in sound and motion, and it abounded in satire.

Dentantics was a show based on talent. The busy Dents offered the best quartette of the year.

Daffydil, as far as we are concerned, remained among the unseen. They didn't send us tickets.

The All-Varsity Revue was born this year. It was a bit too long but was good entertainment at all times. The best single act of the year was Ben Foreman's parody on modern singers. The brightest satirical song of the year, "Toronto, Toronto", was the high spot of the show.

PHE's Health's-a-poppin' was a fast moving episode. It was the only show of the year to use a-laugh-a-scene curtains. The best comedy dance of the year was "Penguins at the Waldorf". The show featured fresh dance routines and threw in Al Goodman besides.

Skule Nite was as lavish as a de-Mille production. It had the brightest opening of the year, and an atomic-like machine. The scenery was well done.

The Trinity people had by far the cleverest show of the year. MacMillan and Bryden's lyrics were as briskly satirical as an Ogden Nash poem. Direction was excellent.

The season ended with the Spectacle last Tuesday, and, in an extra-campus way, the Frat and the Fiddle on Wednesday.

this year has confirmed our belief that the student is interested in intellectual stimulation," stated Steve McWilliams, acting editor of the Forum. "The Forum has presented topics of intellectual interest not covered in other student publications on the campus, and through them has endeavored to present a Christian viewpoint."

Dryest comment came from Tony Wallace, editor of the Trinity University Review. He said:

"The main accomplishment of The Review this year was to manage to exist under the misguided criticism of the College as a whole."

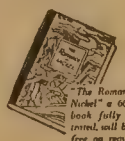
60 YEARS OF ACCOMPLISHMENT

1889 1949

The blacksmith of 1889 forged a great variety of articles with hammer and anvil and the strength of his brawny arm. Today a giant forging hammer rains 50-ton blows on the anvil. A hammer made of ordinary metals could not stand the strain or vibration. So Nickel Steel and Nickel Cast Iron are used to provide extra strength and durability.

Nickel Brings Dollars to Canada

Since more than ninety per cent of the Nickel produced in Canada is sold to the United States and other countries, it brings a constant flow of dollars back to Canada. In fact, Canada's Nickel industry is one of our chief sources of U.S. dollars so essential at the present time to maintain our foreign trade and make available products not produced in this country.



These dollars help pay the wages of the 14,000 Nickel employees, and help provide the dollars which make it possible to pay millions in freight to Canadian railways, to buy timber, steel, coal, machinery and supplies amounting to many millions each year.

These millions, flowing into all industries through the length and breadth of Canada, help create jobs for Canadians.

PHE Women Clean Up In 'Mural Sport

PHE almost made a grand slam in intramural sports this year. They won everything except the tennis, skiing and bowling, and most of their wins were decisive victories. The titles they won were basketball, badminton, softball, hockey, volleyball, swimming and golf. Quite a total.

The biggest victory for PHE was, perhaps, the hockey. Vic has won the hockey cup for the last six years and hung onto it grimly until the last play of the playoff game. Actually Vic won this second playoff game but the Fizz Edders graduated to the championship by virtue of their five goals to Vic's four.

The baseball was no cinch either. Again their stumbling block was Vic who nicked them 15-14 in the first playoff game. After this loss the Fizz Edders came smashing back to win two sweeping victories 18-3 and 22-3, and retain the title they had taken from Vic the year before.

PHE III had a tough fight throughout the basketball schedule and almost lost in the semi-finals. It took an overtime period to give them a 27-18 victory over the never-say-die UC Sophs. After this near-upset they had an easier time in the finals, downing Physio 25-10 to claim the basketball crown that OCE wore last year.

At the beginning of the recent swim meet it looked as if Vic would pull ahead and take it but the Fizz Edders had different ideas. They placed in nine out of the ten events, winning seven firsts and breaking a record while they were at it, to top the meet with a comfortable 40 points to Vic's 24.

Elizabeth Russell and Pat Montgomery, both Fizz Edders, were the finalists in the badminton tournament so it's no wonder the athletic faculty nabbed the badminton title along with all the others.

The PHE volleyball team waltzed through the semi-finals by a colossal and unprintable score and led UC throughout the final game, winning 33-25 to add another championship to their big pile.

Whew! That sums up PHE's great sweep of the athletic boards. It presents a challenge to the other faculties and colleges to put forth their best efforts next year to see if they can better this athletic faculty at their own game, for come next fall, these Fizz Edders will be out to win not only the sports they dominated this year but all the others as well.

Trinity Won Tennis UC Took Skiing

This year the women's intramural tennis championship was by Trinity again. The singles champion was Pat Coburn of Trinity.

Although Anne Sharpe, PHE, won the Proudfoot Cup, the intramural ski title was carried off by U.C.

Vic triumphed in the bowling meet.

Basketball, Hockey, Tennis Blue Intercollegiate Titles

The big victory in intercollegiate sport this year was the recapture of the Bronze Baby, emblem of basketball supremacy. The Blues won three close games to edge out Western, their top rivals, and win back the 'Babe' from Queen's.

This was the first post-war year that Varsity sported a women's hockey team and they did a wonderful job of cleaning up on first McGill (15-0) and then Queen's (10-1).

The tennis team tied with McGill for top spot and later on in the year the badminton team tied with McGill for the second slot just one thin point behind Western. These same Redwomen were the ones who took the swim meet, edging Toronto 28-25 in Montreal.

Another team that won all games was the All-Varsity volleyball who defeated McMaster twice in a row. The archery team, who went to Hamilton with the volleyball team on Wednesday, won this exhibition match again 'Mac' but only rated fourth in the fall archery meet there, even though Bernice Muir shot the second highest total of the day.

The skiing team raced second to Middlebury, Connecticut, in the McGill meet, but nevertheless this was a good showing; Pat Ellard came in third.

Girl Sports Reps Voted For Tues.

Any woman who has participated in a sport can vote for the university rep for that sport. The elections will be held on Tuesday in the Women's SAC office, Room 62, UC basement. The reps to be voted on are badminton, basketball, skiing, softball, swimming and volleyball.

SWIMMING

Anyone interested in trying out for the intercollegiate swimming team 1949-50 may see Miss Baxter any Thursday from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. up to and including April 7, at the LM pool.

on the sideline

By JOAN EDDIS Women's Sports Editor

I couldn't finish off a wonderful year of sports without opening my big mouth and doing a bit of kibitzing.

First of all we must say orchids to Fizz Ed. You can't just look at their list of achievements and say "Oh, they SHOULD be good at sports. They play them all the time." Maybe they do, but it takes more than that to pull down almost all the intramural championships.

The Fizz Edders did it by hard-work, by enthusiasm, by fight to the end. And they're good sports. Every one of them. They cleaned up this year and deserved to by their prowess in both sports and sportsmanship.

Congrats, Fizz Ed.

At last Physio and OT are eligible for intercollegiate teams. Thanks to the broadmindedness of the smaller universities, these hardworking gals can (and will) make the intercollegiate grade next year.

And that isn't all.

The restrictions on Fizz Edders have been slackened a bit. (Speaking of slack, let's hope Miss Slack is back on her feet soon.) Now a four man team can carry two gals from PHE.

We can't close without paying a tribute to Meds. These kids have some of the longest hours on the campus and their numbers are very small, but this year they turned out top-notch teams in hockey, baseball and basketball, to mention a few. These three teams all made the playoffs and in all three cases they were edged by very close scores when they threatened to upset the favorites.

Easy Losers

the contestants. Cross-eyed Bigelow of the losers had to be helped off the ice after counting his fourth marker on a difficult one-hand pivot shot which had Seive McCool in the hoop beaten all the way.

McCool did rise to the occasion a moment later to bat down a ricochet shot which banked off the backcourt to light the big sign. With only seconds left in the scansion, McKeeste got a breakaway on and deked the Seals guardian from between the pipes to blast a hard shot into the northeast corner of the strings.

Scoring:

Cantos 1-9 no scoring on the field.

Penalties: Walt Penoux (roughing) and 5 minutes for manslaughter.

10. Big Bigelow 2 drufes and a globber (7 points).

11. McKeester high note on the G string plus two hoochias 5 points.

The results of the Acta Victoriana Contest have been made known and should appear elsewhere in this edition of The Varsity. The judges (Dr. McLuhan from St. Mike's, Mr. Blissett of U.C. and Professor Woodside), considered that the contributions were generally fair. The contest issue of Acta will soon be out, at which time you may evaluate for yourself the merits of these literary efforts. Next year the contest will get under way earlier with the same $75 in prizes.

Whether or not Victoria would have been happier on the Old Ontario Strand (at Cobourg) will be debated on Monday evening at 8 p.m. in Alumni Hall by members of the faculty. Needless to say this is the highlight of the Parliament's activities. In addition to the regular agenda the finals for the Thompson Impromptu Debates will be judged and the winners presented with the beautiful trophy recently donated by Mrs. Thompson.

A situation like this is the perfect excuse for anyone with literary delusions to overflow in waves of purple nostalgia, in looking back at the year that is just closing. We will try to avoid the purple writing, but we can't help a few reminiscences on all that has happened since last September.

A lot has been written in Vic's Corner concerning every kind of event at the college. And as we glance over some back numbers (yes, we do keep them, for sentiment's sake, you know), these come vividly to mind:

"Among our souvenirs" we see the Howdy Hop, with a Skuleman carrying off the spot dance prize. The Community Chest drive, with Vic putting a feather in its cap. A cold fall day, with Vic in the football finals against the Saints, who turned out to be our gremlins instead. Pursuits in search of culture brought us "Iolanthe", "The Man Who Came to Dinner" and "Five Hundred Years of Music". And of course we remember the Vic-at-Home, with a square yard of dancing room a prized possession. At last we see the elections, with their oratory and propaganda, and our thoughts turn from this year to the next.

Yes, a lot has been written, and a lot has been said and done this year at Vic. And as we look beyond the imminent gloom of exams to what lies in the future, it might be wise to bear in mind a few words of an old poet-acquaintance of ours:

"Whatever hath been written shall remain
Nor be erased nor written o'er again;
The unwritten only still belongs to thee
Take heed, and ponder well what that shall be."

Helen, Stan. "13".

Let's LOOK at it!

BASICS IN NAVY are the choice of a girl who lives a busy life. Navy fits everywhere, is always compatible with accessories, can lend itself to a dozen personality changes. Northways are featuring three beauties with long sleeves, each with separate detail, but each styled for the busy woman who simply does not have time to indulge in changes of costume during the day. Fashionland, Northways third floor.

NEW UNDERCOAT SUITS at the Evangeline Shops come in fine worsted Celanese Rayon and Woodwind fabrics . . . priced at between between 19.95 and 29.50 . . . they can be worn immediately and will carry right through spring and early summer. New crepe blouses in high-neck styles to pair off with the suit are only 3.98 and very suavely tailored. Incidentally remember the uptown stores are open Friday and Saturday evenings till 9 p.m.

EASTER AND MOTHER'S DAY AHEAD . . . both of them flower-giving days, and you'll find Jerry Cooper's Park Plaza Shop all a-glow with suitable give-flowers at the approach of those events. Any day in the week you'll also find gift-inspiration for the girl who likes the extra things. Jerry will work you up something quite different in the way of a corsage, and she'll love it. Watch that look in her eyes.

THE SUIT NEWS is good at Joan Rigby's. Choose yourself a classic that can provide perennial flattery and no matter how conservative your taste happens to be you can go a little berserk with color in accessories this new season. Which reminds me to remind you that the Joan Rigby accessory counter is still headquarters for the sort of accessories that keep on building up a suit's fashion i. q. even when worn to a last final shred.

ACME FARMER'S TUDOR ICE CREAM is a better ice cream, made of finer and more expensive ingredients. And for a superior dessert, well-balanced as to flavor, velvet-smooth as to texture, but beyond these two qualities, digestible because the ingredients are pure. You can't do better every day in the week than Tudor. Remember, it comes in a carton not a brick. The ideal take-home treat.

TEN PERCENT OFF marked price on suits and topcoats is your inducement to shop for same at Teasdall's, 804 Yonge Street. And with nobody being fooled by all this sudden winter snow, campus men are earnestly availing themselves of this opportunity to save an honest penny. Teasdall's is a man's shop, run by a man who knows the college trade, likes the things you like.

IF YOUR ENGAGEMENT RING comes in a Scheuer box, it's the pretty way he has of telling you that the ring has not been purchased on a long-range basis. In other words there are no un-paid installments on the cuff. Scheuer's have two ring values at one hundred dollars each, one in a three-stone ring, the other in a solitarie, which they have long considered a special opportunity for ring hunters. They are Canada's oldest diamond house. 131 Yonge St., facing Temperance.

COTTONS ARE IN F. J. WATT'S . . . and even now in sleet and snow, gals are casting admiring glances. School dresses are a big department at Watt's at the moment, and vary in fabric but always carry with them their own story of quiet distinction. Imported fabrics make up an interesting new array of tweed suits, priced at only around 35.00, thereby a good opportunity to procure a several season suit at a very moderate price.

Bailey's Blues Hold Second Spot

By HAL HOLDEN

The 1948-49 Senior Intercollegiate hockey season was not a complete success for Varsity Blues. After capturing the Intercollegiate title and the Queen's Cup for two years in succession the Blues relinquished the champion's crown this year to the flashing Frenchmen from University of Montreal.

Yet Varsity did not slide too far back down the ladder as Ace Bailey's spirited bunch hung grimly to the second rung which they tenanted most of the season and fought off a late rush by McGill.

The Carabins were undoubtedly the best hockey team in the league. They possessed speed, ability and balance, a combination that carried them through the season with only two losses in 12 games. One of these setbacks was at the hands of the Blues in the local league opener. The other was to McGill in their 'Carabin's' final game.

Although Varsity had to be content with second place the team was not without players who individually were top performers throughout the loop.

Bill Spence, fast-breaking left winger finished in a tie for second place in the scoring parade with 25 points.

Paul Hutzulak was easily the best netminder in the league after Boston knocked Jack Gelineau out of the McGill nets with a well-aimed roll of bills. Had Gelineau remained it is quite possible Hutz would have wound up with a better goals-against average than the Montreal star.

It would be possible to give all the Blues a boost but they don't need it. The Carabins might have had a better team but the Blues had a better heart, they never stopped trying.

Moose Factory Board Dickers For Stevens

Moose Factory, Ont., March 10—(Special to The Varsity by dog-team, canoe and airspeed service to Aklavik) — It was unanimously decided by the governing board of the Moose Factory Normal School, in session here tonight, to offer the position of director of calisthenics and joordl-ball to Coach Warren Stevens of the University of Toronto. No final decision was reached on the question of salary but it was thought that payment would probably have to be made in homogenized caribou milk.

Ed. Note: Attempts to contact Stevens for comment on the offer from Moose Factory Normal School were unsuccessful tonight. He was reported to be searching downtown War Surplus stores for dog harness.

Women's JUNIOR T's

This year there were 41 Junior T's awarded as follows:—

Sr. Cage Blues Second To Western—Again

By ED. VOIGHT

Bob Masterson's cage Blues blew hot and cold all year; the one serious drawback of this fact is that in the games against Western, obviously the team to beat for the Senior Intercollegiate honours, the Blues were, to say the least, not too "hot."

Here in Toronto, the Blues just couldn't get untracked against the Mustangs, went down to defeat, 42-37. In London, the Blues got every bad break possible — nevertheless lost only by the comparatively small margin of 10 points.

I believe that I can safely say that big Bob Masterson was the unhappiest man in London on Friday, Feb. 18. Bob had high expectations (not without foundation) of knocking off the Mustangs, but it just seemed that the fates were against Toronto that night.

The Western game, from a Varsity angle, was the climax of the season. The Blues had concentrated everything for the London game but the Toronto loss just means that the old adage concerning Western cage teams that "we'll just have to wait till next year," comes into force again.

The Blues reached their peak perfection against Assumption and continued their best playing of the season against the University of Buffalo. Toronto won both these contests, but never reached such heights in league games.

As for the team personnel, most important of all is the return of Masterson, a fact of certainty now Players Wally Zeaton, Nick Volpe, and likely Bill LaChance will not be back next year. Bill Stockman and Doug Tyndall are in the doubtful class, although Tyndall would like to return to this hallowed seat of learning. The remaining players of this year's crew will all be back.

The loss of Adam Smalley at the beginning of the year was another tough break, for the Blues. Obviously Masterson deserves credit for guiding a weakened team to the four won-two lost record the Blues rang up.

Mert McKeown and Ray Ryan split the honors each pushing in 13 points for the Mikemen. Both turned in sterling efforts around the Physed basket. The double blue cagers, however, found their foes' zone defence hard to crack and were not as pro'icient in set shooting. Gino Genise, diminutive PHE forward, piled up ten points, all in the second half.

COLE SCAN

We were never really so much aware of the thick cloak of secrecy that covers our atomic projects here in Canada until the other day. Apparently, the scientists and others engaged in this deadly work are ever on the alert for the prying eye and the flapping tongue. This caution even exists among the workers themselves as this incident will demonstrate. It all began with the arrival on the job of an unusually suspicious looking worker. With his straight, dark hair and heavy, black eyebrows he was immediately watched. His thick-lensed glasses and peering eyes only heightened the aura of suspicion around him. Combined iwth his spy-like appearance he was possessed of an extraordinary naivete and asked many innocent questions. Of course, he never got any answers, even to his simplest questions, and one day while giving out a small sigh he collapsed to the floor. Ever watchful, fourteen workmen immediately surrounded him, holding various weapons and wearing menacing looks. It was a dangerous time, almost lunch hour. Despairingly, the exhausted suspect looked up at his fellow workers, "Please," he barely whispered, "I'm starving, won't somebody please tell me where to go for lunch."

Digby, Hutz Rate Star Selections

All-star awards in Intercollegiate hockey were handed out by those who should know, yesterday. The selections were made by two groups, one representative of the sports division of the fourth estate, and the other comprised of the league's four coaches.

Paul Hutzulak and Wilf Digby of the Varsity team were chosen by both groups as worthy of a first-team berth.

Sportswriters' Selections:
First team	Position	Second team
Hutzulak	G	Gelineau
Laperriere	D	Gariepy
Digby	D	Bouchard
Sinclair	C	Murray
Emblem	F	Henry
Charest	F	Spence

Beloved Coach

Hec Phillips, renowned Canadian track coach who died last fall from an incurable cancer illness. Hec was head track coach at the University of Toronto since 1933, as well as being an instructor in Physical education. He was the outstanding track coach in Canada and contributed immeasurably to the education of all undergraduates with whom he came in contact.

Come And Get It Johnny Metras Says Bob

In a telephone conversation last night with Bob Masterson, The Varsity learned his reaction to Johnny Metras's statements at an Alumni Banquet Wednesday. Mr. Metras was reported to have said that he would bring the Yates Cup back to Western next year.

When The Varsity asked Mr. Masterson if Johnny Metras was a liar Bob replied "Well I wouldn't want to call him a liar, but anyone who would make such a statement so early in the year is a sucker."

"I would never stick my neck out so far as that," continued Mr. Masterson, "and I think he is getting ahead of himself there. The place to decide these things is on the football field, not in front of a crowd of Alumni."

"It is much better to say nothing and act on the field. It has been my experience that if you talk about it too much nothing is done and nothing comes of all the talk. I know that my boys will be determined to keep all that silverware here, and if Metras wants to get it he can just come ahead and try."

However next season may come out, The Varsity is sure it will be a rip-snorter and that Bob will be in there pitching to win.

Renovate Stands If Costs Permit

Forecaster

Warren Stevens, director of athletics, took time off from his multitudinous duties yesterday to view the Varsity sports scene, past, present, and future. Results of his crystal-ball-gazing are in adjoining column.

By HANK WESTCOTT
Sports Editor

There'll be a little more elbow room for the hordes invading Varsity Stadium next fall if present provisional plans of the Athletic Directorate are carried out.

Nine new sections will be tacked onto the present stands this summer if a reasonable building estimate is forthcoming, Warren Stevens, director of athletics, said yesterday. The additions will increase seating capacity to about 24,000.

"These new sections were on the drawing boards in 1924," commented Stevens, "but the need wasn't imperative until recently. Unfortunately costs have prohibited the extension until now. We are hoping we can get a reasonable price this summer."

The extension of the concrete bowl would add six sections on the north end and three on the south. The present covered stand would not be touched. "A renovation of the covered stands is on the books for the future," Stevens said, "but no definite plans have been drawn up.

Arena Touched Up Too

"In the summer of 1950 we expect to place a new cement floor in the arena," Stevens went on as he visualized Varsity's sporting future. "With that floor we could hold anything from basketball games to convocations in the arena. We could up the 4,800 hockey capacity to 6,500 for basketball with floor seats."

"Someday I hope to see an entire new building between the arena and the museum. It would contain, according to plans already suggested, basketball and squash courts, a swimming pool, and other facilities.

But that would cost about $1,500,000. "We may have to wait a while," Stevens remarked euphemistically. Turing the script to sports, the director mentioned that last year, "winning the football title just about eclipsed everything else. I don't want to jinx the team with predictions, but I think we have at least a 50-50 chance to repeat next term.

"I look for an improvement in hockey and basketball, but after all, winning championships isn't essential."

But it helps, Mr. Stevens, it helps.

And in football, Bob Masterson may have a few difficulties come football time. With several of the mainstays of last year's title-winning club like Ian Clarke, Tommy Waldon, Ted Toogood, and Nick Volpe graduating, there will be a number of new faces in the lineup. Masterson has more than a nodding acquaintance with some of the newcomers who are bound to turn up. Guys like Bill Brewer and Bob Garside from the last year's intermediate team, plus others from the interfaculty loop. For the rest of the gaps, Masterson may be playing eenie-meenie-minie-moe.

But there aren't many Varsity fans who doubt that Masterson will turn up with another championship cluub. Buff up that Yates Cup gentlemen.

Marlies, Varsity Vie For Good Humor Cup

The Varsity Junior Bees of the OHA Junior 'B' league will finish off a resounding season to-night when they go at the Marlboros in the final game of the series for the group championship and the Good Humour Cup. The last two games were won by small margins and were rough, hard affairs.

The Bees ended up on top of the heap in first place and waited a week and a half till the semi-finals between Marlies and the Corner Boys were placed. The Dukes won the round and went into the finals.

Jack Raftis, winger, led the league in the scoring department, with Porky MacDougall and Artie Holmes breathing down his neck. In spite of the fact that the Bees beat the Dukes four out of five they will have plenty of trouble Friday.

Coach Bill Wade, who has done a fine mentor's job, went out on the limb somewhat when he prophesied "We should win on the basis of past performance, but hockey being what it is the team that is hottest will win."

M. Crandall, of Residence 723, the Gilley Trophy for Best All-Around Athlete.

Cups Doled Out At Ajax Banquet

The fourth and final Ajax Division Athletic Banquet was held in the cafeteria last Monday with 450 athletes and guests present, and R. W. Clark, President of the Athletic Association as Chairman. John "Ox" DaGrossa, BS, LLB, PED, President of the American Football Institute and Assistant Football Coach at Temple U., was Guest Speaker.

Walter Tarasick, on behalf of teams representing Residence 730, accepted the Sidney E. Smith Cup for the best All-Around Residence, the Cody Cup for Soccer, the Memorial Trophy Class 1921 for Hockey and Skiing.

Commuters won the Barbour Memorial Trophy for Basketball and the Golf and Swimming Championships; Residence 725 took the Wright Bowling Trophy; and Residence 724 won the Hearst Trophy for Track and the Perry Trophy for Harrier. Individual winners were W. W. Gray, of Residence 724, Harrier Award, and T.

Year's Sports Through Rose-Colored Bottles

By BRIAN LAND

No coverage of 1948-49 Varsity sports would be complete without a re-ume of the highlights of the season. Herewith follow some of the more unforgettable moments.

We'll never forget the time:

When Harold Spears, ace intercollegiate fencer and known to his intimates as Harry the Hack, neatly decapitated an opponent in the heat of battle. Charles Walters, fencing master, declared it was the cleanest bit of sword-play he had ever witnessed, but admonished the corpse for failing to cry "touche.". "Very bad form", said Walters, "must have lost his head".

When John Metras revealed that Western would forsake football which he termed "nasty and brutish" in favour of character building games. Metras further predicted that the Mustangs were a shoo-in for their second straight drop-the-hanky title and pointed out that they would have a strong contender in Chinese checkers.

When Gunga Dhin, brilliant exchange student from the U. of Bombay raced 105 yards against Western before 21,000 delirious fans in Varsity Stadium, only to spill the water-bucket when he tripped over the goal-line.

* * *

Or the time when Joan S (for Sure-shot) Eddis, women's Sports Editor, brought The Varsity its first Intercollegiate championship since before the war when she won the marbles crown. Miss Eddis attributed her win to clean living.

When Izzie Fleetfoot, a Hart House cashier, set a new indoor track record as he outdistanced the Head Dietician around Great Hall after being caught dipping into the petty cash. The record is not official, however, as Fleetfoot's action mars his amateur standing.

When Ace Bailey attempted to trade two defencemen and a forward line in exchange for Ferne Watson of the Senior Women's champs. Watson refused to talk contract since she is still dickering with the Rangers.

* * *

Or when two players were overcome in the squash pits by a stream of fresh air. They were quickly revived when a passing PHE student had the foresight to waft an old sock under their noses. "There are some things to which even we squashmen never quite harden", a spokesman said.

When the Sailing Club's annual regatta was marred by near tragedy as their only craft, a three-man cat-boat, struck a stray swimmer on a voyage across Toronto Bay and slowly settled to the bottom as the crew lined the quarter deck and sang "Old Toronto."

* * *

When the Intermediate hockey sextet (you'll pardon the expression) won its fourth straight title and the crowd rose as one man (he thought Barkers were playing) and gave them a rousing ovation.

* * *

Or when One-Punch Pesky, ex-Golden Gloves boxing champ, won the gamest loser award at Athletic Night in Hart House. Although belted out of the ring into the courtyard beyond, the dazed but game Pesky arose and slugged it out toe to toe with Jason, the yard's bronze figure, until mercifully led away by his handlers.

* * *

When the Wrestling Club was awarded its new crest. Two grapplers in black and blue couchant on a mat of tattle tale gray, the whole surrounded by cauliflower ears and bearing the Latin inscription "Per arm-lockum ad victoriam". Free translation: "Say Uncle".

* * *

When it was established that H. G. Westcott, caught red-handed entering the Main Library, was not seeking knowledge but the Men's powder room, thus keeping his "never read a book" record intact.

When Doug "Free" Love, reputedly one of the cleverest ball handlers on the SAC, ran hog-wild against The Varsity in their annual basketball game and scored four points.

When the Western Mustangs unanimously voted Johnny Shore the most gentlemanly player in the Intercollegiate loop. The resolution was moved by Wardle and seconded by Jarvie. "I know I don't deserve it", said John shyly, "but what's my opinion against that of thousands of my admirers?"

* * *

When R. B. Land was cited in sports dispatches for devotion to duty, distinktive reporting, ability to turn out pithy copy, and for refusal to be swerved by the trivial, the meaningless and the unimportant. As a result the paper has acquired a certain air which it will be hard to overcome in years to come.

* * *

When three C & F men were arrested at the annual chariot race for attempting to run a bookie exchange.

When it was announced by the Athletic Office that next year students would be subsidized for attendance at football games. "We're really flush with the green stuff around here. Gotta' get rid of it somehow."

* * *

When Lief the Lucky Bjarnensen was roundly scored at an open meeting of the Ski Club for gelandesprunging his vorlage in the Club's chalet in the foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia.

Elect Student Reps As Athletic Heads

In the annual elections of the University of Toronto Athletic Directorate yesterday the following were elected as student representatives: Art Anderson, III P.H.E., Jim Crang, IV Architecture, Jack Evans, Meds I, Jack Gray, P.H.E., Archie Jones, Forestry III. Anderson and Jones were members last year.
